HOTEL IMPERIAL

Cossacks!

Out of the riotous welter of war, love, and empire-shaking intrigue, roars this giant melodrama—HOTEL IMPERIAL!

Trapped!

POLA NEGRI'S

greatest, by far!

Produced by a brilliant director whose name will resound throughout the land—Mauritz Stiller. Supervised by the master mind who made "Variety"—Erich Pommer. With James Hall, George Siegmann and a cast of 1,500.

Hit of the Year at the long run Rialto, New York

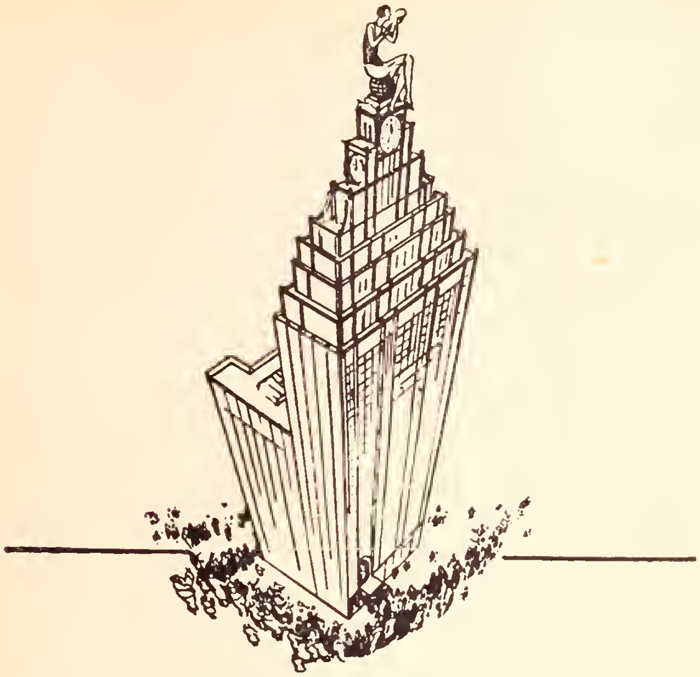
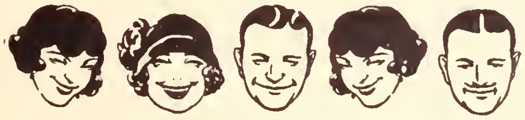
new group of 39 history-makers!

The Escape



Bebe Daniels (bless her fascinating ways) in "STRANDED IN PARIS" did the biggest Saturday and Sunday business at the new Paramount Theatre, N.Y.!



Folks laughed who have never laughed before!

"Better even than 'The Campus Flirt'," roared the customers.

The critic of the New Yorker (and how tough that baby usually is!) said:

"I nominate Bebe Daniels as leading screen comedienne."

As if that hadn't been seconded and carried unanimously long ago!

In answer to inquiries, the name of the pup in "Stranded in Paris" is LAFAYETTE and Paramount has him signed for five years.

BEBE DANIELS in "STRANDED IN PARIS" with James Hall, Ford Sterling, Iris Stuart. Directed by Arthur Rosson. From the play "Jenny's Escapade" by Hans Bachwitz and Fritz Jokobstetter. Adaptation by Herman J. Mankiewicz and John McDermott. Screen play by Ethel Doherty and Louise Long.

RIGHT NOW!
WARNER WINNERS
that are getting the big money!

RIGHT NOW—exhibitors who booked the Warner Winners are congratulating themselves. They're getting the cream of the year's pictures—box-office knockouts, every one of them.

In theatre after theatre, the story is the same—record crowds, record runs, record receipts.

The keenest showmen in the country—big circuits and little—find their judgment justified. The Warner Winners are clicking merrily—to the tune of greater profits for every exhibitor who is playing them.

Great stories—great stars—great directors! All proving up one hundred per cent strong in pictures produced by showmen for showmen.

Read what some exhibitors are saying about the current releases.

Interior of the new Palace-Orpheum Theatre, Chicago, Ill., showing the installation of Chair OC 435, especially built by us to the specifications of Rapp and Rapp, Architects, and C. C. Hamilton.

MAKING PROFITS FOR THE PALACE

THE owners of the Palace-Orpheum in Chicago overlooked no details in the building of this beautiful theatre. When it came to choosing the seats, they were equally particular, for they realized that proper seating helps to make good money for any show house. The Orpheum Circuit selected Heywood-Wakefield chairs and is pleased with the installation—which indicates that our seats are doing what was expected, i. e., helping to make profits for the Palace.

Our seating experts will be glad to serve you. A note to the nearest H-W warehouse will bring an experienced man without charge.

If you have not yet received a copy of our Theatre Seating Catalogue, write for it.

PROCLAMATION

TO THE STAFF OF EDUCATIONAL FILM EXCHANGES, INC.

WHEREAS, the great primary object of the Motion Picture is to provide entertainment for the masses; and,

Whereas, a good, hearty laugh is the richest ingredient of any entertainment, and a good comedy a most essential part of any motion picture program; and,

Whereas, the motion picture industry, the picture loving public, and the entire nation will be happier and more prosperous in 1927 by cultivating the habit of laughing,

Now, therefore, I, E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., do hereby decree that, January having been set apart as Laugh Month, all employes of Educational Film Exchanges shall participate heartily in the celebration of this Laugh Month; that they shall for their own good take every opportunity to enjoy a hearty laugh; and that they shall exert every effort to help others to do likewise; and I do hereby invite all other persons, particularly motion picture exhibitors, to join in the Laugh Month celebration, especially through the enjoyment of good motion picture comedies, to the end that we shall all begin the New Year looking on the brighter side of life, and that Motion Pictures shall prove of still greater service to the public by making it happier.

My New Year's message to the people of America is a plea for universal good-will.

Let us strive to supplant petty differences of whatever character with an intelligent benevolence conformable to the blessings the year 1927 promises to bring.

The dawn of another year must excite in all of us a determination to prove equal to the tasks and responsibilities to be cast upon us as the price, as it were, of the providential favors in store for America and Americans.

Charity in all its varied implications, kindness to one another, sympathetic understanding — the attainment of these should be the aim of our resolutions.

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, JANUARY 7, 1927 No. 1

Let's Try Building

WHILE the holiday mood is still upon us it may be wise to consider a thought at once beneficent and practical. The practicality of it is particularly impressive.

The thought is simply this: to progress by constructing instead of by fighting: Which may sound trite: but it isn't.

Sooner or later in their careers, nations and industries and individuals lay aside their spears and take up their plowshares. And this industry is now old enough and sensible enough to do likewise.

LOOKING back over nearly fifteen years acquaintance with the business, it would seem that nearly every company or enterprise that has come into it has had as its prime and avowed purpose the slugging of some other company out of the business. True of producers, distributors, theatres, equipment concerns, trade papers, etc.

Now this may be human; it is: but it isn't intelligent. And the consequence is that the combative enterprise generally fails.

When a concern is successful in any field, others, naturally, are fired with the desire to get into it. So far so good. But it doesn't necessarily follow that the way to get in is to bombard the other fellow out of it.

If the field is a good one—and the success of other concerns would indicate that—there is room, in all probability, for more. That is for more constructive enterprises. If there isn't room for all the constructive enterprise will win out. But it will beat the other fellow by constructing the general business and not by shooting holes into competitors. A man who spends his best energy in hating, hasn't any time left for the proper development of his new job.

It seems to me that the sanest thing a man who proposed to enter any branch of this business could do, would be to go directly to those already well established. The reception he would get would depend upon the calibre of the concern. If it is small potatoes—combative, narrow, selfish, tricky—why that's the best reason in the world for jumping in and making a good job of it. But it's quite probable that the experienced, established man isn't as mean and stupid as you imagine him to be or hope he is, and that he will give you some good and fair information and perhaps even welcome you as a constructive force for the betterment of the whole business.

WHAT we all want in this industry is a larger buying public. That comes about through better pictures and better theatres.

So every man who makes such a contribution is a boon to the industry. And not only will he prosper but so will the general business; and the biggest concerns will prosper the most. So they are wise enough, they must be, to welcome this competition and encourage more of it. No concern can at once be so big and so stupid as to think it can do it all. But also it follows that no newcomer into the field can at once be successful and yet blind enough to believe that he can only succeed by taking the other man's business away from him Civil warfare will run any business into the ground.

* * *

The most intelligent move ever made by the producing and distributing branches was the formation of the Hays association. More good, more general good, has been accomplished than any but a few will ever know. And it has all been done by a group of people constructing in common for their own and their industry's and the public welfare.

Speaking Editorially

IT is always interesting to look forward at the end of one year and speculate upon what the next will bring forth. It is also dangerous, when definite forecasts are attempted, so we shall leave that to the palmists and astrologers and merely consider a few of the unmistakable trends in this industry at the present time.

Chief among these, it seems to us, is the striving toward mechanical advancement after several years of acceptance of the order of things as they are. The synchronization of sound and picture has received a tremendous fillip during 1926, more along commercial lines than technically, and various devices by which specialty acts and the musical accompaniment to pictures are mechanically presented will be an important factor in showmanship during 1927.

The stereoscopic picture again comes to the fore with Spoor's experiments of several years reaching the stage of actually commencing a production. This will be placed on view during 1927, and may bring into being a new and special type of photodrama.

Color is advancing slowly but surely. This past year we have had one special in color throughout, and only this week a famous comedian announces that sequences of his next feature comedy will be chromatically rendered. One important company is about ready with a modified process which will lower the cost of color prints at once and may eventually bring them on a par with black and white, which should stimulate wider usage of color. Much remains to be learned on the part of producers, however, in this field.

* * *

IN addition to these major developments, many others are appearing here and there. New types of projection equipment—better arcs, non-rewinding magazines, continuous movement of film, replacement of the shutter by optical systems—are being brought forward. Incandescent lighting is apparently being given a chance to show its merits under practical studio conditions, and with it panchromatic film, the two opening up the way to a new standard of lighting and photography. With them will come new developments in laboratory technique to keep pace with this advance.

* * *

MORE significant from the standpoint of the showman, perhaps, is the striving for newer and better things in screen drama which 1926 has brought and which will extend into 1927. To give credit where credit is due, much of this is the result of the advent into the market of several stimulating foreign films during the past year.

Los Angeles newspapers are taking great delight these days in printing statements by various domestic directors to the effect that the acclaimed effects in European screen dramas are devices which the American craftsmen "discarded" or "forgot" ten or fifteen years ago. If this is true—and some of it unquestionably is—then it is a great pity that these things were mislaid for so long, and it is significant to note that these same directors are hastening to liven up their own work with the methods which they publicly disdain.

* * *

ANOTHER force which is tending toward picture betterment is the increasing trend toward the roadshow special. This means that each of the larger companies is setting aside certain productions and giving them the benefit of unlimited time and effort.

Parallel with this, however, is the danger of damaging the roadshow idea by putting out mediocre specials at two dollar prices. There are nearly a dozen pictures showing at a two dollar top on Broadway at the moment, and we question whether more than three, or at the most four, really warrant the advanced scale.

But of one thing we are certain: 1927 will be an interesting year, and will bring a significant crop of photoplays.

IN THE NEWS

JOE REDDY, whose difficult task is the acquisition of publicity for Harold Lloyd, became a proud father on Christmas Day with the arrival of a seven and one-quarter-pound son and heir. We have suggested naming the Christmas release "Santa Claus" Reddy, in honor of the patron saint of the natal day, but we understand that the more practical, if less unique, Joseph, Jr., will be awarded. How about "Little Joe?" George Reddy, of the Pathe publicity department, is registering equal pride at having attained to the proud estate of unclehood.

Ned Marin, one of First National's sales managers, is likewise registering elation over the arrival on December 23 of John Marin, who weighed in at six and one-half pounds. The mother and son are doing nicely. The Marins have one other child, Ann, aged five.

Agnes Christine Johnston, M.-G.-M. scenarist, and her husband, Frank Dazey, have returned from a brief trip abroad with their new baby boy, who was only five weeks old when they embarked.

Mae Murray and her husband, Prince David Divani, returned on December 22 via the Olympic, after a honeymoon trip abroad.

OPERA SINGER IN PICTURES

WHEREAS the late Enrico Caruso was so much of a disappointment as a screen actor that his second picture was never released, we hear that Andres de Segurola, former Metropolitan Grand Opera baritone, has made a distinct success of his first screen role. This is the part of an impresario in "Sunya," Gloria Swanson's most recent production. He is now at work on an original screen story which may serve as one of Miss Swanson's starring vehicles in the future.

COMEDY TO LEAD

"WHEN a check up is made of the biggest motion picture successes of 1926, it will be found that comedies have scored the principal triumphs just as we predicted a year ago," declares William R. Frazer, general manager of the Harold Lloyd corporation. "And in looking forward another year we feel that comedies will again outrank in popularity all other types of productions."

"I do look for a toning down in the broadness of comedy which prevailed throughout the past year. Producers have been free to take unlimited license because of the themes they have selected, especially the army and navy angle, but they will have to look for new comedy field this year and will have to be much more legitimate in their laugh producing.

"Comedy has a tremendous hold on motion picture enthusiasts not only in the United States but throughout the world. Comedy successes here have been universally popular. Take for example, 'For Heaven's Sake,' a big success in this country, shattered all records in London and throughout the British provinces. Other comedies have had a powerful appeal, as well.

"Producers of dramatic pictures have responded to this demand for comedy and no picture is complete today without its prominent comedy relief. Analyze almost any big picture of the passing year and you will find comedy had a big share in its appeal, and box office pulling power.

"From the broader comedy field of 'For Heaven's Sake,' Harold Lloyd is setting the pace in the return to the legitimate type of fun makers with his 'The Kid Brother' which is scheduled to face public approval soon after the new year. Built along lines of 'Grandma's Boy,' 'The Kid Brother' has a well motivated story in addition to what I believe is the greatest collection of 'gags' ever seen in a Lloyd production. If any one was skeptical about the merit of this pciture they certainly changed their opinion after seeing it previewed for the first time the other night when it was hailed as ranking with the finest Harold ever has done.

"Harold's plans for the coming year are a little unsettled just at this time. With the completion of 'The Kid Brother,' which took him nearly seven months to produce, he has decided to enjoy an extended vacation which may culminate in his going to Europe. Regardless of whether he does, however, he will be a little longer between pictures than ordinarily. The strain of maintaining a comedy pace such as he has set for the last seven years demands an occasional extended vacation.

"Present plans, however, indicate that he will release two pictures during 1927—'The Kid Brother' and one other, which should appear sometime late in the fall. He has an idea in mind now for his next picture which should develop into one of his greatest successes."

ANOTHER IMPORTATION

BEN BLUMENTHAL, international theatrical impresario who more than anyone else has been directly responsible for the exodus of German cinema talent to this country, has discovered yet another potential picture possibility, according to advance reports which have reached these shores. Blumenthal's latest discovery is Anna Lisa Ryding, noted Swedish actress, who at present is essaying the role of Joan in Shaw's "Joan the Woman" at the State Theatre, Stockholm.

Miss Ryding's interpretation of the role of Joan in Shaw's play is said to have contributed largely to the selection of Shaw as winner of the Nobel award for the current year. This play was the solitary contribution from the pen of the great dramatist enacted in Sweden during the past year; and whereas it was a pronounced triumph for Bernard Shaw, it also served to emphasize the abilities of Miss Ryding, and brought her a five year contract to appear in this country.

Not alone is Blumenthal's new screen discovery a dramatic actress, but she is recognized as the foremost Scandinavian primadonna and comedienne, it is said. She is expected to arrive in America shortly after the new year.

ETON HONORS RICHARD

BESTOWING an honor accorded to but few persons and probably never before to a film star, Richard Barthelmess was made the guest of the students of Eton College, the oldest and most aristocratic of English schools, a week or so ago.

Barthelmess, accompanied by his representative, Joe Steele, was received by a master of the college and had tea with the students which they themselves prepared. The film star spent some interesting moments also in inspecting the marvelous library which includes such priceless treasures as the first folios of Shakespeare, early editions of Dante, etc., with rarities like the Gutenberg Bible valued at a quarter of a million dollars.

Leaving England, Barthelmess returned to Paris, motored along the Loire, visiting ancient wine cellars and fedual castles. Thence he want to Biarritz, Canne, Carcassonne, Nice, Marseilles. The star and his party are now en route to America.

HOME MOVIES

THE rapidly growing hobby, sport or recreation of home movie making with the various types of small film outfits will receive added stimulus from the launching of a new publication dedicated solely to this activity. Called "Amateur Movie Makers," and tied up with the new Amateur Cinema League, it contains numerous practical and entertaining articles on the growing use of amateur motion pictures. Hiram Percy Maxim is president of the league.

FOURTH "MAGIC GARDEN"

ANOTHER "Magic Garden" is being planted by a State in honor of Gene Stratton-Porter, whose last novel, finished just before her death two years ago, bore that title. New Hampshire has followed the example of New York, Rhode Island, Indiana (her native State) and other commonwealths, and is putting into place a living, lasting testimonial to the writer of "The Magic Garden," "Laddie," "The Keeper of the Bees" and "The Girl of the Limberlost," which have been made into pictures, and many other successful books which have not yet been transformed into celluloid. J. Leo Meehan is just now finishing "The Magic Garden" for F. B. O.

Two months ago, by direction of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, New York State planted a "Magic Garden" memorial forest for Mrs. Stratton-Porter in the Adirondacks beside Lake George. This consists of 10,000 white pine trees and covered five acres.

Indiana not only planted a forest, but set up as a memorial on the court-house lawn at Decatur a 50-ton rock with a tablet in the writer's honor. Gov. Ed Jackson took part in both ceremonies.

Rhode Island's grove of trees, maples, is along the shore of Narragansett Bay, and was dedicated with impressive ceremonies.

THE REINHARDT INFLUENCE

APROPOS of the arrival here of Max Reinhardt, genius of the German theatre, it is interesting to note that three men now working in Hollywood were associated with him in stage work—Lubitsch, Murnau and Jannings. Murnau, who played the Knight in the original stage production of "The Miracle," commented on the influence of the stage director the other day between scenes of "Sunrise," which he is directing for Fox Films. He said:

"The time I spent as an actor with Professor Reinhardt I count as one of the finest episodes of my life. Reinhardt possesses the rare gift to stimulate and keep awake the interest of his young artists and to develop their peculiarities and artistic individuality.

"It cannot be described how devoted the actors are to Reinhardt, the ardor with which they follow his directions and the amount of self-denial everybody is willing to offer to help this great man. I am indebted to him for a lot of precious experience which I will never forget and which is proving of the greatest value to me in pictures I am producing.

"Reinhardt is a man who knows and loves thoroughly every detail of everybody's work, who rightly taxes the capabilities of everyone connected with him and one feels confident that individual development to the great possible measure is sure under his direction.

"There is still another valuable asset about Reinhardt from which everyone who has worked with him is deriving benefit. This is his thoroughness in the most minute detail. If I have been successful in my productions, I owe it to a large extent to my great teacher."

Mr. Murnau's method of direction in motion pictures suggests the American conception of Reinhardt. Always displaying a rare appreciation of the sensibilities of his artists, Mr. Murnau is meticulous in his insistence upon detailed perfection in both settings and performance. Conciliating, yet firm, he works with a smoothness and directness that cannot but make outstanding pictures.

AMATEUR ORIGINALS OUT

MRS. E. K. ADAMS, chief reader for Cecil B. De Mille, has returned to California after a stay of several weeks in New York. Mrs. Adams comes on once or twice a year to see new plays and to get in touch with the ideas of the public as to the type of entertainment desired. Most of her time while here is spent with publishers or in theatres.

She said, just before she left, that the De Mille studio had acquired the rights to at least fifteen stories for the coming season's programme.

Mrs. Adams declares that the day of the original story is at hand, but she wishes it understood that this does not mean that any studio will read the work of every writer who sends in a story.

"As a matter of fact," she said, "we do not read stories unless they are by some author whose name means something. We get hundreds of stories and suggestions from amateurs, but even reading these has caused so much trouble that we have been forced to discontinue the practise.

"In many cases the theme or plot of some story submitted resembles the theme of a story by some other person which we use. Then come charges of plagiarism, law suits and plenty of trouble. We realize that this may prevent us at times from securing good material, but it does away with a lot of trouble, expense and possible litigation.

"We would rather buy a published story because it is then automatically copyrighted and we are protected from the danger of anyone accusing us of stealing a story. So, if writers wish to sell their stories for the screen, they should use every endeavor to get the stories published in some magazine before submitting them to any motion picture company."

THE WEEK ON BROADWAY

THE Christmas holidays, with a rush of young folks home from school, brought capacity-taxing business to the Broadway theatres this week. Records are likely to be set up and down the street, which is packed afternoon and evening with a dense throng of humans in a holiday mood. Business jumped at all houses this week.

The Cameo, with F.B.O.'s "The Gorilla Hunt" in its third week, is doing so well that a fourth week is being considered as this is written; $5,300 the first week, $4,600 the second, and the prospect of well over $5,000 this week, make a remarkable showing for a picture of this type, especially in view of the fact that no special exploitation has been put back of the run.

Universal enjoys the distinction this week of having the first outside picture in the new Paramount Theatre, the attraction being Reginald Denny's "The Cheerful Fraud." The picture is scoring heavily, and a house record may be set. Universal, incidentally, has some interesting plans in view for Denny the coming year, which should make him one of the strongest box-office cards on the screen.

WOTTA DINNER!

LOUIS B. MAYER was host at a Christmas dinner to all of the 1,600 persons who make up the personnel of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City. Some figures on the food consumed may be of interest: 1,500 pounds of turkey, 150 pounds of cranberries, 400 pounds of spuds, 300 pounds of peas, 100 gallons of coffee, 1,800 rolls, 10 gallons of salad dressing, 100 pounds each of pudding, fruit cake, nuts and raisins, and 100 mince pies. Now, in case you ever have 1,600 guests for Christmas dinner, you'll know just what to order.

AS A BANKER SEES US

JAY J. BRYAN, former vice-president of the Culver City Commercial and Savings Bank, vice-president of the Hamilton National Bank, president of the Capitol Hill State Bank and cashier of three first national banks, all on the West Coast, has entered the motion picture field as treasurer of Nat Levine Productions.

Following is a portion of an interesting letter received by Mr. Levine from Mr. Bryan stating his concise views of the industry, which are interesting, coming, as they do, from a man "taking his first dip" in a new field:

"A few years ago I had a neighborhood bank in the center of the motion picture industry and gained some knowledge of the business from the financial side of it. It had a fascination for me in the beginning, which I never could quite throw off, but, realizing that I could not mix my business with the making of motion pictures, I postponed seeking any connection with the industry until I could sever all connection with the banking business.

"Last year I retired and the good wife and I set out without any destination in particular but headed for Southern California, and arriving at the center of the industry the old lure took possession of men and I immediately began to cultivate the acquaintance of those who could point out the way to me.

"I had seen, in my banking experiences, many companies, many producers, directors and actors, come and go—like sky-rockets. System, executive ability or some factor seemed to be lacking to stabilize the most wonderful industry in the world and I had a curiosity to know more about it,—to sort o' get my finger in the pie.

"You know the rest. Here I am financing a picture with you, taking the place of production manager and even playing a part in a ten episode serial, 'The Golden Stallion.' It has been the greatest playtime in my life and I have enjoyed every moment of the seven weeks it has taken to shoot the picture. If the serial makes a reasonable return on the investment I will be satisfied and repaid for the hard work, but more than that; I shall have found out that there is no mystery connected with the production of a good picture, but that it takes, as it does in all other successful enterprises, just a little patience, some executive ability, a reasonable amount of capital and a lot of hard work."

THIS MAN McLAGLEN

VICTOR McLAGLEN, whose work as Captain Flagg in "What Price Glory" seems to us to be just about the finest thing brought out in 1926, is working at odd moments on a story, "Adventure," based on his own experiences, in which Fox Films will star him in the near future. His life should provide colorful material. The son of an Anglican bishop, he entered the Royal Life Guards as a youngster, saw service in the Orange Free State during the Boer War, took part in the Cobalt silver mine rush in Canada, travelled with a circus, turned pugilist (staying the full distance with Jack Johnson, incidentally), went into vaudeville, and took part in the gold rush at Kalgoorlie, Australia. During the World War he served first as a lieutenant and then as a captain with the British forces in the Near East.

And now, as soon as his nest egg is a little larger, he wants to leave pictures behind for a time and head for Peru to explore some of the little known Inca ruins.

ON THE STAGE

ANN RORK, who bids fair to attain a screen fame shortly, which will rival that of her father, Sam E. Rork, the producer, was in the cast of one of the one-act plays presented by the Pasadena Community Playhouse Association's Workshop on December 4 and 11. The playlet was "Florida Water," and Miss Rork played the role of "Miss Flip."

A CHADWICK SONG

IN connection with the picture of the same name, Chadwick Pictures Corporation has published a special photoplay sheet music edition of "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which was one of the most popular ballads of two generations ago. It is planned to try the experiment of offering it for sale in theatre lobbies during the showing of the picture.

DE MILLE'S PRAETORIUM

REPRODUCING the pride and power that was Rome's twenty centuries ago, a reconstruction of the Praetorium of Jerusalem, judgment-seat of Pontius Pilate, has been erected at the De Mille Studio for scenes of exceptional importance in Cecil B. De Mille's Biblical production, "The King of Kings."

In order to make space for this setting, the end wall of a huge stage was removed, making it possible to build the exterior as well as the interior of the Praetorium. Not only this official building, but adjacent structures as well have been constructed, presenting for the camera the entire governmental district of Jerusalem, as it appeared at the time of Jesus.

Corinthian columns of great height line the marble steps leading to the entrance, which is guarded by heavy bronze gates. Within is the throne of Pilate, placed before a bronze replica of the Eagle of Rome, thirty-seven feet in height.

A BAS "MOVIE"

UP in Ottawa, Ontario, The Journal, after banning "Xmas" as an abbreviation for Christmas has gone a step further and tabooed the word "movie," except where considerations of space absolutely demand it. It is felt that "movie" is an ugly word and scarcely appropriate to the elaborate productions and handsome picture theatres of today.

Jack L. Warner, Lloyd Bacon and Darryl Francis Zanuck do a little high grade "shooting" outside the studio limits, and proudly record the result of their skill in imperishable celluloid

A TOOTH FOR A TOOTH

HAROLD LLOYD has lost one customer for his new Paramount picture, which is due to arrive on the screen shortly after the new year. The bespectacled comedian has been accused of having designs on the human nervous system with such pictures as "Safety Last," and on various other parts of the anatomy with such side-splitting comedies as "The Freshman," "For Heaven's Sake," etc., now he is charged with being in league with the dentists, and is held directly responsible for the loss of one perfectly good tooth by Beatrice J. Tracy, a New Jersey miss, who vows never more to look on a Lloyd comedy because of said loss.

In a mass of mail which arrived for Lloyd at the Metropolitan studio, came the following letter, which is quite self-explanatory:

"I know you will be amused and flattered to hear of the terrible and yet ridiculous misfortune that happened to me last Saturday evening, as you are directly responsible. I was seeing for the first time your picture, 'The Freshman,' and was simply convulsed with mirth—so convulsed in fact, that in my rocking back and forth I somehow hit the seat in front of me and knocked my front tooth out. I just know you have never before received such a tribute to your art. You can imagine what a loss of this kind means to a young lady, but thanks to the skill of my dentist I am once more quite human in appearance.

"But never will I dare gaze upon you again."

There is a gentle tip for theatre owners in this letter. Why not provide teeth protectors on the backs of seats when you are playing Lloyd pictures in the future?

A LAUGH YEAR COMING

MORE than fifty per cent of the feature pictures to be made in Hollywood during the coming year will be comedies, is the belief of E. M. Asher, producer of the Corinne Griffith features for First National. He bases his opinion on the unusual success of comedy features over dramatic vehicles during the last few months. This, he declares, has proved to producers that audiences throughout the country are at present in the frame of mind where they would much rather laugh than sigh.

The most outstanding successes of the past year, Asher points out, were comedies of the type of "Syncopating Sue" and "Ladies At Play." Dramatic productions, he declares, that cost much more to produce, failed to return anywhere near as big results at the box office, and as a result producers today are searching the field for suitable comedy material to film during the next few months.

In keeping with the desire for comedy, Asher states that almost all of his activity will be devoted to laugh-producing pictures. At the present time his company is making "McFadden's Flats" for First National.

FOXITES TO DO "GUMMED UP"

MEMBERS of the Fox Dramatic Society, composed of employes at the home office of Fox, will present as their initial effort "All Gummed Up," a satirical comedy by Harry Wagstaff Gribble. The group will be under the direction of Clarence Jay Elmer, assistant director of "The Music Master." Joe Sokolinsky is president of the society; Peggy Kelly, vice-president, and Gertrude Robbins, secretary.

SWEDISH CONDITIONS

VICTOR SEASTROM, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Swedish director, who has just returned from his first visit home in four years, reports that production methods in Sweden have advanced little and that production is at low ebb. He also states that any animosity which may be felt in the Scandinavian countries against American films is not shared by the average picture-goer.

CRACKS UP FOR "WINGS"

"DICK" GRACE, considered one of the best pilots in the West, waved at Death recently when "cracking up" an airplane for the Paramount production, "Wings," a story of the American aviators in France, near San Antonio, Texas. The wave was unanswered.

For a realistic shot, director William Wellman wanted a speeding plane to crash into "No-Man's-Land" at the height of battle. Realizing the danger, he refused to ask any member of the company to attempt the hazardous act.

Grace heard of the director's wish and volunteered. He assured Wellman that he had done the same thing time and again and there was really very little danger to the pilot if his instructions were carried out implicitly. After listening to the details, Wellman agreed to allow Grace to make the crash.

He did. As the cameras were trained upon the designated spot—a blemish on the world of shell holes topped by barbed-wire entanglements—Grace took off in his tiny Spad, capable of 140 miles an hour. He circled once, twice, and on the third time around, dropped his goggles at the feet of Mrs. Grace, who witnessed the entire performance.

Down he came from an altitude of 100 feet at the rate of 90 miles per hour. A breathless silence settled over the little group on the ground. Down he came. A quick flick of his tail. He straightened. The landing-gear wheels touched. A shrill, grinding clatter as he hit the barbed-wire. Up and over—clear over, upside down! The group watching, hardly dared to breathe. Suddenly a squirming in the cockpit and Grace crawled out.

WHAT INTERESTS CELEBS

ONE mystery that intrigues the curiosity of every human being—from the humble laborer to princes, millionaires, and national idols—is the motion picture studio.

This is demonstrated by the list of visitors in the past few months at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where famous guests ranging from a crown prince to a famous writer have gone through the plant. And, while every visitor had an ardent curiosity to enter the studio, each one showed a different phase of this curiosity. Each was interested in some particular thing.

Gustavus Adolphus, Crown Prince of Sweden, was most interested in the manufacturing of artificial snow for studio scenes.

Otto Kahn, international banker, was most interested in the amount of "juice" used in studio lighting effects.

Garrard Winston, under-secretary of the treasury and America's income tax czar, was interested in the organization of the industrial departments rather than the stars. Sir Henry Wood, famous English composer, investigated the use of music to stimulate the emotions of actors.

Herbert Hoover was interested in Lon Chaney's makeup methods; Roy Chapman Andrews, famous explorer, wanted "to see pretty girls—because you don't see these in the Gobi Desert."

General Smedley D. Butler was most interested in meeting Elinor Glyn. "I want to see what the woman who wrote 'Three Weeks' looks like," he observed.

Lemuel De Bra, noted author, was "interested in Jackie Coogan—I have a boy his age at home."

Judge K. M. Landis, America's baseball Czar, had the queerest curiosity of all. "I want to see Karl Dane spit tobacco juice and put out a candle," says Judge Landis. "I saw 'The Big Parade' six times—just for that!"

WATCH GLORIA GORDON

SOME months ago J. G. Bachmann saw so much promise in a young extra girl, Gloria Gordon, that he made her leading lady of "The Romance of a Million Dollars." The second morning of work she sprained her ankle, and Alyce Mills had to be substituted. Another chance was promised the disconsolate Gloria. When her ankle had fully recovered, she was given a bit to do in "Dancing Days"—and came through so remarkably that she was given an important part in "Exclusive Rights." The inside dope from those who have seen the rushes is to the effect that she will prove a knockout, and that Mr. Bachmann's confidence in her is more than justified.

Rogers Speaks on "Amusement Rates"

Flays Critics on Small City Newspapers; Decries Practice of Smothering Theatre Ad Displays; Praises "News" Stand

[Editor's Note: Continuing the campaign of Motion Picture News for commercial advertising rates to motion picture theatres from newspapers, E. R. Rogers, manager of the Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, contributes several interesting points this week in a letter to the News. The issues which he brings up concerning critics, careless composition, passes, and the like are of particular significance and will be useful to exhibitors in waging this fight. Other managers are invited to send in their views on this important question.]

Mr. Wm. A. Johnston, Editor
Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Dear Mr. Johnston:

Your editorial stand on the subject of more liberal newspaper rates for motion picture advertisers is in keeping with the usual progressive and thoughtful policies of "Motion Picture News." What a boon it would be to the exhibitor if rates equal to those enjoyed by the rank and file of advertisers would be in effect and what a benefit to the amusement-loving public! The position taken on this subject by the industry's leaders is not only a commendable but a courageous one, for no organized attack has heretofore been made on the stronghold of the press on matters of policy and for that reason the public prints have profited from old precedents. In so doing, they have discriminated against the motion picture exhibitor.

It is argued by the publishers the theatre enjoys more free space than any other advertiser and naturally they are reticent to admit that motion picture items constituting the so-called "free publicity" are choicest bits of news. But the theatre pays for the eagerly consumed news and feature copy it furnishes, the penalty for creating choice copy being so much per inch more than other local advertisers are assessed. In many of the average cities, if not all, an indifferent attitude toward amusements is taken. Any number of newspapers have barred contests and co-operative pages and refuse to otherwise co-operate with the theatre. There are a large number of newspapers which make no attempt to print a presentable Sunday amusement page. Some will not carry still lay-outs unless paid for by the exhibitor. The average city is much worse off in this respect than the cosmopolitan centers where importance is placed upon the reader value of motion picture matter.

Yet no one has come out boldly to dispute the justification of "special rates" since they came into being with the advent of the road show, the paid publicity of which has been regarded as foreign advertising, until now, but the newspapers have gone on exacting the high rates; demanding unusual pass courtesies and exercising the privilege of "panning" the theatre whether or not there is good cause.

In the average city, although the exhibitor pays a higher space rate, as a rule he can never depend on a definite page location for his week day announcements, much less a definite location on a particular page. His displays are generally flanked by medicine ads, department store announcements or smothered by a bold-face type advertisement of a chain grocery. To break in on the leading local news page the exhibitor must own the paper or pay a still higher rate for the privilege.

In small city newspaper composing rooms few really competent compositors are employed. To obtain fairly good results typographically for a skillfully and intelligently written lay-out, the manager or the publicity director has to bribe the most competent compositor with passes in order to be assured an interest will be taken in the setting of his copy.

Young, half-baked members of scanty editorial staffs are given lee-way to exercise their critical powers on the motion picture. They feel they must criticize something or they are not "critics." Unqualified to judge for the masses, in an endeavor to be small town George Jean Nathans and Robert E. Sherwoods, they tear into motion pictures with a vengeance and the impressions they publish influence the small city readers and oft-times cost the theatres money because of the patronage driven away by a tirade, or indifference, or unintelligent and destructive criticism.

Think of a newspaper sending a "critic" into a large, or small for that matter, department store and giving space to any thought the reporter might express derogatory to that merchant's business. It never has and never will be done. Yet the theatre, paying a higher rate, must go on being subjected to unjust criticism of the entertainment wares he endeavors to merchandise through the columns of the paper which has no conscience if destructive criticism drives away his patronage. A ridiculous situation to which the theatre interests have submitted because there has been no one up to the present time with courage enough to advocate a better order of things for fear any such move incur the wrath of the powerful press.

But who knows but what the industry has been sleeping on its rights and that the public prints, recognizing also the power of the screen and the potential worth of the news of the industry to its columns, will awaken to the fact that the exhibitor has been done an injustice and will have compassion and enable him to make the most of his advertising possibilities by the more liberal use of space.

At any rate it is a constructive step that has been taken; a subject which has been worthy of the attention and consideration of a united exhibitor force.

Files Suit Against Ticket Manufacturers

Dep't of Justice Charges Sales Are Not Held Open to Competition; Requests Supreme Court to Issue Permanent Injunction

A SUIT designed to open the sale of amusement tickets to competition was filed in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia December 16 by the Department of Justice, in which thirteen of the leading producers of such tickets and fourteen individuals affiliated with those companies were charged with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The companies named in the suit, and which, the department charges, manufacture and sell approximately 85 per cent. of the amusement tickets produced in the United States, were the Globe Ticket Company, Philadelphia; Ansel Ticket Company, Chicago; Argus Ticket Company, Chicago; Automatic Ticket Register Corporation, New York; Columbia Printing Company, Chicago; Elliott Ticket Company, Inc., New York; Hancock Bros., Inc., San Francisco; International Ticket Company, Newark, N.J.; Rees Ticket Company, Omaha; Simplex Ticket Company, Inc., Chicago; Trimount Press, Boston; Weldon, Williams & Lick, Fort Smith, Ark., and the World Ticket & Supply Company, Inc., New York.

The Government charges that the defendants have assigned and allotted buyers of tickets to one another to be held as exclusive customers, and that they have agreed that no one of them will sell tickets to a customer assigned to another at prices less than those charged by the defendant to whom he has been assigned. It is also charged that the defendants have exchanged information with regard to sales and prices, through the medium of the American Amusement Ticket Manufacturers' Association, with headquarters in Washington, to effectuate and enable them to observe the agreements.

The court is asked to issue a permanent injunction prohibiting the defendants from further engaging in the agreements with regard to the assignment and allotment of customers and with regard to prices, and from further exchanging information for effectuating those agreements.

Fitch Supervising F. B. O. Sioux Falls Office

An appointment immediately effective is that of Sherman Fitch, who assumes the supervision of the F. B. O. office in Sioux Falls.

Wage York Blue Sunday Battle

Court Fight to Determine Legality of Ordinance Enforcement is Started

THE court fight to determine whether the City of York, Pa., can enforce its recently enacted ordinance which would bar Sunday motion picture shows and other commercialized Sunday amusements, opened in the York County court house on December 21, when argument was heard in the suit brought by Fred C. Bothwell, manager of White Rose Park. Mr. Bothwell seeks to restrain the Mayor, officers and employes of the city from enforcing the Sunday ban. The case was heard before Judge Donald P. McPherson, who was brought in from neighboring Adams county especially to preside, in view of the intense feeling in York County among the partisans for and against Sunday amusements.

Arguing in behalf of the city, Frederick B. Gerber, City Solicitor, contended the ordinance is constitutional as shown by decisions of courts in other states. He insisted further that it is not discriminatory under the constitution because it applies equally to all persons engaged in the businesses it intends to prohibit.

Michael S. Niles, counsel for Bothwell, on the other hand, maintained that the ordinance is unconstitutional because of lack of notice of penalty in the preamble; that it is discriminatory in character, and that it is not sustained by the terms of the Clark Act of the Pennsylvania Legislature, upon which it is based, because it is "a prohibitory and not a regulatory ordinance."

There is also before the court a mandamus proceeding which seeks to compel City Clerk William H. Reynolds to prepare a petition for a referendum on the question of the Sunday closing ordinance to the voters of the city.

Universal's Southern Theatres

Dan Michalove Issues Statement Concerning Company's Holdings and Plans

FOLLOWING the initial announcement issued by Dan Michalove two weeks ago, of Universal's plan to build several community theatres in Atlanta's most thriving suburban centers, comes a detailed statement from Mr. Michalove concerning his company's theatre acquisition program in East Atlanta.

According to Mr. Michalove, Universal has acquired an admirable site at 482 Flat Shoals Avenue in East Atlanta, and plans are now being drawn by Daniell and Beautell, architects, for an 800-seat house that will be built along the latest approved lines.

Universal will erect the house in conjunction with Oscar S. Oldknow, vice-president in charge of the Southern Division of National Theatre Supply Company. Mr. Oldknow launched and built the Fairfax Theatre in East Point some months ago and recently sold a fifty per cent interest in that house to Universal.

Construction of a moving picture theatre in East Atlanta is in line with Universal's plan to acquire and develop a chain of suburban houses in Atlanta. One of the company's most recent acquisitions was a fifty per cent interest in the community theatre just being completed on Ponce de Leon Avenue near Boulevard, one of the city's most flourishing centers.

Work on the new theatre for East Atlanta will start as soon as plans now being drawn are completed.

King Conferring With Kennedy in New York

EDWIN C. KING, vice-president in charge of production for Film Booking Offices, arrived in New York this week and will immediately go into a series of conferences regarding production matters with Joseph P. Kennedy, president of the company, E. B. Derr, J. I. Schnitzer and other home office executives.

Edwin C. King

Mr. King has just rounded out his first season with this company as head of production and will again have the production reins in hand during the coming season. His stay in the East is at present undetermined.

Northwest T. O. Ordered to Pay Music Society $250

As a result of the activity of the investigators in the Northwest Charles Bovee, owner of Florence Theatre at Elk Point, S. D., has been ordered by a federal judge to pay $250 to the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers.

The music society has been active in the Northwest lately in pushing their campaign of checking the music played at theatres. The society has announced that it means to see that all theatre owners either pay or quit playing its music since the Federal Department of Justice declared the music publishers were within their rights in demanding the "music tax."

"The Golden Stallion" a February Release

"The Golden Stallion," a ten-episode serial, featuring "White Fury," a wild horse and starring Lefty Flynn will be released on the State Rights market in February, 1927, Nat Levine, producer of the serial, announces.

Exhibitors of Pa. Locality Oppose Church Showings

Exhibitors of the Schuylkill County section, members of M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware met recently at Pottsville for an all-day session and took a vigorous stand against the widespread practice in that section of churches running motion picture shows on Sunday nights. It was declared that in some towns three churches were running Sunday night shows and charging as much as 50c admission. The meeting also expressed itself as being opposed to the showing of double features. H. J. Schad, president of the organization, made the address of welcome and remarks were made by Charles H. Goodman, chairman of the board of managers, and Llewellyn Peyser, who has been active in affairs of the Board of Arbitration. It is planned to hold another sectional meeting in Harrisburg in February. This will be a two-day session and all efforts of the organization will be directed at that time against any measures to be introduced in the Pennsylvania State Legislature aimed against the motion picture industry.

Fete Guest on Debut in Motion Picture Industry

Notables of the motion picture and publishing industries, friends from as far distant as Los Angeles and New York, gathered at the home of Edgar A. Guest in Detroit on Wednesday of this week, to pay tribute to the poet on his entrance into the field of motion pictures. Through negotiations recently consummated, the poet's songs of the common folk are to be made into motion picture "jewels" and will be distributed by American Cinema Association. Attending the complimentary luncheon were F. K. Riley, of Riley & Lee, Chicago, publishers of Mr. Guest's books; George Matthew Adams, of George Matthew Adams Service, Inc., New York; A. J. Moeller, president of American Cinema Association, New York; David M. Hartford, president of Hartford Productions, Hollywood, California; Mayor John W. Smith of Detroit, and thirty executives of theatrical and publishing interests of Mr. Guest's state and home city.

Crescent Amusement Gets Two in Huntsville, Ala.

The Crescent Amusement Company of which Tony Sudekum is the head, has bought from M. A. Lightman his interest in the Grand and Jefferson Theatres of Huntsville, Ala. The new owners will take possession January 1.

The Crescent Amusement Company has been increasing its theatre holdings steadily for more than a year. Several important groups and individual houses have been added to the chain, which is one of the strongest in the South.

The Grand and Jefferson in Huntsville were formerly owned by the late C. L. Hackworth. They came into the chain developed by M. A. Lightman during the current year. The houses constituted a part of the holdings of the Malco Amusement Company, organized by Mr. Lightman, and concerned with development of theatre properties in Arkansas, Tennessee and Alabama.

Eisele Predicts Expansion in 1927

Fox Films Treasurer Claims Decided Trend Towards Better Pictures; More Attention to Educational Films

By JOHN C. EISELE

Treasurer of the Fox Films Corp.

FURTHER expansion of the motion picture industry can be looked for in 1927, with a decided trend towards better pictures, larger theatres, and more attention given to the educational value of films.

Looking ahead into 1927, the outstanding developments to be expected include greater use of the color pictures; a simplification of the talking picture so that it will be available to even the smaller theatres throughout the country; and perhaps the introduction of a stereoscopic process to give pictures depth as well as breadth and height.

Unless something unforeseen occurs, the new year will even exceed 1926, by far the most successful twelve months in the history of the industry. During 1926 investments in the industry increased to between two and two-and-a-half billion dollars. Gross income of theatres in the United States totalled three-quarters of a billion, and an average of seven million persons daily paid admissions.

Many Large Theatres to Open

The higher type of pictures and better theatres should stimulate interest among the persons who previously have held aloof from the motion picture theatres. Before the year is many months old the Broadway district will witness the opening of the largest motion picture house in the world; and may other theatres in the 4,000 and 5,000 seating capacity class will be in operation before the end of the year.

For example, the Fox Theatres Corp., now has under construction at least five theatres of this capacity, as well as others in contemplation.

The year just closed has brought about a decided stabilization in the industry, and there should be an even greater trend in this direction during 1927. Managers are carefully studying production costs; producers have an accurate idea of the potential market for pictures they have under consideration; and the fly-by-night promoters have been weeded out by the increased cost of the better type of pictures. Whereas, $50,000 or $60,000 represented the cost of a feature picture a few years back, a quarter of a million is now considered an ordinary expenditure.

Despite the adverse criticism of American films from abroad, there is every reason to hope for a further expansion of the American "movie" in foreign fields during the coming year. In this connection it is well to remember that in 1913 the United the United States exported about 32,000,000 feet, and perhaps considerably more.

Well established branches in the key cities throughout the world, and big potential market in the United States, give the American producer a distinct advantage over his foreign rivals. Big increases in the demand for films are to be expected from Far East and in Latin America.

In their desire to produce the best pictures possible, the American companies are reaching out to the whole world for talent. This year will see the works of some prominent foreign artists backed by American enterprise and capital. Notable among these will be F. W. Murnau, the German, who successfully produced "The Last Laugh," and is now working on his first film in the United States, "Sunrise."

Consolidation of some of the smaller companies is under discussion, and it is likely that there will be several of these during the year. Especially is this true in cases where companies are not complete units, with facilities for producing, distributing and exhibiting pictures. Such consolidations should result in increased economies that will be reflected in the earning power of those respective companies.

Greater Earnings for Leaders

There is reason to believe that this further expansion in the motion picture industry will result in greater earnings for many of the companies, especially the leaders, who have an established market for their product.

Many outstanding developments will occur in 1927. Most prominent among these probably will be the simplified talking motion picture. There have been numerous experiments and a few public presentations of the talking motion picture during 1926. Plans already under way contemplate the introduction of simplified talking motion pictures in many other theatres throughout the country during the coming year. Executives estimate that new simplified talking motion picture equipment will cost in the neighborhood of $1,500 or $2,000, which, of course, will make it available to practically all of the theatres throughout the country. Not only will this bring Broadway stars to many of the small towns, but in some cases it may be used to eliminate the orchestras, usually a large percentage of the operating cost.

Color Film to Play Part

The color motion pictures likewise have been more or less of an experiment, but recent changes indicate that they will play an increasingly important part in the films to be released during the coming year.

Another development that will tend toward realism, which may be expected before the end of 1927, is the stereoscopic process, which will give depth to the pictures, much as the old-time stereoscope.

If progress is made all along these lines, as is expected now, it is entirely possible that by the end of the year we will see a motion picture which is much more real than anything presented today.

Only a few years ago most of the motion pictures were financed by groups of men who organized individual companies. The increased amount of money in the industry has changed this condition, and it appears to me that it will become more and more necessary for the motion picture industry to draw on the financial district, in order to finance this program of expansion.

Mae Murray Parts With Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

MAE MURRAY and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have severed the business relationship which has existed between them. The star's contract had approximately six months to run when it was cancelled several days ago. Miss Murray is going to make her own pictures, it is said, and has some ideas which she wants to work out here and abroad.

While no statement was issued by M-G-M concerning this report the story was not denied.

Paramount Secures Seven Year Lease on Two Theatres in Birmingham, England

ACCORDING to announcement issued by Sol Levy, of the Greater Scala Company, London, Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., has secured a lease on the Scala and Futurist theatres, Birmingham, England. While Mr. Levy declined to confirm a rumor to the effect that the agreement arrived at gives Famous a seven year lease with option of renewal, this fact was confirmed in another quarter. Full particulars of the negotiations and terms of the agreement are being withheld and will not be disclosed officially until the annual meeting of the shareholders in April or May.

Exhibitors and film renters view the new situation with considerable alarm. E. Hewitson, national vice-president of the C.E.A., stated, in an interview, that the development was antagonistic to the interests of film exhibitors generally.

Italy Forms Film Institute

New Dep't Plans Campaign of Education Through Theatres

THE Italian National Institute of Luce has, by agreement with the Ministry of National Economy, created the "Industrial Cinema," whose activities are to be regulated by royal decree, according to advices to the Department of Commerce from Trade Commissioner J. E. Wholean, at Rome. It is reported in Italy that the Luce intends to develop a campaign of civil and national education through the cinema theatres of Italy.

On the board of the recently formed "Industria Cinema" are the Director-General of Industry in the Italian Ministry of National Economy, a representative of the Federation of Industries, a representative of the National Institute of Exportation and a representative of the head of the Government. It is stated in Italy that the Luce maintains friendly relations with the various Italian industries and that the directors of many large industrial organizations in that country are in sympathy with the plan of education by means of the motion picture. The pictures filmed by the new organization, besides being displayed in Italy, are to be distributed abroad, it is said.

The field of the Luce is widespread and covers agricultural, history, art, archæology, literature, religious instruction, public works, customs of the people, and similar matters. According to its recent arrangement it is about to become interested in the motion picture industry. A recent royal decree provided for the formation of the "Cinemateca," for the purpose of recording films of art and religious life, to be carried on by the Luce. The "Cinemateca," whether for production or distribution, shall, it is reported, be controlled technically by a committee and its program coordinated with that of the Luce.

"Teeth" Absent in Tampa License Ordinance

An ordinance was passed in Tampa not long ago which placed a license fee of $500 a day upon circuses and carnivals. This ordinance replaced the old one which required a fee of only $75 a day. In passing this new ordinance it seems the commissioners failed to put "teeth" in the law. That is, the law required the fee but there was no penalty provided for a failure to pay. A carnival company opened here recently and forgot to pay a license. They were brought before the Municipal Judge, but the Judge had to discharge them as there was no provision for a penalty. A compromise was made with them, and the carnival was allowed to continue upon the payment of the old license fee. The City Commissioners are now preparing to put the needed "teeth" into a new ordinance.

Chadwick Head Comes East; Goldberg Goes to Coast

I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures, who has been in Los Angeles for the past several months, will leave for New York on the arrival of Jesse J. Goldberg, supervising director general of Chadwick productions, who left this week for Los Angeles after a stay at the company's home office in New York. Chadwick will remain in New York for a few weeks for conferences with his New York staff on the 1927-28 production plans. Immediately upon the arrival of Goldberg in Los Angeles, production will be started on two new films, "Shamrocks and the Rose" and a second Betty Compson special.

Four Killed in Disastrous Winnipeg Theatre Fire

Winnipeg, Manitoba, was visited by a disastrous fire on December 23, when the long-established Winnipeg Theatre, owned by Walker Bros., was totally destroyed, with the loss of four lives and serious injuries to eight others. The dead were firemen who were caught by falling walls soon after the fight with the flames started, a hose crew being caught in the front entrance of the theatre. Other fire-fighters were badly hurt in the collapse of the building, which was due to the high-pressure streams undermining the walls.

The property loss was $125,000. The cause of the disaster is unknown, as the theatre had been dark for some days. The building had been built in 1883 and had been used for various purposes.

Mastbaum Estate Has Large Interest in Stanley Co.

Since the death Jules E. Mastbaum there has been considerable interest indicated concerning the attitude of the executors of his estate toward Stanley Company of America.

The executors have been interviewed in regard to this matter and have authorized the statement that the estate has a very large financial interest in Stanley Company of America which under the terms of Mr. Mastbaum's will the estate is authorized to retain for an indefinite period.

The executors are delighted with the personnel of the present management and also with the offers of continued cooperation from the important interests in the motion picture business with which Stanley Company has maintained friendly relations for many years.

Casting Directors Form Co-operative Association

Casting directors of the various movie colonies, Culver City, Burbank, Hollywood and Universal City, recently met in Los Angeles for the purpose of forming a cooperative organization, to be known as the Casting Directors' Association. Officers chosen were William Cohill, Universal, president; Fred Schuessler, Warner Brothers, vice-president; Jack Votion, F. B. O., secretary, and Patricia Foulds, Metropolitan, treasurer.

New Companies Incorporate in New York State

The past week brought the incorporation of the following motion picture companies in New York State: Mamaroneck Playhouse Holding Corporation, Mamaroneck, $100,000, Irvin Wheeler, New Canaan, Conn.; E. H. B. Watson, Harrison; Reuben P. Brewer, Mamaroneck; Industrial Amusement Company, Inc., $250,000, Daniel Shalek, Shenandoah, Pa.; Alfred Gottsman, Lena Gottsman, New York City; Glen Cove School Corporation, Glen Cove, $200,000, Salvatore Calderone, Charles W. Carman, Walter R. Jones, Hempstead; Malcolm Film Laboratories, Inc., capitalization not stated, Joseph R. Malcolm, Alexander and Abraham Marks, New York City; Silver Eagle Productions, Inc., $100,000, Harry D'Agostine, Angelo Morreale, Carmine Morreale, New York City; States Cinema Production Corp., $10,000, Charles S. Goetz, Sam Citron, Murray Karp, New York City; H. and M. Amusement Co., Inc., $10,000, Beorge G. Marrow, Louis I. and Harry A. Harris, New York City.

Iowa House Operator Brings Suit Against Authorities

The question of Sunday movies, which crops up perenially in Iowa whenever crop news is dull, raised its head in Mount Vernon, Ia., recently in an exciting conflict between Miss Clara Hendrix, operator of the Strand Theatre, and the municipal authorities.

Miss Hendrix, who has run her house successfully as a six-day attraction, recently attempted a Sunday performance. Included in the audience were the town marshal and four deputies, who tried to stop the show.

The next act in the drama was a suit for $10,000 brought by Miss Hendrix against the mayor, marshall and the deputies. Her petition charges illegal entry and destruction of property. Other owners and operators in six-day towns await with interest the outcome of the suit, as it may have bearing upon cases in similar towns.

Theatre Man Kills Self With Pistol Accidentally

William Roy Beamer, assistant manager of the Ardmore Theatre, Lancaster Pike, Ardmore, Pa., accidentally shot and killed himself in the foyer of the theatre on December 23 while several hundred patrons were in the theatre. Mr. Beamer, who was 25 years of age, had been oiling an automatic pistol, and in reply to a question as to whether or not it was loaded, he said, "No, I'll show you," placed the pistol to his head and in a moment there were several shots. He was immediately rushed to the Bryn Mawr Hospital, where he died in twenty minutes. He is survived by his wife and two-months-old daughter, for whom he had been making Christmas plans just before the accident.

Watson to Direct Bobby Vernon's Next Comedy

William Watson, young comedy director under contract to the Christies, has been chosen to direct Bobby Vernon's next comedy, a two-reeler, as yet untitled, which is from an original by Sigfried Herzig.

One Independent House Now in Seattle

Field Held Primarily by Pacific Northwest Theatres With Its Affiliated Companies; Famous Building Theatre in Montreal

WITH the announcement last week of the purchase of the eleven suburban and downtown houses owned by the Pacific Theatres, Inc., in Seattle, Wash., by the Universal Theatres Corporation, statistics show a total of exactly one ranking house in that city of 400,000 that is entirely independent in ownership and bookings.

The independent house is the Embassy Theatre, a 1,000-seat house owned by Joe Danz, and operated as a first-run theatre with weekly changes of program. The house books independent productions and such other pictures as are not purchased by the larger first-run theatres in the city.

Primarily, the field is held by the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., affiliated with the Famous Players-Lasky group, First National Pictures, Producers' Distributing Corporation and the West Coast Theatres, Inc. This group operates the Fifth Avenue Theatre, the Coliseum Theatre, the Liberty Theatre, Strand Theatre and Neptune Theatre. Arrangements concluded last week with United Artists officials, in addition, give that group a 50 per cent interest in the Liberty Theatre, which will henceforth be known as the United Artists Theatre and will be used as a long-run showhouse for U.A. pictures.

Then comes Universal, that has owned and operated the Columbia Theatre for several years, and now gains control of the Winter Garden, another first-run downtown house, and ten smaller suburban theatres formerly operated as the Pacific Theatres, Inc. H. W. Bruen will retain the general management of the suburban chain, with Frank Edwards directing the Winter Garden, and Robert W. Bender as Managing Director of the Columbia, as heretofore.

Hamrick's Position

Finally, comes the John Hamrick Circuit affiliated with Warner Brothers and also holding a working agreement with Harry C. Arthur, Jr., whereby the Hamrick houses play certain First National and Producers' Distributing releases as first-run attractions. Mr. Hamrick operates the Blue Mouse Theatre, downtown, the Egyptian Theatre as a leading second-run University district house, and the Uptown and Lakeside suburban theatres. He also owns the Blue Mouse Theatres in Portland and Tacoma.

In addition to these houses, there is now a Paramount Theatre under construction by the Famous Players-Lasky group, a house being built at Seventh and Olive, reported to belong to Fox, and the new Orpheum Theatre which will play such photoplays as are included in the P.D.C.-Pathe-Keith-Albee and First National affiliations.

In a move to provide an outlet for "Outside" distributors, probably to forestall invasion of the local first-run field, Famous' Canadian firm will build a 3,600-seat theatre in Montreal. The house will be located on St. Catherine Street, and will be named the Pantages. It will feature pictures and Pantages vaudeville.

Schines May Acquire Robbins' N.Y. Chain

ACCORDING to a report current along Film Row in Albany during the last two or three days, the Schine Brothers of Gloversville are to take over the Robbins chain of houses in Watertown, Utica and Syracuse, the deal having virtually been consummated following negotiations of several weeks. The Schines have been very active of late in acquiring theatres in Northern New York, and now control that section of the State with the exception of the Northeastern section, where William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, owns and operates a number of houses. The Schine Brothers have about seventy-five theatres in New York State at the present time.

The new theatre will be the fourth Famous house here. The company now operates the Palace, Capitol and Loew's. Recently, it was stated that other distributors would enter the city theatre field to obtain representation. In this connection, it is stated, that Fox was offered lease of a proposed house here and in Toronto.

One of the biggest motion picture theatre deals in the history of St. Louis, Mo., was concluded this week by Skouras Brothers and William Goldman, whereby the Kings Theatre on Kings Highway Boulevard north of Delmar Boulevard comes under the Skouras Brothers' control, while Goldman obtains a substantial interest in the Grand Central and West End Lyric theatres and Lyric Skydome.

During the past week the incorporation of the Grand Avenue Theatres, Inc., was perfected, and on January 1 the new organization will take over the houses named.

The incorporators are: Spyros P. Skouras, 548 shares; G. P. Skouras, 1 share; F. J. Laurent, 1 share; William Goldman, 449 shares, and W. J. Hogan, 1 share. The stock has no set par value, but the company starts business with a nominal capital of $22,000.

Three to Manage

Under the terms of the agreement entered into by Skouras Brothers and Goldman the houses named will be managed by a board of three—Spyros P. and Charley Skouras and Goldman. The new company will also pay the former owners a substantial rental for their houses.

The deal greatly strengthens the position of both the Skouras Brothers and Goldman. Skouras Brothers now control the Ambassador, Missouri, Grand Central, West Lyric and Kings Theatre, first-run houses, and the Capitol, a first-run house which they have leased to Warner Brothers for a year and through the St. Louis Amusement Company control about thirty of the leading neighborhood and suburban houses in the St. Louis territory.

Goldman, in addition to owning the Kings, operates the Queens, Woodland and Kingsland theatres, the first named in Northwest St. Louis and the latter two in Southwest St. Louis.

Skouras Brothers, through their affiliation with Harry Koplar in the St. Louis Amusement Company and the new deal with Goldman, have attained a dominant position in the St. Louis amusement world never approached by any other organization.

A deal has just been consumated whereby the Silverman Bros., of Altoona, Pa., owners of a chain of theatres in Pennsylvania, have entered the Ohio amusement field by taking over five representative theatres. The Strand in Akron, the Alhambra in Canton, Opera House and Majestic in Mansfield and the Shaw-Hayden in Cleveland.

The Strand's Policy

The policy of the Strand will be exclusive first-run showings, also elaborate stage presentations and music by Strand Theatre orchesta. The Opera House and Majestic in Mansfield, O., have undergone many changes. The Opera House plays vaudeville, pictures and high-class road attractions. The Majestic presents first-run photoplays exclusively. Harry Brown, Jr., is Managing Director of both houses. The Alhambra Theatre at Canton, located in the heart of the city has been re-modeled. The Shaw-Hayden, the latest addition to the chain, is located in East Cleveland and will immediately be brought up to the standard of this circuit.

Chamberlain Amuse. Declares Semi-Annual Dividend

The fifty-second consecutive semi-annual dividend on the seven per cent preferred stock of the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, owers of a chain of picture theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania, was declared at a meeting of the directors early in December, in the main offices in Shamokin, Pa. The dividend was made payable January 1 to stock of record December 15. The theatres operated by the corporation are located in Schuylkill, Carbon and Northumberland Counties, Pa.

T. O. of Wayland, N.Y., Win Sunday Battle

Another New York State village has made a battle for Sunday movies. This time it is Wayland, N.Y., with the theatre owners paying the expenses of the special election. The theatre owners, in order to lessen opposition, agreed to open their houses at 8:45 o'clock on Sunday night, at which time the church congregations have been dismissed. They won by a vote of 489 to 333.

German Trade Seeks 3:2 Contingent

Suggested as Compromise to End Agitation for 2:1 Basis; Ufa Situation Discussed by German Newspaperman

By HEINRICH FRAENKEL

(Berlin Correspondent)

MOST of the German trade's interest is, at the present moment, taken up by the "Contingent" problem. The present situation is well known to provide for a 1:1 quota, which means to say that the distributor must prove that he is handling an equal footage of German and foreign product, while foreign educationals, topicals, etc., as well as short-comedy stuff may be imported without any restrictions.

While the most important concerns of the German trade, such as Ufa and Phoebus, are quite content with this solution of the import problem and absolutely in favor of keeping up that quota for the next year, the other part of the German trade is of the opinion that German production would get and should be given a considerable fillip by tightening the contingent to 2:1 instead of 1:1 for the coming year.

Distributors' Association Split

During the recent annual meeting of the German Distributors' Association (as a matter of fact the tenth of its existence), opinions regarding the contingent came to such a clash that the usual compromise could not be reached and a dissolution and split-up of the whole organization was the only way to bring that very heated meeting to a close. Which means to say that in the future there will be two distributors' associations in Germany.

In the meantime the trade has taken an opportunity of presenting its (very far from uniform) opinion to the Home Office, which will have the ultimate decision regarding the future settlement of the German import situation. The Minister, being confronted by such widely different opinions on the part of the trade, suggested a compromise by asking both parties to split the difference and agree on a 3:2 quota. As a matter of fact, it does not seem at all impossible that a solution along those lines will be reached, although the followers of the 2:1 doctrine are stated to be absolutely averse to any compromise whatsoever.

On the other hand, many people with intimate knowledge of German productions' financial possibilities harbor grave doubts as to the practicability of a 2:1 or even a 3:2 quota. As a matter of fact, under the present circumstances it seems to be pretty hard to find even the funds required for the German productions necessitated by the market's demands under a 1:1 quota.

However this may be, the Home Office has heard both parties and will have to pass an ultimate decision very shortly.

An Additional Problem

Another highly important problem which will have to be decided is the one of the transferability of the Contingent.

According to the present system the Contingent is intransferable in principle; exceptions are, however, regularly granted by the "Reichswirtschaftsministerium" on the argument that small independent producers are thus furnished with a little capital. It remains to be seen if, under the new settlement this position will be altered or may be another compromise be reached at.

The Ufa Crisis

The financial status of Ufa has lately been very much in the limelight of the important German lay press, most of the leading commercial editors having handed out severe criticisms regarding the financial status of the Company, and its steadily increasing indebtedness.

Last year, it will be remembered, Ufa had to take up a four-million-dollar loan from Paramount and Metro in order to pay off her most pressing debts to the Deutsche Bank. At this time the indebtedness of the company was justified and explained by her very ambitious production program.

Then the originator of this ambitious program, looking for quality regardless of expense, viz., Erich Pommer, quit for America and Dr. Bausback, the new Ufa chief, started a new policy of saving everywhere. Many critics said that this saving policy, was in part, overdone, going at the expense of quality and revenue. Anyway, Bausback's savings in this year amounted to something around seven million marks.

Financial Position

Nevertheless, the financial position seems to be worse than it was, in spite of the fact that this year's production was far from ambitious and that some of the American revenue for last year's expensive productions ("Variety," "Waltz Dream," etc.) has flown in already. In spite of all this, Ufa's debts to the Deutsche Bank had again mounted up to somewhat around eight million dollars, which, figuring last year's loan from the American partners, as well as the fifteen-million-marks convertible bonds from the year before last, makes Ufa's indebtedness rise up to the imposing figure of somewhat near twenty million dollars. As a matter of fact the yearly interest due on the Ufa debts has surpassed the amount of one and one-half million dollars already.

During the last few days the Board of Directors has decided on a most energetic remedy to get the company out of the crisis. The incorporated capital of the company was reduced by 3:1, viz., from forty-five million marks to fifteen million marks, and it is now going to be replenished by giving each shareholder the option of paying the double amount of his shares value in order to get it restamped. The shares on which this option will not be exercised within a certain period should be taken over by the bank.

The general meeting of the shareholders is scheduled to take place in the early part of January.

Comerford Nation-Wide Chain Sought, Report

M. J. COMERFORD, who has just completed purchase of the Exchange, and is interested with each of the two companies running opposition houses in Binghamton, N. Y., plans to extend his circuit from coast to coast, according to Ned Kornblite, his partner in the Kodeco Co., which has three houses here and theatres at Wilkes-Barre and Scranton.

The Exchange was purchased from Frank A. Kenney who is retiring from the theatre business.

There are at present 115 houses in the Comerford chain, according to Kornblite, who says Comerford soon will extend operations to Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago.

New Use Found for the Moving Picture

The moving picture is gradually becoming an adjunct to the tourist travel agent. At the Central African Exhibition at the Louvre recently, the screen gave some remarkable views of the Saharan roses, while a previous film of the same expedition, entitled "La Croisiere Noire," enjoyed a successful run in Paris and is now being shown in outlying theatres. Recently, the Scandinavian countries have been making use of this film for propaganda purposes. In this connection it is interesting to note that films about Brittany were shown at the Grande Salle des Fetes in Paris recently.

Pathe News Editor to Join Famous, Is Report

Published reports this week indicate that Emanuel Cohen, for many years editor of Pathe News, may join the new short subject department of Famous Players-Lasky. Whether this refers only to the proposed Paramount news weekly, or would include all short subjects, is not made clear. Neither Famous nor Pathe would confirm or deny the report.

Rumanian Concern Completes Its First Production

The Mute Art Academy of Bucharest, Rumania, created by the Association des Amis du Cinema (Moving Picture Friends' Association), has completed its first film, entitled "Iades," under the direction of Horia Igirosano, from the scenario of N. N. Serbanesco. The cast is composed entirely of Rumanian actors.

American Firm Installs Tenth Organ in England

A large American concern manufacturing musical instruments has just installed its tenth organ in England, at the Palladiu, Brixton, a suburb of London. Four months were required to install the instrument.

Re-Alignment in F. B. O. Sales Force

Lee Marcus Officially Designated General Sales Manager; Division and Branch Managers in New Territories

IN line with F.B.O.'s production plans for the coming year, Joseph P. Kennedy announces the first step in preparing their sales forces to handle this movement in the form of re-designating the Division Managers and the Eastern Branch Managers, and either increasing or subdividing their respective supervisory territories.

Lee Marcus is officially designated General Sales Manager, covering the entire United States.

Sidney M. Katz has been appointed Eastern Sales Manager. He will have jurisdiction over F.B.O. branches located at New Haven, Albany, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta and Jacksonville. Mr. Katz joined the F.B.O. organization as a salesman in the New York Exchange in the summer of 1922, and remained there until he worked up to Assistant Manager. Over a year ago he was taken into the Home Office to do special work, and for the past year has been supervising the sales in New Haven, Albany, Buffalo and Washington.

C. E. Penrod will be Central Sales Manager covering the Indianapolis, St. Louis, Oklahoma City, Detroit, Cincinnati, Cleveland and Memphis offices. Penrod is an old-timer in the picture business, his experience going back to the days of General Film. About seven years ago he joined the Fox organization and was rapidly advanced to the position of District Manager. He joined F.B.O. in 1922, having charge of the Cleveland office, and shortly after that was appointed District Manager. He has a host of exhibitor friends in the Central States to whom his new assignment will be a most welcome one.

Cleve Adams will be known as Mid-West Sales Manager, covering the Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Des Moines, New Orleans, Dallas and Kansas City offices. After a long and successful career with Universal Pictures Corporation as salesman, Branch Manager and then District Manager and Assistant Sales Manager, Mr. Adams then cast his lot with F.B.O. in the capacity of Division Manager. Cleve, as he is popularly designated, is one of the most liked men in the Mid-West, with a host of friends from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. His headquarters will remain in Chicago.

This new alignment brings about the transfer of M. J. Weisfeldt from the Central West to the Pacific Coast. His territory will embrace Denver, Salt Lake City, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles, and Mr. Weisfeldt will be known as Western Sales Manager. Max Weisfeldt has been in the picture business for ten years, having held some very responsible positions with the Fox organization, including Sales Manager for Great Britain. After his return from England, Mr. Weisfeldt perceived the future of F.B.O., which was a very fast-growing organization at that time, and joined the company as Minneapolis Branch Manager. Shortly afterwards, Harry M. Berman appointed him Division Manager in the Middle West. Mr. Weisfeldt's headquarters will be in San Francisco.

The Eastern Branch Managers are to be designated as territorial Branch Managers. Charles Rosenzweig will be known as New York City Sales Manager with jurisdiction over the entire metropolitan district. Rosenzweig has managed the New York office of F.B.O. since 1922, coming over from the big U. Exchange. He is one of the most popular and well-liked men in the entire metropolitan district.

Jerome Safron, who has been managing the Philadelphia office, has been designated as Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey Sales Manager. From point of service, Safron is the oldest employee in the service of the company, having been salesman for the Mutual Film Company in New York City, and continuing with the Robertson-Cole Company and then with F.B.O., having served as Branch Manager and Special Representative. His experience has been legion-wide in the picture business. A few years ago Harry Berman decided to place Safron in charge of the Philadelphia office, and he has made an enviable record there.

Ted O'Leary, at present Boston Branch Manager, will be New England Sales Manager. O'Leary is relatively a newcomer in the picture business, having been one of the leading bond salesmen in the New England States for many years. Realizing the opportunities represented in the picture industry, Mr. O'Leary cast his lot with F.B.O. about a year ago, and has rounded out a very successful selling season in New England.

This change and expansion in territorial supervision again reveals the policy of the executives of Film Booking Offices, namely, to place older employees in the more important positions rather than to go outside of the organization, as is usually done in programs of this kind. This redesignation of territories and duties will permit a greater flexibility and concentration in next season's selling campaign.

J. I. Schnitzer, Senior Vice-President, states that these changes will be effective shortly after the first of the year.

Fraser Declares New Year Will Be Most Prosperous Industry Has Known

WILLIAM R. FRASER, general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, who has just completed an exhaustive analysis of picture and business conditions throughout the world, states that the most productive year in its annals is just around the corner for the motion picture industry. Some of the reasons on which Mr. Fraser bases his prediction are reduction of income taxes, all manufacturers reporting their biggest year and the fact that he expects the next twelve months to bring forth another crop of splendid pictures.

Regarding Europe Mr. Fraser said: "While central Europe is in a state of upheaval at the present time, I look for conditions to be cleared up before long, with but little reaction being felt by American picture producers and distributors. The steadying European financial conditions can have only the most beneficial effect on the export of our product. The agitation in some European quarters against American pictures probably will die of the weight of good pictures against it. European audiences are demanding only the highest grade of pictures now, and if American picture-makers can fill this demand, we need have no worry about the status of our films abroad."

"Tell It to the Marines" Opens

Military Atmosphere for Premiere at Embassy Theatre, New York City

IN the foyer of the Embassy Theatre, Dec. 23, prior to the overture to the first showing of "Tell It to the Marines," Admiral Plunkett, in charge of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, encountered Major-General John A. LeJeune, head of the Marines. "LeJeune," said he, "of all the absurd titles for a picture I have ever heard, this is the worst; just imagine being able to tell anything to the marines?"

The LeJeune reply was inaudible in the laughter that followed, which was unfair and unfortunate, because the marines usually hold their own on land or sea. And yet the comment of the erect, gray-haired sailor was more or less justified, because it was voicing the opinion expressed later in subtitles by the star of the picture whose opening was being celebrated. Lon Chaney, as the hard-boiled sergeant of marines, was experiencing the great difficulty in telling things to his recruits, particularly to William Haines.

With the arrival of Pete Harrison, saluted for some unknown reason by the two lines of Marines on either side of the lobby, the latest Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer special might be regarded as truly started, even though it was some time after that before the first strains of the Marines' marching song, cleverly woven into the overture by Messrs. Axt and Bowes were heard. The opening was characterized by its military atmosphere with gold braid and dark-blue broadcloth much in evidence.

The guest of honor logically was Major-General LeJeune, the man who heads the activities of the much-publicized branch of the service, and which now has a screen play devoted to it. That the more simon-pure naval branch of the service might pay tribute to their brothers-in-arms, came Admiral Plunkett. Two naval bands and a picked detail of Marine Warrant officers escorted General LeJeune. Many other officers of the army, navy and the marine corps lent moral and physical support to the premiere.

Not all the attention of the audience that filled the Embassy Theatre was focussed on the men wearing the uniforms, as celebrities from many other walks in life claimed their own meed of publicity. Among them, were Mae Murray, whose newest picture, "Valencia," was to open a few days later; her husband, Prince David Divani, William Haines, ex-Harvard man and marine; Alice Joyce, Major Bowes, Agnes Christine Johnston, scenarist and her play-writing husband, Frank Dazey, General McCray and Captain Miller.

Seven January M-G-M Releases

Gilbert, Chaney, Gish, Davies, Coogan, Haines-Windsor and McCoy Films

STARTING the new year, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will release a January card of seven releases, including "The Scarlet Letter," "Tell It to the Marines," "The Show," "The Red Mill," "Johnny Get Your Haircut," "A Little Journey" and "The Wilderness Road."

On January 8, Lillian Gish's "The Scarlet Letter," with the prestige of a New York run on Broadway behind it, comes to the exhibitor. "The picture was directed by Victor Seastrom, who has to his credit "The Tower of Lies" and "He Who Gets Slapped." It introduces the Swedish star, Lars Hanson, and will probably be shown at the New York Capitol early in January. At this time also there will be released "A Little Journey," an adaptation of Rachel Crother's play, co-featuring Claire Windsor and William Haines. Robert Z. Leonard directed.

"Johnny Get Your Haircut," a Jackie Coogan starring vehicle, the first Coogan release for a considerable period and in which the young star officially grows up, has been set for January 15. Millard Webb directed this from a story by the late Gerald Beaumont. Also booked for release on the same date, is the second Tim McCoy historical Western, "Winners of the Wilderness," a drama of Colonial days. W. S. Vandyke directed Joan Crawford in the leading feminine role and Roy D'Arcy and Louise Lorraine. The release date for "The Red Mill," an elaborate adaptation of the musical play and serialized story, is January 22. The film was directed by William Goodrich. Marion Davies is starred and Owen Moore, George Fawcett and Karl Dane have prominent parts.

On the 28th of the month "The Show" and "Tell It to the Marines" are to be released. The former serves as a vehicle for John Gilbert, whose "Flesh and the Devil" will open at the New York Capitol in the near future. It is a tale of the Hungarian underworld, with Renee Adoree appearing opposite the star. Tod Browning directed. The Lon Chaney vehicle, "Tell It to the Marines," recently had its premiere at the New York Embassy, where it is now playing at $2.00 top. Concerning adventures of the leathernecks, it has William Haines and Eleanor Boardman in Chaney's support. George Hill made the film in co-operation with the U.S. Marines.

Deny Rumored Illness of Syd Chaplin

Stories printed in New York morning newspapers to the effect that Syd Chaplin was seriously ill with influenza and that his new production for Warner Brothers would be delayed in production were denied this week by the New York offices of the company. A telegram from the Coast stated that the comedian had been slightly ill with a severe cold, but that he was fully recovered again and was never in any serious danger. He anticipates starting his "The New Boy" for Warner Bros. just as soon as the story can be adapted.

Ginsberg Leaves for Business Trip to Europe

Henry Ginsberg, president of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, left on Monday night, Dec. 27th, on board the steamship "Olympic," for a business trip of several weeks' duration in Europe.

He will visit all the European exchanges distributing Sterling pictures and perfecting plans for the foreign marketing of future Sterling productions.

His first stop will be London, where he will confer with the executives of Argosy Film Co., Ltd., distributors of Sterling releases throughout Great Britain. In Paris he will confer with Jean Vanderheyden, and also with Roger Weil of Super-Films; in Brussels with officials of Soleil Levant Films; in Amsterdam with the N. V. Universal Film Co., and in Berlin with Helios Films, all of which companies are at present handling the Sterling product. If his time permits, Mr. Ginsberg will visit exchanges in other countries which are now marketing his company's releases.

R. S. Bell Appointed to F. N. Canadian Sales Post

R. S. Bell, formerly First National sales supervisor for the West, has been appointed by Ned Marin, sales manager for the Western division, to the post of Canadian district manager to succeed W. A. Bach, transferred to Europe. Mr. Bell has been filling the position of acting division manager since Mr. Bach's departure. Mr. Bell entered the picture business in 1910 with the Canadian Amusement Company, now the United Amusement Ltd. of Montreal, in the capacity of secretary and manager of the Moulin Rouge, their sole theatre. He was appointed Western sales supervisor for First National in September, 1925, with jurisdiction over Winnipeg, Vancouver and Calgary.

Production to Start on New Rex Feature

Rex, the "Devil Horse" of the screen, has entered into work on his fourth Pathe drama, "The Avenging Stallion." Fred Wood Jackman, director of all of the previous Rex vehicles, will direct this one under the personal supervision of F. Richard Jones. Theodore Von Eltz, Barbara Kent, Oliver Hardy, Jimmy Finlayson and others have been selected for the human cast. The spot where the filming is being done is located approximately twenty-five miles southeast of Moapa, Nev., the site of Hal Roach's Big Horn Ranch. Exceptional photographic shots of natural beauty are promised.

Louis Sherwin Titling "Song of the Dragon"

Robert Kane has engaged Louis Sherwin to write the titles for his navy special, now in the cutting room under the tentative title of "The Song of the Dragon." The producer, Leland Hayward, producing manager of the Kane Enterprises, and Joe Boyle, director of the film, assisted Paul Maschke in the cutting of the picture, which has as its theme the participation of the Navy in the World War. Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman, Ian Keith, William Collier, Jr. and Lawrence Gray and Jack Ackroyd are the featured players.

Cincinnati Fountain in Legal Entanglements

The Fountain Theatre, Cincinnati, now under construction at Fifth and Vine streets by the Cino Theatres Co., a Keith-Albee-Lisbon-Heidingsfeld organization, has again become involved in legal entanglements, a suit having recently been brought in the United States District Court by the B-G Sandwich Shops, Inc., for $31,000 damages. The sandwich shops charge that excavations for the theatre, adjoining one of the sandwich dispensaries, has weakened the east wall of the room to such an extent that it was necessary to close the business last April, causing a $25,000 loss in profits, and property damage of $6,000. The Fountain Theatre, when completed will have a seating capacity of 3,000, and will be one of the finest houses in the Middle West.

"The Notorious Lady" Title for Hastings' Play

"The Nortorious Lady," is the title chosen by First National for the screen version of "The River," the play by Sir Patrick Hastings, now in production at the First National Burbank studio. Sam E. Rork, the producer, is making "The Notorious Lady" and King Baggot is the director, with Tony Gaudio as the cameraman. Barbara Bedford has the title role and Lewis Stone is the other featured player. Ann Rork heads the supporting cast, which includes Francis McDonald, Earl Metcalf, J. G. Davis and E. H. Calvert.

Paul Hurst Signs First National Contract

Through special arrangement with Charles R. Rogers, First National Pictures has signed Paul Hurst to a long-term contract. Though he was originally a director, Hurst turned to acting recently and received his first screen role in Ken Maynard's "The Overland Stage." The present arrangement was perfected whereby he will appear in First National productions as well as those made by Rogers for First National release.

Neal With Beaudine On "Frisco Sally Levy"

Lex Neal, comedy constructor, has been selected by William Beaudine to aid him in the production of "Frisco Sally Levy" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Neal was associated with the director for two years during Beaudine's Warner Bros. connection. George Webster will act as the director's first assistant during the picture's filming.

Sam Sax Signs Marguerite De La Motte

Sam Sax has signed Marguerite De La Motte to be featured in Gotham productions. Miss De La Motte is to make her initial appearance under the Gotham banner in "The Final Extra," the original newspaper drama which is scheduled to go into immediate production with Grant Withers as the co-featured player.

Sheehan Goes to West Coast

Fox General Manager to Resume Supervision of Product for the New Season

Winfield R. Sheehan

HAVING finished his business at the Fox home office which included the launching of "What Price Glory," Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of the Fox Company, has returned to the company's West Coast studios, where he will resume supervision of the forthcoming product.

His first work on reaching the Coast will be the supervision of the cutting and editing of "Sunrise" upon which shooting has been practically completed by F. W. Murnan, well-known German director. The director is at present filming on one of the largest sets ever erected at the Fox studio; the set, representing a portion of a large city, is said to be a mile and a half long and a half mile wide.

To be placed in immediate production following Mr. Sheehan's arrival will be "Seventh Heaven," the John Golden stage play which will be directed by Frank Borzage. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell will be the featured players in "Seventh Heaven."

Other productions will be the stage play of last year, "Is Zat So?" under the direction of Al Green; "Frozen Justice," a story of the far north by Ejnar Mikkelsen and directed by John Ford; the David Belasco play "The Grand Army Man," for which Philip Klein has prepared the scenario and which will be directed by Victor Schertzinger; "Carmen" to be directed by Raoul Walsh, and in which Dolores Del Rio will have the leading role.

Among the recent purchases by Mr. Sheehan is "Balaoo," a mystery story by the famous French novelist, Gaston Leroux. This story was especially selected for Victor McLaglen because of his work as Captain Flagg in "What Price Glory." The leading role in "Balaoo" will give Mr. McLaglen another rare opportunity to display his unusual talents.

"None but The Brave," a London stage success, was also recently purchased by Mr. Sheehan and will soon go into production under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

P. D. C. Schedules New Product

Lists Group in Release Order Up to July; "King of Kings" Included

PRODUCERS DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION this week announced its line-up of releases for the new year from January to June. It is expected that Cecil B. De Mille's "King of Kings" will have its premiere some time in March at Grauman's new Chinese Theatre in Hollywood.

During this month, four pictures will be released. They are "Jewels of Desire," starring Priscilla Dean, with John Bowers as leading man and directed by Paul Powell; "Fighting Love," starring Jetta Goudal, and directed by Nils Olaf Chrisander. Miss Goudal has Victor Varconi, Henry B. Walthall and Louis Natheaux in support; William Boyd and Elinor Fair will be seen in "Jim the Conqueror," a Peter B. Kyne story directed by George Seitz; the last release is "The Yankee Clipper," produced by Rupert Julian and featuring William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Junior Coghlan, Walter Ling and Julia Faye.

The February releases are headed by "Rubber Tires," produced by Alan Hale, with Harrison Ford and Bessie Love featured in the cast; second is "Nobody's Widow," produced by Donald Crisp, with Leatrice Joy starred and Charles Ray leading man; third is "No Control," featuring Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver, directed by Scott Sidney.

In March, comes "Turkish Delight," an original story by Irvin S. Cobb, with Julia Faye in the leading role; also "Getting Gertie's Garter," with Marie Prevost starred, and directed by E. Mason Hopper; Charles Ray has the male lead. Three pictures will be released during April, including "Vanity," starring Leatrice Joy, "The Country Doctor," with Rudolph Schildkraut in the title role and "The Night Bride," starring Marie Prevost.

Three pictures are scheduled for May, "The Heart Thief," starring Joseph Schildkraut and "The Little Adventuress," starring Vera Reynolds, included. In June, "White Gold," starring Jetta Goudal and directed by William K. Howard will be released, as will "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," with May Robson and Harrison Ford in the cast. "A Harp in Hock" will be released in July; Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coghlan have prominent roles.

F.B.O.'s January Productions

"Her Father Said No" First For New Year; Kennedy Comments on Business

FILM BOOKING OFFICES' intention of starting the new year with a laugh is borne out in the nature of the first production scheduled for release in January "Her Father Said No." This is an original prepared by H. C. Witwer, who has heretofore confined his screen writings to stories for short length comedies. Mary Brian and Danny O'Shea are featured in this production, which was directed by Jack McKeown.

"California or Bust," a George O'Hara verhicle, is the next one due for release in January. This was directed by Phil Rosen with Helen Foster, John Steppling, Johnny Fox and Irving Bacon working in support of George O'Hara. "Cactus Trails" of the Bob Custer group, with Percy Pembroke wielding the megaphone will be released toward the end of the month.

Shortly after, "The Magic Garden" will be released. This production is based on the last novel of the late Gene Stratton-Porter. J. Leo Meehan, the son-in-law of the authoress, directed this F.B.O. Gold Bond. Margaret Morris and Raymond Keane have the principal roles, and are supported by a cast including Charles Clary, William V. Mong, Cesare Gravina, Paulette Duval and Earle McCarthy.

Before the end of the year there will be released one Fred Thomson, one Viola Dana, one Alberta Vaughn and "The Gorilla Hunt," Ben Burbridge's hunting picture. "A Regular Scout," "Home-struck" and "Collegiate" respectively, are the vehicles starring these luminaries.

Joseph P. Kennedy announces with much pleasure that F.B.O. is about to end the most successful year in its history, not only from the standpoint of increased sales, but more important from the standpoint that productions have reached a higher plane than they ever before enjoyed. Through this, the much cherished good-will of the exhibitors has been gained, and with bigger and better productions, it is the sincere aim of F.B.O. to retain that treasure.

Mr. Kennedy further states that next season's product will be made up principally of made-to-order-for-exploitation pictures. The only announcement that can be made at this time of the new season's line-up, is "Windjammers of Gloucester." This picture will be made with the cooperation of the entire fishing industry, not only of the East Coast, but also of the West Coast. Its exploitation possibilities will be unlimited.

Another German Importation Exhibited at Randolph

Following the recent three weeks' run of "The Slums of Paris" at the Randolph Theatre in Chicago, Walter W. Kofeldt, head of the Imported Pictures Corporation, is presenting another imported subject in "On the Boulevard" at the Chicago first-run house. The film opened there for a run on Christmas Day. "On the Boulevard" is described as a light comedy of the Continental order. Lillian Harvey is the featured player. Richard Richberg directed the film which was produced by the Eichberg Film of Berlin.

The Imported Pictures Corporation plans to present to the American public an extensive program of motion pictures made in various European countries.

Three in January From Warner

Six Productions in Preparation; Fazenda's First Star Film Released

WARNER BROS. announce three productions for release during January. They are "Finger Prints," Louise Fazenda's initial starring vehicle, based on a story by Arthur Somers Roche and directed by Lloyd Bacon. Graham Baker and Edward Clark adapted the story. The picture will be released January 1st.

On January 8, "Wolf's Clothing," an Arthur Somers Roche story, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, will be released. Monte Blue is starred and Patsy Ruth Miller has the chief feminine role. Roy Del Ruth directed from a scenario by Darryl Francis Zanuck. "Don't Tell the Wife" will be released on January 22. Irene Rich is starred. Rex Taylor wrote the scenario and Paul L. Stein directed.

The New Year finds six new pictures rapidly nearing completion on the Warner Bros. lot in Hollywood. Preparatory work on "A Million Bid," starring Dolores Costello, is now under way. Alan Crosland will direct. Darryl Francis Zanuck, adapted the scenario.

The "Bitter Apples" company has returned from a week's ocean voyage during which day and night scenes were shot aboard the ship. "The Gay Old Bird," starring Louise Fazenda, was started this week. Louise Fazenda enacts the part of a maid, and interiors, depicting the home of a newly married couple, played by John T. Murray and Jane Winton, were shot all week. The production is based on the story by Virginia Dale, and is being directed by Herman Raymaker, from the scenario of Edward Clark.

"What Every Girl Should Know," Patsy Ruth Miller's initial starring vehicle, was started last week. The film is based on an original story by Charles F. Reisner, who is also directing the picture. Ian Keith has been assigned the leading male role opposite Miss Miller.

Rin Tin Tin's next starring vehicle, "Hills of Kentucky" is rapidly nearing completion. The company has been on location all week, shooting Kentucky exteriors. "Hills Of Kentucky" is based on the story "The Untamed Heart," by Dorothy Yost, while the script has been adapted by Edward Clark. Howard Bretherton, recently signed to a long term contract by Warner Bros., is directing.

Finishes Comedy Injections for Wynn Vehicle

After completing his work of injecting "comedy slants" into Ed Wynn's first and, as yet, untitled screen play, now in preparation at the Paramount Long Island studio, Tom Crizer returns to Hollywood to resume work with the Harold Lloyd company. Crizer was brought East several months ago at the instigation of Richard Dix's picture, "The Quarterback," the football scenes of which Crizer directed. He later worked on W. C. Fields' picture, "The Potters," and Dix's latest, "Paradise for Two." He has been collaborating on Wynn's story with Sam Mintz, another comedy expert, and Victor Heerman, who will direct the picture.

Lehr Sailing for Europe in Search for Material

Abraham Lehr, personal representative of Goldwyn, as well as general manager of the affiliated Goldwyn interests, sailed Monday, December 27th, on the White Star Liner "Olympic" for England. Following several weeks in London, Mr. Lehr will proceed on to Paris and Berlin.

"While abroad," Mr. Goldwyn said, "Mr. Lehr will consult with a number of prominent authors regarding future screen material, as well as supervise the London, Paris and Berlin premieres of 'The Winning of Barbara Worth' and 'The Night of Love,' both of which productions are released by United Artists Corporation."

Sax to Inject Showmanship Angles in New Films

Sam Sax, president of Gotham Productions, in addition to supervising production details is also spending fifty per cent of his time on the lot where he is injecting in his pictures the necessary showmanship angles which he believes the exhibitor demands. Time is saved and better understanding and harmony established between representatives of the home office and the production forces by this arrangement, it is claimed. Mr. Sax contemplates remaining in California until March and he will then transfer some of this work to Lou Young, while Mr. Sax returns East.

Morris Safier On Sales Trip Throughout Middle West

Morris Safier, recently appointed chief of Warner Brothers extended run productions special sales department, is journeying through the Middle West where he is closing several deals having to do with the booking of "Don Juan" and "The Better 'Ole," both of which are now released to exhibitors. Mr. Safier is visiting Chicago, Cleveland and adjacent territory.

Jas. Young Finishes Fourth Chadwick First Division

Director James Young, who produced the Chadwick production, "The Bells," starring Lionel Barrymore, this week completed "Driven From Home," the fourth of the Chadwick First Division pictures, which will be released in January. Young will start working on another production shortly.

Airplanes Used for "Wings" Total 120

One hundred and twenty airplanes were used by William Wellman in filming the air battle scenes of the St. Mihiel drive for "Wings," the film story of America's air service in the World War, centered about the plot written by John Monk Saunders.

The air battle picture was taken on location at Leon Springs near San Antonio, Tex. The day the air battle was "shot" three generals of the United States Army were stationed in the 100-foot tower from which Wellman directed the action by radio. Among other guests of the day were a group of publishers and financiers and an admiral of the British Navy.

A captive observation balloon was brought to the center of the battlefield, its basket containing two cameras. Sixteen other cameras, six of which were automatically operated, were stationed at various points, making a battery of 18 cameras which caught every sector of action. No less than 1000 mines were exploded on the battlefield to depict the bursting artillery shells and 100,000 rounds of ammunition were fired by the thousands in the contending infantry forces.

Milton Sills Unit Returns From Production

The Milton Sills company, numbering more than 200 persons, has returned to the Burbank studio after three weeks spent at Laguna Beach, California, where most of the exteriors of the Sills starring vehicle for First National were filmed. Included among the featured players were Mary Astor, Alice White, Arthur Stone and Kate Price. The locale of the story is laid in the Canary Islands and an entire Spanish village was built to supply the atmosphere. A sea wall a quarter of a mile long was also constructed at the foot of the village. The company, directed by John Francis Dillon, is now working on the interiors at Burbank, but expects to return to Laguna in the near future for additional shots.

Charles Ray to Play Lead in "The American"

Charles Ray has been signed to play the leading role in "The American," the first natural vision stereoscopic motion picture to be produced by George K. Spoor and J. Stuart Blackton. "The American" is an adaptation of "The Flag Maker," a story by Jewell Spencer. Marion Constance Blackton is writing the adaptation and continuity. Major Spoor and Conrad A. Luperti will be cameramen for the new stereoscopic cameras.

Betty Compson Starts "The Ladybird" for Chadwick

"The Ladybird," the first of a series of Chadwick productions starring Betty Compson, was started this week at the company's studio on the West Coast. Malcolm MacGregor heads the supporting cast, which includes Sheldon Lewis, Ruth Stonehouse, John Miljan, Joseph Girard, Hank Mann and Leo White. The story of "The Ladybird" was written especially for the star by William Dudley Pelley. John Francis Natteford did the scenario.

Universal Dep'ts Speeding Up

Production, Sales, Theatre, and Presentation Forces Celebrate Firm's 21st Year

Carl Laemmle

THE approaching anniversary of Carl Laemmle's entry into the picture business and the beginning of his 21st year in this field is being celebrated by the various departments of the company by a concerted movement toward greater results for the coming year.

A production budget of $14,500,000 has been named for the new season's product, which, Universal officials say, is almost twice that laid out last year; a sales drive will be started January 23rd and will run until May 7th, and the branch manager in the South, East and West divisions showing the best results for the period will accompany the Universal president to Europe next summer on a vacation trip with all expenses paid. The other members of the three winning exchanges will participate in bonus money to the extent of a total of $2,250.

Production plans include the purchase of "We Americans," and speeding up of production on "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "The Cat and the Canary"; camera work is rapidly nearing completion on "Alias the Deacon," which Edward Sloman is making; filming will soon be started on "The Claw," an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's novel, in which Norman Kerry and Claire Windsor will have the leading roles.

On January 17th, Mr. Laemmle will celebrate his sixtieth birthday and as an integral part of the celebration a "Laemmle Sixty Year Dinner" will be given at the Hotel Biltmore, Los Angeles. It will be attended by many well-known people of the industry and especially by a corps of former Laemmle co-workers who now occupy leading positions in the screen world.

The festivities of the evening will include the showing of several films made fifteen years ago or more, among them a two-reel drama starring Mary Pickford which Mr. Laemmle produced in Havana.

Universal's situation is commented upon by Laemmle as follows:

"We are full-grown now. We have firm ground under our feet. Every one in the organization is inspired with the ambition to plant the Universal pennant at the very peak of picture popularity. I am fully aware of the great value and possibilities of this spirit and I am getting behind it with my full resources and energy. Watch Universal speed up and grow as it has never grown before. We have full steam up, the throttle is wide open and the whistle cord is tied down."

K. O. Contest Ends Quarter

December 31 Closing Date; Ten Highest Salesmen Named Soon

THE race for membership in the K.O. Club, First National's honor sales organization, ended its first quarter on December 31 and the ten ranking salesmen, selected from a list of 114, will be named some time this month by the Sales Cabinet of the company, comprising Secretary-Treasurer Samuel Spring, A. W. Smith, Jr., Ned Marin and Ned Depinet. The salesmen selected will be made charter members of the club, which had its inception on October 4.

Eligibility for membership in the club is based on volume of sales, check-up of the accounts playing First National product regularly against possibilities, by an analysis of the number of play dates secured against possibilities and also by the number of specials booked in the salesmen's territory.

A tentative list of twenty salesmen has been selected and from these the ten charter members will be picked. The twenty men and their respective territories, as they stood at the end of the tenth week are as follows: Mitchell, Toronto; Chapman, Detroit; Collins, Detroit; Paynter, Toronto; Walsh, Buffalo; Bibber, Boston; Moffitt, Louisville; Pincus, Buffalo; Morrison, Denver; Cass, Kansas City; Leonard, Philadelphia; Underwood, Pittsburgh; Briggs, Montreal; Ochs, Cleveland; Mansell, Philadelphia; Magann, Boston; Pavone, New Haven; Roosevelt, New York; Busch, Washington; Strachan, Atlanta. The quarter ends with the thirteenth week.

Ufa Star Signed by Famous to Play Opposite Jannings

Lil Dagover, for the last six years the leading feminine star for Ufa, arrived in Los Angeles this week for her first work in American pictures. Miss Dagover, who has been signed to a long-term contract by Paramount, will play opposite Emil Jannings in "The Man Who Forgot God."

Miss Dagover has been seen in this country in many Ufa productions. She was a pupil of Max Rheinhardt and appeared in the latter's Salzburg festivals. She played the title role in "The Captive" in Berlin and Vienna and has worked under the direction of Fritz Lang, Murnau, Ludwig Berger and others.

Fields Signs New Contract With Paramount

Associate Producer William LeBaron at the Long Island studio has signed W. C. Fields to a new Paramount starring contract. Responsible for the new arrangement were the pictures "So's Your Old Man" and "The Potters,' which were shown a few days ago at the studio theatre. Under the terms of the new contract, Fields will begin his next effort in March, a search for a suitable story being made in the meantime.

Will Complete Walsh Film by End of January

The current production starring George Walsh, "His Rise to Fame," will, except for unforeseen delays, be completed in all details by the end of January, Samuel Zierler, president of Excellent Pictures Corporation, states. Supporting the star in the production are Peggy Shaw, Bradley Barker, Mildred Reardon, Martha Petelle, William G. Nally and Ivan Linow.

Tiffany Starts Work on "The Broken Gate"

Work has been started on Tiffany's "The Broken Gate," suggested from the novel of the same name by the late Emerson Hough, author of "The Covered Wagon." A cast of well-known players are being engaged for the principal roles in this Tiffany production.

"When a Man Loves," Barrymore Film Title

JOHN BARRYMORE'S second production for Warner Bros., heretofore known as "Manon Lescaut" and "Manon," has been given the title of "When a Man Loves." This is Barrymore's third vehicle for the Warner Bros., the others being "The Sea Beast" and "Don Juan." Dolores Costello has the chief feminine role. Bess Meredyth made the adaptation and Alan Crosland directed.

The Warners are making preparation for a gala premiere in New York just a few weeks off, the theatre and date to be announced soon. It will mark the third extended run production of Warner Bros. showing on Broadway at the same time.

Date Set for Start of "Poor Nut" Production

JANUARY 15th has been set as the starting date for the filming of "The Poor Nut," the screen version of the Broadway play of the same name, which will be filmed by Jess Smith Productions, Inc., for First National release.

Jack Mulhall has been selected for the title role which was played on the stage by Elliott Nugent. Gertrude Olmstead will have the leading feminine role and Charles Murray will be seen in the role of the chief comedian.

Richard Wallace has been engaged by Jess Smith to direct. Paul Scofield is writing the script. Henry Hobart has been secured to act as supervising director. Smith left New York the day after Christmas for the West Coast to complete the final preparations for the start of filming.

Jos. M. Schenck Publicity Dep't. Reorganized

Following the reorganization of the Joseph M. Schenck publicity and advertising departments, Arthur MacLennan is now in charge of the department. As public relations head for all of the Schenck activities, Mr. MacLennan will represent Mr. Schenck and Mr. Considine and direct the publicity of the artists and directors of United Artists.

Mr. MacLennan, a well-known newspaperman, was for three and a half years publicity director for the late Thomas Ince. He handled the publicity for the Harding campaign in the West and was more recently in charge of publicity during the campaign of Governor-elect Young. He succeeds Harry Brand in the Schenck organization. Mr. Brand is now manager of the Buster Keaton studio. Russell Phelps, assistant publicity director of the Schenck organization during the past two years, will be associated with Mr. MacLennan.

Cunningham Doing "Captain Salvation" Play

Jack Cunningham, author of the screen plays of "The Covered Wagon," "Don Q" and "The Black Pirate," who was recently signed to a long-term Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract by Irving G. Thalberg, associate studio executive, has practically completed "Captain Salvation." The picture, which is promised as one of the most elaborate of the Cosmopolitan productions for the new year, is based on the romantic tale by Frederick William Wallace, which is to be serialized soon by one of the strings of American dailies.

Barrie Story to Be Next for Marion Davies

"Quality Street," one of Sir James Barrie's contributions to literature in which Maude Adams appeared, will be Marion Davies' next starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to follow "Tillie the Toiler." Sidney Franklin, who directed Miss Davies in "Beverley of Graustark," will handle the direction of the new film, which is promised an elaborate screening.

Five-Year Columbia Contract for Dorothy Howell

Dorothy Howell, who as scenarist of Columbia Pictures, wrote fifteen of the seventeen stories produced under the supervision of Harry Cohn during the past year, has been given a five-year contract by Columbia's vice president and general manager of production.

Crosland and Hollingshead Return to Warner Bros.

Alan Crosland, who directed John Barrymore in his last three pictures, has signed a long-term contract with the Warner Bros. and will direct as his first assignment, "A Million Bid," the Dolores Costello starring picture based on the play by George Cameron. Crosland's assistant, Gordon Hollingshead, returns to Warners with the director. Production on the Costello vehicle is scheduled to begin shortly. The only player signed as yet is Warner Oland. Darryl Francis Zanuck, who is adapting the story, is now with Crosland in San Francisco, where they are the guests of Police Chief Daniel O'Brien and where they are accumulating data for the film, which deals with the underworld and waterfront district of the bay city.

M.-G.-M. Signs Four Featured Within Past Month

The signing of Aileen Pringle to a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer marks the fourth featured feminine player to be retained during the past month to appear in that organization's pictures for the new year. These players were, besides Miss Pringle, Renee Adoree, Sally O'Neil and Joan Crawford. The latter two leading women were developed during the past year.

Myron Selznick Joins United Artists Corporation

Myron Selznick, son of Louis J. Selznick, has joined the United Artists organization. He will be first assistant to John W. Considine, Jr., in charge of the Duncan Sisters' unit.

A. C. A. Acquires Rights to Guest Poems

THE American Cinema Association, of which A. J. Moeller is president, announced on December 23rd the acquisition of exclusive world rights to the screen adaptation of the poems of Edgar A. Guest. The negotiations were concluded between the officials of the film company and representatives of the George Matthew Adams Service which controls syndicate rights to the poet's work.

The first of the series will be released on February 1st through the twenty-five changes of the American Cinema Association. These single reel jewels, as they have been called, will embrace a wide and varied range. They will be produced under the direction of Charles L. Glett and photographed by G. Walter Scott.

This announcement comes on the heels of the company's nationalization and the decision to release eighteen Hartford productions this year besides the remaining six on the present schedule.

Winifred Eaton Reeve With M.-G.-M. Scenario Dep't.

Winifred Eaton Reeve, playwright and author of many novels dealing with Japanese life, has joined the scenario department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer where her work will consist of writing originals and adapting the work of other authors. Many of Miss Reeve's novels and serials have been published by "Century" and the "Saturday Evening Post" and for three years she was under contract to "Hearst's International." Her "Japanese Nightingale," published by Harper and Bros., has been translated into many tongues and was produced on the stages of France and Germany. Some years ago Miss Reeve won the $10,000 prize offered by the "Chicago Tribune" for the best motion picture scenario submitted in contest. During the last two years she has been associated with Universal as editor, advisor and collaborator.

Butcher's Film Service in Deal With Export & Import

Butcher's Film Service, Ltd., and Export and Import, have concluded contracts whereby the former secures four special Betty Compson productions to be made by Motion Picture Guild and the entire Chadwick program for 1927. The contracts were only just completed and a full announcement is expected at an early date. The Motion Picture Guild pictures are "Joan of Manhattan," "Human Playthings," "Love in a Cottage" and "Temptations of a Salesgirl." The available titles for the Chadwick pictures are "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," "Driven From Home," "Eager Lies," "Bad Little Good Girl," "Life of an Actress," "Merry Wives of New York," "Shamrock and the Rose" and "Ladies of Ease."

About Ready to Start on "The Trail of '98"

With the script at an advanced stage and Klondyke and Alaskan locations already selected, Director Clarence Brown, who has just completed "The Flesh and the Devil," is ready to begin work early next month on "The Trail of '98," the Robert W. Service novel scheduled as one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's specials for 1927.

Brown plans to spend the winter months making interior scenes at the studio but will go to Dawson City with a production unit in time to photograph the spring break-up of the ice-bound Yukon River. Charles Dorian will assist Brown during the production, many of whose scenes will be shot in the ice and snow of the Arctic on the very spots described in the Service story.

Dates Set for Two Columbia Releases

COLUMBIA offerings for the first month of 1927 are "Stolen Pleasures" and "Wandering Girls." The former, released January 5, was directed by Phil Rosen, while Ralph Ince directed the latter, which is released on January 20.

Films executives to portray the leads in "Is Zat So?" George O'Brien and Katherine Perry, chosen by Fox

O'Brien and Perry Leads in "Is Zat So?"

Director Alfred E. Green, who has just completed "The Auctioneer" for Fox Films, has selected George O'Brien and Katherine Perry to portray the principal roles in his new screen assignment, "Is Zat So?" Arthur Housman also has an important role. Announcement as to other members of the cast will follow soon.

"Old Heidelberg" Goes Into Work Under Lubitsch

"Old Heidelberg," Ramon Novarro's starring vehicle in which, it is said, Norma Shearer has been assigned the chief feminine role, was put in work last week, under Ernst Lubitsch's direction. Hundreds of players in the picturesque and brilliant uniforms of the German royal court formed the background for the opening sequences. The director plans to give the story a spectacular presentation throughout. The studio wardrobe department is working overtime on the thousands of costumes that will be required for the film. There have been constructed on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot complete sections of quaint German villages with replicas of old inns and market places. The support assembled so far includes Jean Hersholt, Chester Conklin and Edward Connelly.

John Mescal, who photographed "So This Is Paris," will be cameraman with Lubitsch. Dr. Erick Locke is unit production manager for the new picture.

Schwerin and Gerson Confer with Columbia Officials

Charles F. Schwerin, Manager of Columbia Pictures' Exchange in Pittsburgh, and Samuel A. Gerson, who succeeds him in that post, were visitors to Broadway this week when they discussed policies and future plans with President Brandt, Treasurer Cohn and Special Representative Magowan.

Mr. Schwerin has become one of Al Lichtman's official family in the United Artists organization in New York. Mr. Gerson has been in the industry for fourteen years as state rights and territorial salesman in the Cleveland territory. He comes to Columbia from the Cleveland exchange of Universal.

Natli Barr, Russian Actress, Leaves for Burbank

Natli Barr, formerly known as Natalie Barrache, Russian actress now under contract to First National Pictures, leaves for the studio at Burbank on January 4, where she will begin work on a picture soon after her arrival.

Technicolor Sequence in Langdon's "Long Pants"

Establishing a precedent in film comedies, Harry Langdon has introduced Technicolor in "Long Pants," his new feature length comedy for First National which was recently completed at the studio in Burbank. This step, which is most unusual in comedy, climaxes weeks of preparation. A battery of special Technicolor cameras was moved into the set during the last week of the production of the Langdon comedy and one entire sequence of the picture was filmed in natural tints. A special setting, elaborately representing a medieval castle, its garden and courtyard, was built for this sequence wherein Langdon and Alma Bennett, one of his five leading ladies, enact scenes blending romance and pathos with comedy. It is understood that the comedian introduced Technicolor into his picture as an experimental measure.

Paramount to Film Original by Ben Hecht

"Underworld," a story by Ben Hecht, a contemporary figure in American literature, is to be made by Paramount into one of the important features of the coming year. The story is Hecht's first original for the screen and it is said that the story of gangsters engaged in the never-ending war against society is drawn from Hecht's personal experiences with which he came in contact during his thirteen years as newspaper man in Chicago, the locale of this Paramount production. Work is to begin about February 15 under the supervision of Hector Turnball. The central figure, the gangster chief, is to be portrayed by Ricardo Cortez, who has just returned from the Long Island studio to Hollywood.

Ford Sterling Signs New Paramount Contract

Ford Sterling, featured comedian in Paramount comedies, this week affixed his name to a new contract whereby he will remain with Famous Players-Lasky for an extended period. His first assignment will be in "Looie the Fourteenth," second only to Wallace Beery, who is to be starred in the title role. At present Sterling is playing a featured part in Beery's first Paramount starring vehicle, "Casey at the Bat."

Walenstein Associated With Henry Ginsberg

HENRY GINSBERG, president of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, has made arrangements by which Irving L. Walenstein becomes affiliated with Sterling Pictures. After spending several weeks in the New York office, Mr. Walenstein will go to Hollywood to consult with the producers of Sterling releases for the purpose of incorporating in the pictures, while they are in the production stage, sales angles which his experience in film exchanges has taught him that exhibitors and the public want in screen entertainment.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

An Open Letter to

Every Real Man

in Boston

Is there a BARBARA WORTH in your life? Is there someone whose love and inspiration sends you resolute and dauntless against superhuman odds and obstacles unconquerable?

Men accomplish miracles for wives and sweethearts like "BARBARA WORTH," Harold Bell Wright's adorable girl of fiction; but in reality, the best and sweetest and strongest conquering force in every man's life.

But now, BARBARA WORTH is more than fiction. Barbara lives in sublime portrayal by Vilma Banky in Samuel Goldwyn's inspired photoplay, "The Winning of Barbara Worth," a mammoth production co-featuring Ronald Colman, with scenes that will amaze you with their titanic splendor, and cast of 10,000 people.

The course of many a life-tide will be turned and advanced by "BARBARA WORTH" and the red blood of every real man will go surging through his veins, his heart will pound, and he will leave Loew's State exalted and inspired by this miracle of moviedom.

"BARBARA WORTH" starts tomorrow at Loew's State. See, and bring the "Barbara" of your life to see the greatest achievement in all the history of motion picture entertainment

Sincerely,

LOEW'S STATE THEATRE

Use Pathe News Reels in Current Events Course

Action of Boston Educators Opens New Avenue of Exploitation for Topicals

USE of the motion picture news reel in conjunction with current events courses at schools opens a new and valuable avenue of exploitation of this unit of every motion picture theatre program, according to showmen who have commented on the action of the Boston School Board in introducing Pathe News into 40 schools in that city.

Pronouncement by Frederick W. Swan, chairman of the visual education committee of the Boston School Board, that the experiment which was started October 4, has proved so satisfactory that it will without doubt be extended, brings into closer relation than ever the motion picture theatre and the educational institutions of cities and towns throughout the country.

The experiment attracted widespread notice in Boston, the newspapers there observing the innovation with the greatest interest, and it is said educators in all parts of the country are watching the results of this visual educational course. The news reels are specially edited and submitted to a fireproofing process in accordance with State laws regarding the use of films in school buildings.

Describing the experiment and the opinions of officials regarding the use of news reels in connection with current events courses, the Christian Science Monitor, published in Boston, says:

"With the use of the news reel the lessons have been transferred from the classrooms to the assembly halls and instead of being handled 40 different ways by as many teachers, they are handled in one way by one teacher, which to Mr. Swan is an obvious advantage. Reports in which the reels are used, state that they have proven satisfactory," Mr. Swan says. "Although the same children may have seen the pictures before at the theatre, they view them from a different angle when shown in the school. From entertainment they become gripping things of real importance touching their own affairs, and pointing out some of the things they have learned at school."

The Boston Traveler, on November 27, quoted Mr. Swan as follows:

"This is one thing that had to come," said Mr. Swan of the teaching of Current Events by motion pictures. "Lantern slides were never sufficient. Current Events were an all-important subject, and this is the only way to teach them.

"Class teachers have been criticized for letting a personal element creep into their instruction, and this is the most unbiased way of presenting the world before the eyes of our school children."

Mrs. Elizabeth Richey Dessez, head of the Educational Department of Pathe, who has had much to do with the development of the Current Events course and other pictures suitable for school use, was in Boston recently in connection with the Boston school experiment.

Stewart Stages Track Meet in Front of Theatre

For a whole week, street traffic had been denied the block on which the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Colo., was located, because the street had undergone a resurfacing of new asphalt.

Realizing the street surface would be sufficiently hard for pedestrians by Saturday, Manager G. R. Stewart obtained permission from city officials to stage a track meet on Saturday night when "A Lost Lady" played at the Sterling. Stewart then set out to enlist the merchants on the block in a tie-up that resulted in the drawing of a big crowd.

The events including the 100-yard dash, three-legged race, wheelbarrow race, potato race for ladies, fat man's race, and others were run off between seven and eight o'clock P. M. Each merchant on the block donated a prize in addition to paying their pro-rata share of a large newspaper ad announcing the track meet and prizes.

Straight Pictures Policy at Roosevelt Theatre

The Roosevelt Theatre in Chicago began its new policy of straight pictures at continuous showings from 9 A.M. until midnight, with a change of program twice weekly, on Sunday and Thursday. This plan is designed to meet the requirements of that portion of the theatre-going public, which desire to get in and out quickly, that is see a good movie without stage shows or elaborate musical accompaniment. The pictures will be current program features from all producing companies. The admission price will be below that charged at present; it is probable that forty cents will be the figure fixed. "The Prisoner of the Storm," a House Peters feature, will be the first of the pictures shown under the new policy.

Rural List Covered for "The Canadian"

Manager G. R. Stewart of the Sterling Theatre in Greeley, Colo., realized the possibilities of "The Canadian" as an attraction of special interest to farmers and directed a mail campaign to them, by sending cards to the entire rural delivery box holder in the Greeley district.

The cards featured copy which developed the interest of farmers in the Canadian farming angle of the picture. In addition to this advertising effort, Stewart distributed by house to house canvass 1,000 envelopes, each containing a half teaspoonful of wheat. The outside of the envelope carried a picture of Meighan and billing for the theatre.

"Scarlet Letter" Slides Used in Church Lecture

A lecture, illustrated with slides from the motion picture version of Nathaniel Hawthorne's, "The Scarlet Letter," was delivered recently by Doctor Patterson in the Church of Our Father, Brooklyn, N. Y. The incident, besides showing how great a part pictures play in contemporary life, suggests that exhibitors exploiting this photoplay may give their showing added interest among church groups by inducing some clergyman of their city to mention its moral and religious, although non-sectarian, appeal from his pulpit.

Bank Ties-Up With "Stella Dallas" Ad

Offers to Loan the Price of Ticket on Advice of C. Perrin

THERE may be nothing unusual about a bank loaning money, but Manager C. T. Perrin of the new Colorado Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., induced the bank to loan money to persons who couldn't afford to pay for a theatre ticket when "Stella Dallas" played the Colorado.

One of the ads inserted in the local newspapers by Manager Perrin read as follows: "If I were Mr. McGovern, vice-president of the Southern Colorado Bank, I would loan the money to any one who could not see 'Stella Dallas' because of lack of funds."

On the opening day of the picture, the bank ran a ten-inch ad stating the bank would be glad to loan the money to anyone wanting to see "Stella Dallas," because they were of the belief that it was an exceptional photoplay.

The bank's ad helped to establish in the minds of the readers that if the bank would loan money to see a certain picture, it must be better than the usual run of pictures.

Colleen's Costume Supplies Buttons for Herald

Manager T. Y. Walker gave out 200 small novelty cards to help advertise "Twinkletoes" when that film showed at the Noble Theatre, Anniston, Ala.

Each novelty card had a button attached and the following copy, "Keep this as a Reminder of Colleen Moore in 'Twinkletoes.' One of Miss Moore's costumes has more than 3,500 buttons on it."

The cards went like "hot-cakes," so eager were the people to get something for nothing.

Baby Carriage Garage New Theatre Service Feature

THE problem of what mothers can do with their baby perambulators when they take the youngsters to the movies has been solved by James K. Bowen in the construction of his New Pergola Theatre, which was formally opened at 28 North Ninth Street, Allentown, Pa., on the evening of December 6. It was disclosed that in the construction of the theatre a compartment in the basement was set aside for parking baby coaches, bikes and kindred vehicles. This basement compartment is reached by a ramp built on a gradual incline which makes it easy for mothers to push the baby coaches down or up it. The entrance to the ramp is just off the lobby and close to the main entrance to the theatre. In the basement there is ample room for several hundred baby coaches. Bicycles also may be parked there. The theatre manager, D. Ellsworth Knorr, has given the public assurance that while mothers are taking in a show with their children their property will be perfectly safe.

An innovation in a theatre-department store tie-up was inaugurated in Atlanta last week with the parcel check service given by Loew's Palace and the new Bry's for the convenience of Yuletide shoppers. A check room is maintained at the theatre to which parcels can be sent from Bry's store. The purchaser tells the clerk, "Check the packages to the Palace" and receives a check which, when presented to the Palace check room after the show, draws the package.

Co-Eds Parade to Showing of "Collegians"

A parade of fifteen cars, supplied by a local dealer, threaded its way through the busy thoroughfares of Detroit and drew up in front of the Broadway Strand Theatre, where the occupants of the motors were bound to see an episode of "The Collegians," as a result of an effective tie-up arranged between the theatre and the automobile agency. The automobiles were heavily bannered with advertising for the theatre, the picture and the motor agency.

The banners on the cars announced that co-eds of the freshman class at the College of the City of Detroit welcome "The Collegians" to the Broadway Strand. Each of the cars was filled with the fairest of the freshman class, each charming specimen wearing one of the little green "peanut" hats borrowed from a freshman boy friend.

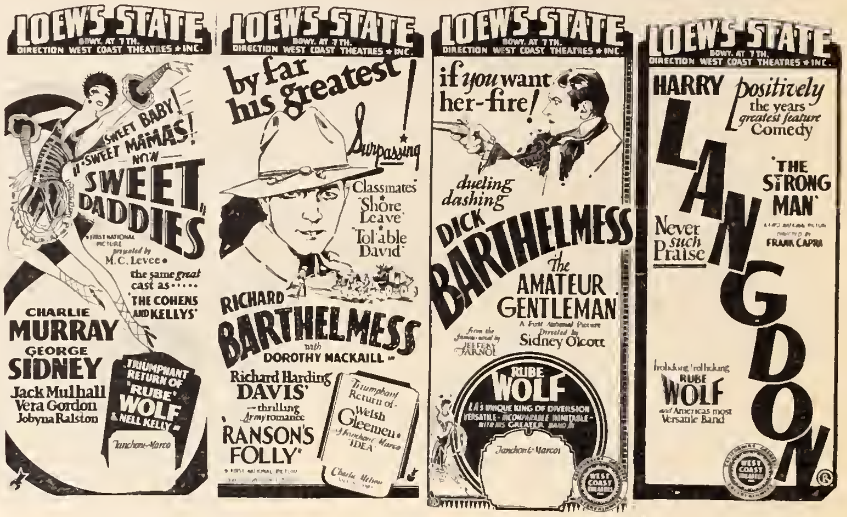
Display frames similar to the one shown above were placed on every job in and around Sandusky in which structural steel was being used when George Schade presented First National's "Men of Steel" at the Sandusky house which bears his name

The New Idea In Newspaper Ads

Personality and "Advanced Spirit" of Art Work Factors in Seat Selling Displays for Theatres

By ROBERT COLLIER

Publicity Director, West Coast Theatres, Inc.



Another group of West Coast Theatres, Inc., newspaper displays showing the compelling effects which characterize the layouts. The ads for "Sweet Daddies," "Ranson's Folly," "The Amateur Gentleman" and "The Strong Man," First National pictures, were in two-column measure

UNDOUBTEDLY one of the most salient features in connection with the past year of motion picture entertainment is the remarkable evolution of film merchandising through its most vital outlet:—i.e., newspaper advertising.

In line with the rapid advancement made in every branch of the picture industry, exemplified by the almost flawless technique found in all departments related to the completion of motion picture production, are the equally rapid strides made by leading exhibitors throughout the Nation in the intensification and diversification of "New Thought and Idea" newspaper advertising.

The general trend of the times is perhaps more clearly illustrated through the press mediums of the city of Los Angeles, the producing hub of the film world and where maximum newspaper advertising space has always been a prevailing vogue. The combined motion picture advertising space carried in Los Angeles papers over any period of time is known to surpass that of any other key city in the United States and the world at large.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., the largest intra-state theatrical circuit in the world, with general headquarters in Los Angeles, have been nationally complimented for keeping apace in the matter of "New Idea" motion picture advertising.

Art Department

Under the direction of A. M. Bowles, General Manager of this gigantic chain of cinema palaces which reaches from Seattle to San Diego, an art department of unusual distinction and merit was instituted with Hubbard G. Robinson, nationally-famed artist, at its head. This department has been in operation approximately two and one-half years, but its influence today is one of the acknowledged factors in serving as a criterion for Pacific Coast motion picture newspaper advertising. The entire Southern chain of West Coast Theatres, Inc., comprised of some 125 theatres, is handled through this comprehensive and alert department. Newspaper ads, lobby material of all descriptions, art posters, pastels and cut-outs receive the personal attention of Mr. A. M. Bowles through his Art Director, Hubbard Robinson. It is believed that nowhere in the United States is there a more efficient and talented art department than that maintained by West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Strength of Layouts

Indicative of the intensification and diversification of newspaper advertising conceived and executed by the Art Department of West Coast Theatres, Inc., the accompanying layouts tersely illustrate examples of newspaper ad proofs, largely responsible for the consistent popularity enjoyed by Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles, and subsequent follow-ups of other major houses of the extensive West Coast Southern chain.

The fact which characterizes the present high stage of West Coast newspaper advertising is the fact that their Art Director, Hubbard Robinson, under the personal supervision of A. M. Bowles, has incontestably exercised in ethical combinations all the established traditions of newspaper advertising, as for grace, harmony, strength, contract and the use of stirring, stimulating and interest-compelling seat-selling catchlines. It may be particularly noticed that the layouts other than being a harmonious pleasure for the eye become a geometrical and architectural combination of decorative art presenting to the public an ensemble of work marked by the same character of ultra-modernism in such scant use throughout American art centers. The work of Robinson has been consistently marked by his strong tendencies to forego traditional influence by injecting an eccentric personality or "advanced spirit" in all his creations. His newspaper layouts are noted for their striking originality in general form and composition and for his inherent commercial sales ability in creating ads that compel and demand attention. Variation in form, according to the temperament of the artist, finds adequate expression in the accompanying motion picture newspaper ads.

The Art Department of West Coast Theatres, Inc., has consistently received the laudation of such eminent celebrities as Joseph Schenck, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Elinor Glyn, Colleen Moore, Harry Langdon, John McCormick and the late Rudolph Valentino.

Puts Doughboys on Wheels as "Tin Hats" Ballyhoo

Bicycle riding is not only good exercise and sometimes a pleasure and a convenience, but it also serves as a street ballyhoo when properly handled. This is what Manager Ed. Harrison used to exploit "Tin Hats" when that film showed at the Rialto Theatre, Lincoln, Neb.

Three men wearing army uniforms, tin hats, and carrying full packs and rifles rode about Lincoln on bicycles for three days in advance of showing of the picture.

The first two days the men carried no signs to enlighten the public as to what it all meant, but on the third day they wore on their backs signs which read: "Tin Hats—Rialto—Next Week."

Short-Subjects and Serials

International Presents "Thrills of 1926"

IN the current issues of International News, Number 104, spectacular motion pictures of important events during the year just closing are shown under the head of "The greatest thrills of 1926."

Among the happenings picturized are those showing the rescue of the crew of the sinking steamship "Antinoe" by the crew of the American liner, "Roosevelt"; the eruption of Mauna Loa in the Hawaiian group; the flights over the North Pole of Byrd in the Josephine Ford, his Fokker plane, and of Amundsen in the dirigible, the Norge; the powder explosion at the naval arsenal in New Jersey last summer which resulted in a loss of $100,000,000; the salvaging of the submarine S-51, lost off Block Island; the disastrous attempt of Captain Rene Fonck on his New York-to-Paris flight by airplane; the Florida tornado disaster and other outstanding newsreel "thrills."

National Screen Service Has Laugh Month Trailer

National Screen Service, Inc., nationwide distributors of trailers and announcements, is cooperating in making a success of Laugh Month. This firm has created a trailer that is conceived and executed in keeping with the comedy spirit of January. The trailer may be secured by writing direct to any of the National Screen Service offices, located at: 130 West 46th Street, New York City; 845 So. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; 1922 So. Vermont Avenue, Los Angeles, California.

Subscribers may obtain the trailer without cost, while the nominal price of $1.00 will be charged non-subscribers.

C. & C. Production Chief Preparing Future Product

William Brotherhood, production manager of Cranfield and Clarke, Inc., of New York, is at present in Toronto on his way to Trenton, to make preparations for the forthcoming product and the proposed new British company. His trip will be preparatory in nature and he will bring with him all the plans for erection of sets for coming productions.

Vera Steadman Opposite Dooley in Educat. Comedy

Vera Steadman will appear opposite Billy Dooley in a new Educational two-reel comedy to be directed by William Watson, who has directed all of the Educational-Billy Dooley comedies. Several novel twists in the story are promised by Hal Conklin, of the Christie scenario staff, who designed the plot.

Educat'ls Laugh Month Films

Best of Company's Product Released in January; All Stars Are Represented

EDUCATIONAL'S releases during Laugh Month will number vehicles from practically every star and featured player who distribute their product through this agency. In addition to the pictures released during December, exhibitors should have a representative line-up of short subjects for exhibition during this period, say Educational officials.

"Wild and Woozy," a Jimmie Adams comedy directed by Harold Beaudine, will be the first release of this month. "High Sea Blues," in which Al St. John is starred under direction of Stephen Roberts, will be marketed at the same time.

Following these two will be "Funny Face," starring "Big Boy," the three-year-old leading man. This is one of the Juvenile series directed by Charles Lamont and produced under the supervision of Jack White. Next is "Howy Duke," a Lupino Lane stellar comedy, directed by Norman Taurog who also wrote the story. Neal Burns' latest is "Break Away," the Christie comedy for the month in which the star is directed by Harold Beaudine.

Edna Marion and George Davis are featured in "Busy Lizzie," the second Mermaid comedy of the month. Lloyd Hamilton's latest comedy is "Peaceful Oscar," directed by William Goodrich. Three Cameo comedies are also included in the Laugh Month releases. They are "Hot Cookies," featuring George Davis; "Dear Season," featuring Bud Duncan and "High Spirits," featuring John Sinclair.

Three Life Cartoon Comedies and two Felix the Cat animated cartoons form laugh features for the month in one-reel form. "The Peaceful City," "Mike Wins a Medal," and "Soft Soap," are the Life Cartoons, while "Felix the Cat Dines and Pines," and Felix the Cat in "Pedigreedy," are the two new animated comedy subjects from the Pat Sullivan Studios.

"A Cluster of Kings," Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge subject for the month, also is suited for a Laugh Month program because of the clever and humorous touches given to what otherwise might be serious subject matter.

Other subjects which will be relased include one subject each in the Curiosities series series, one in the Bruce Scenic Novelty series and the usual Kinograms news reel, released twice weekly. "Steamer Day," "Tropical Twilight," is the new Bruce subject, while "Highlights" is the title of the Curiosities release.

Rock Inaugurates Production Program

Joe Rock returned to Los Angeles this week, following a sojourn of one month in the East. Coincident with the producer's return he will inaugurate an intensive production program which will be carried through until next summer. He made arrangements during his visit in New York for the distribution of a total of forty pictures to be filmed during 1927. Half of this number will be comedies.

Pathe's January Nine Schedule

Mack Sennett and Hal Roach Comedies Head List of Short Subject Offerings

THE second week of Laugh Month finds Pathe offering a Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase, a Mack Sennett “Smith Family” comedy, and the usual one reel subjects, “Sink or Swim” an Aesop's Fable, Topics of the Day, “Rollin' Along,” a Sportlight, Pathe Review, Pathe News and a two-reel chapter of “The House Without a Key.”

“Smith's Pets,” is the title of the Mack Sennett comedy in which Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Baby Mary Ann Jackson are featured. Alf Goulding directed. “Many Scrappy Returns” is the title of the Roach two-reeler in which the star is supported by a well-known cast. James Parrott directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

“Sink or Swim” is the current Aesop's Film Fables offering of animated cartoon comedies. The week's Sportlight, “Rollin' Along” assembles the wheel devices since the first days of the bicycle; the rolling thrillers of the past in contrast with the modern racing, with and without a motor-pace. Some of the champions who still draw great crowds are portrayed.

“The Spotted Menace” is the current chapter (Number 8) of the mystery serial, “The House Without a Key” co-starring Allene Ray and Walter Miller. The story was adapted by Frank Leon Smith from the Saturday Evening Post story by Earl Derr Biggers and directed by Spencer Bennet.

Topics of the Day No. 2 offers the latest wit and humor assembled from the four corners of the earth. In Pathe Review No. 2 some fascinating subjects are presented—“Sky Painting,” the beauty of the skies as seen by a camera artist; “Satisfying France's Sweet Tooth;” The source of France's sugar supply—a Pathecolor unit showing natives harvesting the sugar cane fields of the West Indies; “Fashions of 1927,” the forecasts of Irene Castle, America's best dressed woman. Pathe News Numbers 6 and 7 offer topical scenes of last minute world events.

Sennett Pathe Units Busy on New Two-Reel Comedies

Three Mack Sennett production companies are now at work at the Los Angeles studio and others are set to start very soon on new comedies for Pathe release. Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan are being featured in a comedy of college life. Earl Rodney is directing them and their support comes from Ruth Taylor, Barney Hellum and William Searby. The Smith Family, Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Mary Ann Jackson, are still encountering difficulties in one form or another, this time in a candy store. Ben Turpin is making another small town comedy with Peggy Montgomery, his leading lady. Supporting roles are portrayed by Sunshine Hart, Irving Bacon and William McCall. Ralph Cedar is directing.

Sun Pict. Releasing Series of Ten Two-Reelers

Sun Pictures Corporation through Sam Efrus announces that a series of ten two-reel productions, known as “The Fortune Hunters” and featuring Kenneth McDonald and Clara Horton, has been completed and is ready for immediate distribution to independent exchanges. Each of the pictures is a story complete in itself. There are also on hand a series of two-reel international detective stories featuring Eileen Sedgwick and “Lightning,” the police dog.

“Smith's Picnic,” New Mack Sennett Farce for Pathe

Another domestic comedy of the Smiths, the screen family whose members, Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and little Mary Ann Jackson, are to be seen in the Mack Sennett marital farces released by Pathe, is “Smith's Picnic.” In this current comedy is also a bevy of bathing girls, selected by Sennett.

Chas. Chase Santa Claus in Pathe Holiday Comedy

Charley Chase impersonates old St. Nicholas in his current Hal Roach-Pathe comedy, “There Ain't No Santa Claus.” Eugenia Gilbert appears as Charley's leading lady and Noah Young, Mickey Bennett and Kay Deslys are members of the supporting cast. James Parrott directed.

Sterns' “Laugh Month” Offer

Twenty-one Comedies Ready for Release; Prints in “U” Exchanges

STERN BROTHERS offer for release during Laugh Month twenty-one two-reel comedies which ordinarily would be marketed from January to May but which the company has completed for release during January in order that exhibitors may get the full benefit of showing these films during the national laugh period. Prints of these pictures are now in the Universal exchanges.

Included in the group announced are “By George,” “George Runs Wild,” and “Backward George” of the “Let George Do It” series adapted from the George McManus cartoons; Sid Saylor plays the name role. Six comedies of the “Excuse Maker” series are offered; they are “What'll You Have?” “What's Your Hurry?” “Some More Excuses,” “Be My Wife,” “She's My Cousin” and “Keeping His Word.” Charles King and a number of pretty girls are seen in this series.

The five Buster Brown comedies available for Laugh Month are “Buster's Picnic,” “Buster's Sleigh Ride,” “Buster's Dark Mystery,” “Lookout Buster” and “Buster Don't Forget.” The four “Newlyweds and Their Baby” comedies, with baby Snookums, supported by Ethlyne Clair and Sid Saylor, are “Snookums' Playmate,” “The Newlyweds Build,” “Snookums Disappears” and “Fishing Snookums.”

The three “What Happened to Jane” comedies for Laugh Month are “Jane's Flirtation,” “Thanks For the Boatride” and “Jane's Honeymoon.”

In addition to the new releases offered by the Stern Brothers, there are many more two-reelers of these several series, already released this fall and early winter. There are at least four of each series available during Laugh Month. Included in this list is the holiday picture “Snookums' Merry Christmas.”

Burns, Duffy and Joyce in “Break Away”

Neal Burns, Jack Duffy and Natalie Joyce have just completed a new Christie comedy for Educational release under the direction of Harold Beaudine. It has been titled “Break Away.” A specially selected beauty chorus enhances several of the theatrical episodes, it is said.

Geo. Davis and Edna Marion Complete “Busy Lizzie”

George Davis and Edna Marion have completed production work on “Busy Lizzie,” a new Educational comedy. A large cast of supporting players aids in the fun-making.

National Laugh Month Now Under Way

Everything Possible Being Done to Sell Idea to the Public; Newspapers and Radio Broadcasting Stations Cooperate

WITH hundreds of theatres throughout the country participating in the National Laugh Month celebration by advertising Laugh Month in general, and their short subjects in particular, this season's Laugh Month is off to a flying start! Beginning this week and for the remainder of January the country, as far as theatres, newspapers and radio are concerned, is and will be blanketed with comedy and the gospel of Laugh Month.

Laugh Month has been and is being sold to the public 100%, and it behooves every showman with box-office ambitions to climb aboard the band wagon that is parading for him. He can cash in now or any other time in January on the tremendous amount of publicity that is being given Laugh Month.

Here are some of the things that have been done to sell Laugh Month to the public so that the exhibitor may benefit: King Features Syndicate, the largest newspaper syndicate in the country, supplying almost 1,000 of the biggest dailies in the country with comic strips, have sent out material in mat form to every one of their clients. One of the mats is a half-page ad on "Bringing Up Father" and Laugh Month. This already has appeared in many big newspapers, and it probably will appear in your city soon. King Features also sent a letter to every managing editor on its list calling his attention to the advantages of boosting Laugh Month.

Humorous incidents from the Fox Imperial comedy, "Madame Dynamite"

Mirth-provoking highlights from "Cool Off," an Educational Christie comedy release

The National Laugh Month Committee has sent a clip sheet containing stories and editorials on Laugh Month to every daily newspaper in the country. This clip sheet also contained proofs of fifteen Laugh Month illustrations that will be furnished to newspaper without charge.

Every newspaper comic-strip artist and every newspaper columnist in the country has been sent a personal letter regarding Laugh Month, and many have signified their intention of devoting one or more of their strips or columns to spreading the gospel of Laugh Month. For instance, C. W. Kahles, who draws "Hairbreadth Harry" for the Philadelphia Public Ledger Syndicate, serving over a hundred newspapers, will devote every one of his strips during the third week in January to Laugh Month. "Dib," creator of "Danny Dingle," for King Features, will devote his strips of January 5th and 6th to Laugh Month. This is just a sample of the early returns.

The movie fan publications will carry special Laugh Month layouts and stories in their issues on sale during January. They are devoting big space to the idea. Among the publications lined up are Photoplay, Motion Picture Classic, Screenland, Film Fun, Cinema Arts and several others. The N. Y. Times Mid-Week Pictorial, a periodical with a nation-wide circulation, is carrying a two-page layout on Laugh Month.

Nine national radio broadcasting stations will broadcast special Laugh Month programs. This number will probably be swelled to twenty stations when returns from the entire country are in—a number which means blanket coverage of the radio listeners of the United States. The stations that already have made preparations for special Laugh Month broadcasts are WHN, Loew's State Theatre, New York; WMCA, McAlpin Hotel, New York; WRNY, Hotel Roosevelt, New York; WOR, L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, N.J.; WPAP, Palisade Amusement Park, Palisade, N.J.; MBCN, Southtown Economist, Chicago; WIP, Gimbel Brothers, Philadelphia; WGHB, Chamber of Commerce, Clearwater, Fla., and KFNF, Henry Field Seed Co., Shenandoah, Iowa.

Regional committees composed of the branch manager and salesmen of every exchange handling short subjects have been formed and are working in every key city in the country. These committees are doing everything possible in their power to put the idea over in their local territories and are ready to help any exhibitor who wants to participate.

Laugh Month press sheets are in the hands of every theatre manager in the country. The pages of the press sheet are cram-jam full of ideas by use of which the biggest cinema palace in the land or the smallest show house in the smallest town can swell its box-office receipts. A full line of accessories, such as banners, three-sheets, one-sheets, pennants, slides, buttons, trailers, window cards, etc., are available. Laugh Month mats will be sent without cost to any exhibitor requesting them. The cuts are furnished at cost.

Everything possible has been done for the exhibitor. It's up to him NOW to sweep the tide towards his own box-office.

Opinions on Current Productions

MacMillan in Greenland—Kent and Rice

(Pathe Review No. 52—One Reel)

THIS is an excellent Pathe review. First it includes some excellent shots by Paul C. Warren, of Chicago, mate of the schooner Sachem, of Commander Donald MacMillan's expedition to Greenland. It shows details from the New England start to the arrival at the northern destination. They are at all times interesting records of the trip and characterized by excellent photography and choice of subjects shown.

Kent, England, is a Pathecolor picture of the first established kingdom of the Saxons. In the southeastern part of England it offers rare opportunity for a discriminating photographer to get mighty beautiful pictures and the Pathe cameraman is such a one. His results are bound to please the movie-goer who loves thoroughly artistic pictures.

"Laboring for Life" shows how rice is grown to support the lives of China's three hundred and fifty million people. Human life and labor being cheap, naturally machinery is not employed. This picture shows the cultivation of rice to its harvesting and preparation for the table.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Where Friendship Ceases"

(Pathe-Aesop Fable—One Reel)

MICE and then mice; they over-run the December 26th Fable. And the victims are Tom the cat and Farmer Al. First they put the cat out of business, then attack Al. He chases them through water pipes, in and out of bureau drawers, upstairs, downstairs, all over the house. Finally, as a sort of crowning insult, they fasten some twine to his leg, with the other end attached to a flivver. But the twine leads in and out of banisters around tree trunks, etc., so that when the auto starts, poor old Al is busy traveling at top speed on a course that would make jealous the creators of the average scenic railway. Reported last seen going over an adjoining hill top at top speed, but bound to report back for the next Fables issue.

One thing about these animated cartoons must arouse admiration and that is the ingenuity that the creating artists must possess to make fifty-two of these a year and never repeat. Some are more entertaining than others, but the average is remarkably high and it is rarely that you do not get something out of them. —PAUL THOMPSON.

"Many Scrappy Returns"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Chase Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE whole trouble started when Eugene Palette and his screen wife, Anita Garvin, went to the home of their film-in-laws, Charley Chase and Eugenia Gilbert. If they had not started a quarrel just as the four were sitting down to dinner and broken up the party it never would have happened. In this case "it" is not Elinor Glyn's definition of personality or what have you. Rather it means the fight that followed in the other house and the mixup with the two maids. But it was in the stars and so presumably had to happen. When the Chase dinner was ruined he and Eugenia determined to stage a quarrel in the other house just to shame their host and hostess. That might have been alright if Eugene Palette had not been philandering with the French maid who had a jealous husband-chef. Charley got the blame for it all until the very end and it looked as though the divorce mills would have to grind overtime until the thing was finally straightened out.

The latter part of the farce made one think of the old French farces usually domestic in nature with innumerable doors through which various characters enter and disappear with uncanny skill in just missing each other. It is an unusnally ambitious two-reeler and has many quite amusing situations. James Parrott directed under F. Richard Jones' supervision. In addition to the four players mentioned above, the aesthetic and effete Bull Montana, Amber Normand and Valentina Zimini lend their histrionic assistance.

"Smith's Pets"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE moral of this one of the "The Jimmy Smiths" series seemingly is do not attempt to live in a house with a baby, dog and pet pig: that is if there are neighbors within hearing distance. It was not entirely the fault of Jimmy (Raymond McKee) because a rural uncle had sent the young porker as a gift, and being soft-hearted naturally Jimmy had to bring the pig up. But with the baby and the dog it was almost too much and as the landlord was a grouch anyway no wonder they had to move out. If you do not think that a trio of responsibilities such as enumerated above can cause trouble you should see where Director Alf Goulding has devised enough situations to keep several families in trouble.

The latter half of the picture at the railroad station en route to the ancestral home of the pig is enough to disrupt any self-respecting railroad and this particular movie one unquestionably goes into the hands of the receiver. But not before it has paid several dividends in laughs. Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Baby Mary Ann Jackson as a typically American family naturally continue to co-star. One reason they are so amusing is because they represent everybody's neighbors or everybody himself.

"Travels in Toyland"

(Fox Variety—One Reel)

SURELY a most appropriate and timely release is this, dealing with the making of toys in Germany. First, a long row of different types of dolls is shown, then the various steps in the manufacture of these. How they are put together, painted, wigs attached, hair bobbed, etc., etc. As in Nuremberg, the famed toy-city, it is not factory manufacture in the sense of machines, but rather the employment of individual workmen and women. In many cases the work is done in homes and then assembled in one factory. To children of every age, and that includes all of us, from birth to death, this sort of picture must appeal. For fitting finale scenes what would be a show window with groupings of mechanical dolls doing various things are photographed. It is quite true that the subject of this Fox Variety is not new but, on the other hand, it is a never-failing source of interest and surprise.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Sport Calendar"

(Bray-Novelty—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE and J. L. Hawkinson had better look to their laurels. Here is a series of pictures showing the various sports at every season of the year. Starting in the north with tobogganning in January, the cameraman hies himself south for the sports of the winter traveler. And so on through each of the twelve months. The shots selected are good and make a decided appeal. The inclusion of this short subject in any program cannot fail to score because it is different and all-comprehensive.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Even Up"

(Bray-Fistical Culture—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is provided one of the most complete melanges, potpourri or combination of many college pictures possible within the two-reel limit and the result is quite satisfying. Again it is the last-minute-to-play proposition with the hero coming through and delivering to the obvious satisfaction of not only the celluloid spectators from his own college but of that wider and bigger audience of moving picture fans. The whole thing has been done times without number before but rarely on such comparatively few feet of film and the condensation helps quite a bit. Lewis Sargent is featured as the Freshman who is not to be denied his place in the football sun and the sun of the fair Wanda Wiley's screen affections. His superman football playing ability is rather more legitimate than is usually true of these cinema football heroes because he comes to this particular college having made a lasting name on the gridiron at his prep school. William Henry Cook so has it in his story, and Joseph Basil, the adaptor and title-writer, has honored Cook's premise.

Before he can win the game, however, the gods have decreed that he must be kidnapped on a motorcycle and imprisoned in the fraternity house of the rival college. From this he escapes by the chimney, reversing Santa Claus' route and mounting the motorcycle after he has vanquished two of his captors. He gets in the game but is knocked stiff. The amazingly penetrating voice of the sirenic Wanda in the stands brings him back to life and the game. Final score naturally is in favor of Washington College, Lew's alma mater. Lew and Wanda, Henry Roquemore and Alice Belcher "are among those present."

Albert Herman wielded the megaphone.

"The Musical Parrot"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

FARMER AL is transported from his usual habitat, a bucolic setting, and set down in a pool parlor where he is playing billiards with his pet cat, Tom. I do not wish to be hypercritical, but I do feel most strongly that the mentality of the majority of animated cartoon characters would be more apt to be limited to pool of the two-and-a-half-cents-a-cue variety. It would be more consistent just as one might expect to find Felix playing dominoes rather than chess. The billiard game is not on the level anyway, as the cat substitutes a billiard ball which is hollow and contains an insect which makes accurate shooting by the farmer impossible. A lovelorn parrot with his screeches makes playing difficult at best. The parrot, still in his gilded cage, is thrown out of the window and joins forces with the monkey of a mendicant musician. Then ensues the pursuit.

Start your New Year right (this is released January, 1927) and see this one. You will be amused.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Anything Once"

(Pathe-Hal Roach-Mabel Normand Comedy—Three Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ONCE more the effervescent Mabel Normand as the star of a Hal Roach comedy. Again a poor slavey, this time the clothes-presser for a tailor. Delivering a fancy dress which she has practically ruined to a wealthy widow aiming at an alliance with an impecunious European prince, Mabel decides, on the rejection of the dress, to attend the party herself. She does, and captures the heart and hand of the princeling. The latter, on seeing his proposed fiancee, whose re-made and lifted face has fallen and gone to pot through anger, decides that his prime minister can offer up himself on his country's altar and marry the wreck for the promised money. As for him, he will do in screenland what Lew Cody decided to do in real life; make Mabel his bride.

The comedy is remarkable for the well-known names of players listed. Starting with the star, this includes James Finlayson, Max Davidson, Theodore Von Eltz, Gustav von Seffertitz, Nora Hayden and Leo White. Hal Yeates directed under Richard Jones' supervision. To show how elaborate the piece is, even the costumer is mentioned by name. That is because of the set where the ball is staged at which the prince and Mabel fall with and for each other.

It is not as clever as her more recent vehicles but despite a comparative paucity of new ideas proves to be fairly good entertainment.

"The Lost Soul"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

HERE is an ingenious idea that is quite cleverly carried out. It is not that it is so strikingly new or original, but it differs so from the ordinary run of so-called comedies that it is worthy of comment. Charles Puffy, Universal's corpulent comedian, and Elsie Tarron are the featured players as man and wife. Harry Sweet directed. Two young married people are in the throes of a senseless quarrel. Puffy appears in the guise of a spirit or ghost. He tells them the tale of his own marital mishaps. How he and his wife, preparing for a party, quarrel and his threatened attempt at suicide. His wife thinking him dead, telephones to the "other man" and explains that now they can be married. Then Puffy unintentionally does kill himself. He comes to the young couple to tell the sad tale and point a moral about the stupidity of quarreling. They take the lesson to heart and are reconciled.

It is a simple story but quite well done. The double exposure process of course, creates the visible yet shadowy figure of the fat comedian telling his story. Then the full strength film of the tale he is telling. Francis Corby directed the piece, which is scheduled for January 19th release.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Hop Along"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

THIS is a simple little tale of how Arthur Lake was told by his professor that he could not go to a masquerade party, did go, and returned to find the professor sitting up waiting for him. What could be more naive? The answer is nothing. We do not even know whether Arthur was expelled or what happened to him. All we do know is that he went as a Scotchman wearing kilts, got his knees all covered with ink stains and was a target for the bean shooter of the girl's playful young brother. As the talented and beauteous Ethel Barrymore has so feelingly said so many times: "That is all there is; there isn't any more." At least there is no danger of the brain fag that Ibsen and some of the other Scandinavian or Russian dramatists such as Tchekov cause in our trying to follow their clinical-room analysis of social disorders. And for this we may, I presume, be grateful to Director George Summerville and whoever assumes the responsibility for the story. It is an airy trifle and as such, difficult for a heavy-handed critic to comment on. Sufficient that Arthur Lake is a convincingly youthful Freshman.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Bathing Suitor"

(Fox Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

OF course I cannot conceive of a Hebraic bathing-suit manufacturer being caught with a stock of out-moded, old-fashioned bathing suits on his hands. But if you do not accept this premise there will be no picture, for it all tells of how these are unloaded. The son dresses up as a woman cop and threatens all the one-piece darlings with arrest if they do not substitute long sleeves and skirts. Having the only store on the beach with such garments the answer is obvious. It hardly needs such an object lesson to impress on the mind of the average man of today the advantages of modern bathing suits (for women) over those worn one or two decades ago. But there is the advantage of seeing several samples of the new to drive home even more effectually the lesson to be taught.

Franklyn Ardell and J. Walter Rubens teamed up for the story and scenario. They are responsible for the sequence where an Irish buyer of bathing suits is nearly seduced into buying by being gorged with corn beef and cabbage by the wily manufacturer and his son. But alas, the plot goes wrong. Who gets the credit or blame for the bathing beach scenes with the pursuit of the son who put over the scare the program says not. Possibly Directors Zion Meyers and Gene Forde working under George E. Marshall's supervision. To Assistant Director (think of it, four men for the two reels!) Max Gold must go the credit for the love interest. What Cameraman William Williams did except turn the crank is also left in doubt.

The cast: George Harris, Barbara Luddy, William Engle, Frederick Sullivan, Lou Stern. Directors, authors, etc. (see above). Two Reels—released January 9.

"The Dude Desperado"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FRED GILMAN makes his first appearance in golf knickers and causes a bit of a shock to his moving picture admirers and followers. But this is not for long because not many feet of film have been unwound before we find him again in chaps on a horse instead of in a smart automobile and doing his usual hard and fast riding to the succor of the harassed heroine. The father of the girl had told him he might consider a proposal for her hand if he could make good running the paternal ranch. The first thing out of the box he is held up by the bad man of the neighborhood, made to change clothes with the villain and surrender his car for the horse of the desperado. Then, being mistaken for this cutthroat, he is compelled to establish his own identity, rescue the heroine and capture the villain before all's well with the world. As this having taken place before Christmas it meant the right kind of Yuletide for Fred Gilman, Universal, Paul Gulick, Henry Bate and others interested in Mustang comedies.

The public must wait until January 29th before they are privileged to see Gilman do his stuff.

"By George"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THERE has probably been no one of the series of "Let George Do It" in which there was more justification for the title than this particular release. Sid Taylor, who is featured, certainly is permitted to "do it," do it being playing the role of chef, butler, ladies' maid and chauffeur. The family of his sweetheart are ambitious socially which accounts for "George" (or Sid) being compelled to assume the rôle of so many servants. The most embarrassing of all is, as a supposed maid, when he is called in to assist one of the feminine guests undress. Fortunately he is rescued by the daughter of the house in time to spare him and us greater embarassment. When the villain elopes with the girl Sid profits by the multiplicity of his duties because he is the chauffeur on the car of the elopers and consequently can and does thwart this plot. It ended as it should with the crooked suitor in the hands of the police and hero and heroine en route to the minister. Presumably they were happily married and lived ever after. If the marriage proved to be the bore so many do, it seemed "forever after" anyway.

Francis Corby directed the comedy, which will be released January 26.

"Sure Fire"

(Educational - Vernon Comedies — Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BOBBY VERNON in pursuit of his girl is compelled to follow her to France and then to Italy, all this to the great disgust of her father who is trying to lose him, but naturally to the satisfaction of the girl herself. Many and varied are the experiences of the comedian before the end of this Christie comedy. The real excitement comes in the land of Mussolini where Bobby is captured by a band of highwaymen whom he later captures almost single-handed and turns over to the authorities. One ingenious scene is where these bandits are buried in a sand bank so that their capture is comparatively easy, the sand being piled up by the wheels of the car stuck in the sand.

For a two-reel offering a lot of care and expense have been gone to for results. The settings and costumes are unusually lavish. Earle Rodney has directed the star and the following players: Frances Lee, Andy Clyde, Billy Fletcher, and William Irving. Rodney was an actor in Christie comedies and because of his ability and grasp of the moving picture game was given the opportunity to wield the megaphone in this, his first production. Seemingly the promotion was justified. We may look for more Vernon comedies under his direction with a certain equanimity judging by his maiden effort.

"Balloon Tired"

(Educational-Life Cartoon—One Reel)

ALWAYS rivals until the end of time Mike, the hero, and High-Hat Harold, the villain, this time find their rivalry in an automobile race. Not content to gamble on the comparative merits of their cars and their respective driving ability, what does the villain do the night before the race but give Mike's car a few hypodermic injections? Mike discovers this but succeeds in bringing his automobile back to life with an antidote of milk. Then the race. Early in this contest one of his balloon tires becomes dislodged and Mike has to pursue and recapture it on a bicycle. In the meantime the kid manages to get out on the track, dodge the speeding racers, climb into Mike's car, which up to now seems to have been radio-controlled, and win the race. Needless to state Mike has replaced the missing tire, regained his seat in the car and claims Myrtle's hand as a result of the kid's cleverness and gets it.

Difficult as the task is in an already crowded field of animated cartoons it looks as though this series under the sponsorship of the weekly humorous magazine, Life, were making a place for itself.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Sink or Swim"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

THIS one of the Aesop's Fables is a tale of the sea, of daring and heroism worthy of the late Joseph Conrad, that master teller of sea tales. All the jungle seemingly has determined to go bathing, which means no privacy for the love-making of Milton Mouse and his adored Nita. Hence the broad bosom of the ocean is sought for their tete-a-tete, water-wings bearing up the timid girl friend. A shark punctures these and then it is a question of heroic rescue on the part of Milton and the co-operating life-guard. Before the finale is reached there is a duel to the death between Milton and a sword fish in which, needless to state, the fish loses. And then to land and that fabled "happy ever after" state supposedly symbolic of matrimony whether of mice or men.

It is an unusually ingenious and amusing one of the series that has made movie history.—PAUL THOMPSON.

One Hour of Love

But Not of the Elinor Glyn Brand

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IT is dangerous business making stalwart young construction engineers fall in love with you just to satisfy your vanity because you may fall yourself and also be penalized when he seeks revenge for his humiliation. Consequently it is fair to assume that Jaqueline Logan will never pull that trick again even if movie-wise it did turn out all right. It looked for a while as though Robert Frazer would have to marry her anyway to "make an honest woman" of her after she had spent the night in his quarters. But, as it proved, he had surrendered his luxurious home to her and sought refuge in his office from which the dam building operations were conducted. That helped a lot, because marriages of convenience do not leave a pleasant taste in a moviegoer's mouth and after all Jaqueline was a good girl, only a bit spoiled and wilful. She was peeved because Robert, being the overlord on her father's property, had seen fit to lay down the law to her and determined to make him propose with her three chums as witnesses to the proposal. Naturally Robert was sore. He drove them out into the rain and then began one of those hectic neck-kissing assaults that theoretically at least could have only one ending.

It is a simple ingenuous tale that is well acted for the most part by quite a good company, with good photography.

The Cast: Jaqueline Logan, Robert Frazer, Montagu Love, Taylor Holmes, Duane Thompson, Mildred Harris, Hazel Keener, William Austin, Henry Sedley, Billy Bletcher. Director, Robert Florey. Scenario, Sarah Y. Mason.

THEME: Spoiled society girl makes her father's construction superintendent propose but falls in love with him

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Construction of dam background; torrential flood and rescue of villain by hero. Jaqueline Logan's performance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Well-known names in cast. Comedy as well as drama interest.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,500 feet. Released January 15, 1927.
Produced and distributed by Tiffany Productions, Inc.

Loco Luck

Wherein Man-Dog-Horse Team-Work Wins Out

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ART ACORD working on an oil derrick! No, it can't be true. It is though, but not for long, because the demands of Alvin J. Neitz's story, "The Eyes Have It," made into a movie by Isadore Bernstein, puts him back into his more familiar chaps before many feet of film have been unwound. That is as it should be, for otherwise how could we adapt ourselves to a Western hero for six reels wearing the dungarees or overalls of an oilfield worker? And then, too, where would his dog and horse fit in a commercial thing like an oil field? That much used and justly highly regarded commercial and industrial asset plays its part, however, because on the homestead of the girl in question oil has been found which will make them all wealthy. The money which Art won in the cross-country race, disconcerting and discomforting the villain, was important but only temporarily; the oil find was the all-important thing and its discovery by the hero was much more important than anything else that took place in the story.

Not a pretentious Blue Streak Western but fillled with action and hard riding, especially the actual race, even if it did seem to go on forever.

The Cast: Art Acord (star), Fay Wray, Aggie Herring, William A. Steele, Al Jennings, George Grandee, George Kesterson, George Marion. Director, Cliff Smith. Author, Alvin J. Neitz. Adaptor, Isadore Bernstein. Scenarist, Doris Malloy. Camerman, Eddie Linden.

THEME: Ex-cowpuncher-oil worker wins cross-country race, discovers oil on property of his true love and generally routs villain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Cross-country race. Oil country atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Unusual cast of players. Simplicity, yet holding power of story.

DRAWING POWER: Fairly good.

Length, 4,827 feet. Released January 23, 1927.

Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl

Out of the Mauve Decade Comes a Thriller

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

YEARS ago almost without number a series of ten-twenty-thirty thrillers from the pen of a German-American, Theodore Kremer, made a fortune for a theatrical firm named, Sullivan, Harris and Woods. Kremer and Sullivan are dead; Sam Harris and A. H. Woods are two of the most successful and prolific of Broadway managers. Among the aforementioned thrillers which made a fortune for those concerned with the production was "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl." And now after all these years, through the agency of William Fox, comes this picturization of the melodrama with the inevitable "and the villain still pursued her" theme. With the advent of the modern couturier of Paris and Fifth or Park Avenue with the pulchritudinous models, one of the foremost of which the ex-Third Avenue sewing machine girl becomes, the picture possibilities of the play far transcend those of the original Bowery melodrama.

The piece is filled with an interesting sequence of well-selected and well-photographed episodes and scenes from the sweat shop of the beginning through the fashion show, the country night club scenes and the motor boat and train race with the private yacht that leads to the finale. All concerned have done meritorious work and the piece should score anywhere.

The Cast: Madge Bellamy (featured), Allan Simpson, Sally Phipps, Paul Nicholson, Anita Garvin, Farrell MacDonald, Ethel Wales, Arthur Housman, Harry Bailey. Director, Irving Cummings. Author, Theodore Kremer. Scenarist, Gertrude Orr.

THEME: Melodramatic story of sweatshop girl who rises to affluence.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Sustained interest of story. Bellamy and other players' acting. Good photographic settings of typical New York story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Elemental love story a la Laura Jean Libbey of poor girl, seducing villain and rich man hero.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Fox Film Company.
Length, 5,242 feet. Released December 19, 1926.

Her Father Said No

So He Gave Up His Chance for the Title

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is an H. C. Witwer pugilistic, physical-culture picture that I recommend. It is filled with amusing and convincing situations and well acted by the principals and the lesser players. And obeisance to Danny O'Shea for his interpretation of the prize fighter who gives up the profession with the lightweight title in sight because he loves the girl whose father disapproves of prize-fighting. Instead the pugilist opens a sort of Freddie Welsh, Summit, New Jersey, health-farm and gets his revenge there by putting father and the society "boy friend" through all the rigors of such an establishment and any one who has ever played an engagement at Welsh's place or that of Muldoon or Bill Brown knows just how strenuous such a regime can be. In the end, naturally, Danny gets Mary O'Brien because her father can't help himself. But then I think he will find that the O'Sheas make good son-in-laws and Mary seems happy s why should he or we worry?

Here is an amusing, well-told story that practically never flags in interest though it might possibly be cut a bit in the physical-culture, rest-farm sequences.

The Cast: Mary Brian, Danny O'Shea, Al Cooke, Kit Guard, John Steppling, Frankie Darro, Gene Stone, Betty Francis. Director, Jack McKeon. Story, H. C. Witwer. Continuity, Al Boasberg (he also did the titles). Cameraman, Lyman Broening.

THEME: Prize fighter who gives up profession to win society girl. Manages health-farm where he revenges himself (physically) on opposing father.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Many. Convincing prize fight atmosphere of training camp and actual bout, idea of girls getting story on radio (shots show actual fight) health-farm scenes, etc, etc.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Witwer has popularity (with public). Good, clean prize-fight story, also a human interest yarn with adoption of boy waif and the love story itself.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Produced and released by F.B.O.
Length, 6,908 feet. Released March 27, 1927.

Butterflies in the Rain

They Try to "Frame" Laura La Plante

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANDREW SOUTAR'S story plays as though it had been the result of reading the works of Michael Arlen, for here again we encounter "these charming people" who are so integral a part of not only English but of American society. Laura La Plante, member of the English aristocracy, with extremely modern ideas in regard to marriage and relationship between the sexes, largely a result of the world war, is the heroine. She falls in love with her neighbor (James Kirkwood), who comes from an entirely different stratum of society. She leaves him at the end of a month's honeymoon, not that she is not in love with him, but because it is the smart, sophisticated thing to do. A trip with some "rotter" free-love friends to Spain is her excuse.

It is an interesting story and well told by actors and director with the camera-man playing an important role. Not that it can be regarded as exalted literature or possessed of any lasting qualities, but it does hold the spectator from start to finish.

THEME: Comedy drama of aristocrat with radical ideas in regard to marriage and her alliance with man from different social sphere who sacrifices everything for her and saves her for a reconciliation and happy outcome.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up "How the other half lives" and loves or doesn't. The great mass of people are interested in that phase of life.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Universal Pictures Corp. Footage, 7,319. Released February 6, 1926.

William Boyd More Than Justifies the Title

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is good entertainment. It is not the most intellectual or high-brow variety, but a simple story of a man and a girl well acted by the featured players, William Boyd and Elinor Fair, and their support, including good old villainous Tully Marshall and equally despicable Tom Santschi. Peter B. Kyne is responsible for the story which Will M. Ritchey has adapted for the screen. It is one version of the age-old Montague and Capulet tale of a Romeo whose father is a sheep-ranch owner shot by the uncle of the Juliet, the latter inheriting the cattle-ranch adjacent to Romeo's property. Twice they meet in Italy when they are making the "grand tour" but they are just glimpses of each other; enough, however, for them to fall in love. Then at a Long Island shore resort they actually do meet.

As said before, it is the simplest kind of story, but it is interesting and well done. For a matter of fact, it is better done than most of the recent Metropolitan Pictures releases. Some mighty good camera shots characterize the piece, not only the two Italian episodes, the fashionable hotel and bathing beach sequence, but in practically all the western desert pictures. The latter are what one expects rather from scenic or travelogue films where nature is supposedly starring without any humanity in the support. The romance of the two leading characters is refreshing and convincing. While the piece drags a bit half-way through, there is so much that is good that this is negligible.

The Cast: William Boyd and Elinor Fair (both featured), Walter Long, Tully Marshall, Tom Santschi, Marcelle Corday. Director, George B. Seitz. Author, Peter B. Kyne. Adaptor, Will M. Ritchey. Photographer, Hal Rosson.

THEME: Love story between man and girl whose families are embroiled in a cattle-sheep war.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Beautiful backgrounds. Charm of love story. Good acting of whole cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Peter B. Kyne's national reputation as a story teller.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, 5,324 feet. Released January 17, 1927. Presented by John C. Flinn. Produced by Metropolitan Pictures Corp. Distributed by P.D.C.

Slight and Hardly Up to the Mark

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE new entry of Mae Murray's has a sort of mythical kingdom flavor about it, but in order to carry it away from the realm of fancy its sponsors have given it a Spanish setting. As a story to hold one in a tight embrace it falls wide of the mark—for there is scarcely any narrative. What little appears, touches upon a triangle with a Castilian gob and a Governor having it out for the love stakes.

The star has the role of a dancing-girl—a role which calls upon the blonde Mae to indulge in plenty of frolicsome capers. What else develops has to do with the bad Governor placing a monkey-wrench in the romantic machinery so that the sweethearts will register despair before the happy ending.

With the picture handicapped through a weak plot, most of the interest falls upon the backgrounds and other technical details. Mae Murray and Lloyd Hughes act spiritedly. The subtitles hinder rather than help the action and characters.

The Cast: Mae Murray, Lloyd Hughes, Roy D'Arcy, Max Barwyn, Michael Vavitch, Michael Visaroff. Director, Dmitri Buchowetzki.

THEME: Romantic drama involving a triangle between a street girl, a sailor and a governor—with the latter coming off second best.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The star's spirited performance. The separation of the couple. The ship atmosphere. The backgrounds. The general production values.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Capitalize upon the famous song, using it as musical background. Play up Mae Murray's dancing ability. Bill as romantic drama of Spain.

DRAWING POWER: Title has tremendous pulling power. A generous display of stills should tease them. O.K. for average houses everywhere.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, six reels. Released December, 1926.

In Which Buck Jones "Shoots the Works"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BUCK JONES, being sorry for the cattle that lacked water, did the obvious thing. They were not his cattle nor was it his water but knowing that a bullet from his forty-five would penetrate the water pipe that crossed the desert he altruistically shot a hole in the aforesaid pipe. Result: water for the parched cattle and trouble for himself and J. W. Johnston, father (in the picture) of Virginia Brown Faire, who was fighting the grasping, villainous Malcolm Waite. He was a villain alright, because he not only wanted to crush her father, but corral the daughter also.

Before this happened, however, there was much doing. Buck is jailed, locks his captor in the cell, rescues the girl in a sand-storm, outwits the Sheriff and his deputies, climbs many roofs, stages a fight in a wagon with the villain which carries on indefinitely

There is a lot of humor from the start, with Buck stealing some savory pies just cooked and put to cool by Virginia's maid; tieing the hands of a deputy sheriff, placing the unfortunate on his (Buck's) own horse, Silver, and setting him loose with the posse in pursuit under the impression he is the sought-for jail-breaker and general trouble causer. Exhibitors or movie fans will not go wrong on this Buck Jones offering.

The Cast: Buck Jones (starred), Virginia Brown Faire, Malcolm Waite, J. W. Johnston, Charles Brinley, Eugene Pallette. Director, Scott R. Dunlap. Novel by Jackson Gregory. Scenario by Randall Faye.

THEME: Itinerant cowboy who secures water from grasping monopolist for cattlemen and wins hand of the daughter of the ringleader of latter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Mojave Desert backgrounds. Buck Jones' acrobatic performance. Novel theme. Not much suspense but a good thriller.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Buck Jones' fame. Good melodramatic story.

DRAWING POWER: Good for Western fans.

Length, 4,731 feet. Released December 26, 1926. Produced and distributed by Fox Film Company.

The Silent Rider

Hoot Gibson in Entertaining Western

JUST why this Universal-Jewel takes the title it does I cannot imagine. But that is neither here nor there inasmuch as the picture based on the story, "The Red Headed Husband," by Katherine Newlin Burt, provides the star with an entertaining vehicle. "Red-head" would have been a much more appropriate name inasmuch as the heroine, Blanche Mehaffey, announces on her arrival at the ranch that she is looking for a husband who has red hair. Because of her attractiveness and the condition imposed, every cowboy and ranch hand endeavors to overcome the handicap Nature has imposed upon him and in some way approximate her condition. Hoot even tries henna to get the desired result. And all this time what the girl meant was she was looking for a recreant husband with a burnished thatch. She finds him and their child but being the villain he is promptly out of the picture and her life, so Hoot at the finish is in a position to take over a ready-made family. And I do not blame him.

It is an entertaining tale of the West and because it has a slightly different twist should score. Hoot is good. Blanche likewise, as are Otis Harlan and the others. Lynn Reynolds has done a good job directing Joseph Franklin Poland's continuity

The Cast: Hoot Gibson (starred), Blanche Mehaffey, Ethan Laidlaw, Otis Harlan, Wendell Phillips Franklin, Arthur Morrison, Nora Cecil, Dick LaReno, Lon Poff, Dick LeStrange. Director, Lynn Reynolds. Continuity and titles, Joseph Franklin Poland. Story by Katherine Newland Burt.

THEME: Cowboy (Hoot) unjustly accused of train robbery, exonerates self, wins heroine who is married to villain (conveniently killed) and mother of boy protegee of Hoot.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Ingenious twist to story. Conquest of ranch by the good-looking heroine-waitress. Finale round-up of villain and his gang by hero and sheriff's posse.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Hoot's popularity. The kid angle. Effective scenic backgrounds. Clean, interesting, plausible story.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent if worth is made known.

Rough and Ready

Jack Hoxie Strikes Oil for Universal

ANOTHER western! While the tendency is to dismiss a picture with classifying it thus and saying that, of course, there is neither novelty of plot nor characterization to justify the expenditure of many words in regard to the offering, yet that is manifestly unfair. When a reviewer or theatre-goer stops to consider how few are basic plots for all plays or stories, how much more limited are the writers and producers of a type picture such as a western?

So in this piece in which Jack Hoxie stars, we have again the honest, hard-riding cowboy, the ranch owner threatened with the loss of his ranch through the machinations of the villain who not only hides his cattle so an adequate mortgage cannot be raised but also keeps secret the discovery of invaluable oil wells on the property; then the inevitable daughter of the distressed owner who is rescued at various times by the hero, falls in love with him and in turn is loved by him. For comedy relief, add the rough but honest-hearted pal of the hero with his love affair with the effete, eastern girl friend of the heroine.

"Rough and Ready" is like many of its predecessors, neither better nor worse; not characterized by any startling originality of acting, direction or photography. It will serve to while away an hour.

THEME: "Rough and Ready" cowboy saving father of girl from villains trying to steal his cattle and oil deposits on ranch.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Hoxie's riding. His convincing attitude of roughness toward the "girl." Good photographic backgrounds for the action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Hoxie popularity. Clean, convincing love-story with thrills.

DRAWING POWER: Good in program houses.

Produced and distributed by Universal.
Length, 4,409 feet. Released January 9, 1927.

Twinkletoes

Moving and Colorful—A Good Bet for Star

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT isn't very difficult selecting material for Colleen Moore. She has the charm and the necessary spirit to invest any role with sufficient color. Her latest, an adaptation of one of Thomas Burke's Limehouse stories, appears to be right up her street. It has personality and pathos and humor—and while it offers its faults, one of which is a poor ending, the picture, nevertheless, succeeds in clicking very well.

It's a story of the slums and care has been taken not to make it too realistic. Which is something of an error insofar as being faithful to Limehouse is concerned. Yet it has its Burke flavor. His heroines must love fiercely and not too well; they must taste sorrow and despair. And so Miss Moore does her dances, has Limehouse on its collective feet shouting for her—develops an affair with a married pugilist of Poplar before there is a happy ending. It presents the star with a well-rounded characterization —and she makes the most of it. Her support, consisting of Kenneth Harlan, Lucien Littlefield, Warner Oland and Tully Marshall is good. Its backgrounds are excellent.

The Cast: Colleen Moore, Kenneth Harlan, Tully Marshall, Gladys Brockwell, Lucien Littlefield, Warner Oland, John Philip Kolb, Julanne Johnston, William McDonald. Director, Charles Brabin.

THEME: Melodrama of Limehouse—with young girl having her trials and sorrows before she finds happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fine performance by star. The good support by well-balanced cast. The dancing episodes. The Limehouse backgrounds and atmosphere. The incident. The romance. The suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Use plenty of stills of star in her various costumes. Play up her name and the others. Bill as interesting film of Limehouse. Tease the titles. Stage atmospheric prologue if the size of your theatre warrants it.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for all first-runs and other types of house. Star and title of picture will draw them.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released December, 1926.

The Timid Terror

O'Hara Gets His Nerve Back and the Job

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IT needed the loss of his job and the threatened loss of his girl to wake up George O'Hara and start him really going. And how he did travel once this awakening had come. He not only violated all speed laws getting his browbeating boss to the station to catch the train for Cleveland, but every other social and economic law by telling the self-same boss where he got off. Then for a climax to board the fast-moving Twentieth Century Limited and not only get his job with the firm back but the promotion to a managership to which he aspired. He was a fast worker when he got started, but like his Ford taxi-gift he needed cranking to really get going.

George O'Hara has a likable screen personality and it is regretable that this vehicle is in some curious way unsatisfactory. The idea is an amusing one but from my own viewpoint its possibilities are not realized.

There are several quite ingenious touches such as O'Hara's inheriting from a newly-become-rich taxicab friend the latter's car. How he rips off the meter and uses it as his longed-for automobile with quite natural mistakes of it being taken still for a public conveyance; his two experiences at the country club, one when he is snubbed by all the club attendants and secondly when he comes back filled with resentment and sureness of self. Yet the piece leave the spectator dissatisfied; it does not hold you nor does it ever quite get over and you are unhappy because you feel that it should have.

The Cast: George O'Hara (Star), Edith Yorke, Doris Hill, Rex Lease, George Nichols, Dot Farley. Director, Del Andrews. Screen play by Gerald C. Duffy. Story by Walter A. Sinclair.

THEME: Awakening of young clerk to demand and secure preferment ability entitled him to.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Star's convincing type study. Automobile ride in which the regeneration is accomplished.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Simple everyday story with the personality of O'Hara accentuated.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 4,872 feet. Released January 9, 1927.

Redheads Preferred

And as Usual She Represents Trouble

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

RUNNING true to form, this particular redhead, Marjorie Daw, even if it is only a wig, creates trouble. But then with a precedent by such illustrious ladies as Cleopatra, Helen of Troy, Zaza, DuBarry, et al., this Tiffany production is merely consistent. To get to the reason at once and have it over with, Theo Von Eltz goes to a masquerade with the out-of-town buyer, Raymond Hitchcock, whose signing the contract depends on his being entertained. This necessitates deceiving the bridal Marjorie Daw. But with one of the amazing coincidences peculiar to movies, Marjorie is a school-girl friend of the philandering Vivien Oakland, Hitchcock's "lady friend." Learning that her husband is going on the party she puts on the red wig that supplies the title. Add the jealous wife of Hitchcock, Cissy Fitzgerald, of the wink, and an equally jealous husband for Vivien Oakland, Charles A. Post, and we are all set. You unquestionably can figure out the complications and the solution for yourself.

Hitchcock, reminiscent of his musical-comedy days, has the all-important role as the out-of-town buyer with a desire to cut loose, the sort of man for whom Mayor Walker paternally closed the night-clubs at three a.m. Amusing mannerisms that date back easily a quarter of a century and that fit most snugly into the movie characterization.

The Cast: Raymond Hitchcock, Marjorie Daw, Theo Von Eltz, Cissy Fitzgerald, Vivien Oakland, Charles A. Post, Leon Holmes, Geraldine Leslie. Director, Allan Dale. Story by Douglas Bronston.

THEME: Domestic farce-comedy. Philandering husbands who get in wrong; the hero quite innocently through trying to get a contract signed by his customer.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Hitchcock's comedy scenes. The masquerade ball. Good cast of principals.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Hitchcock's fame as musical-comedy star. Laugh-possibilities of piece.

DRAWING POWER: Fairly good for program showing.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany Productions, Inc. Length, 5,300 feet. Released January 1, 1927.

Bad Man's Bluff

Buffalo Bill, Jr., Does His Stuff Again

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

PAUL BRYAN, the author of this story, proves that Shakespeare is absolutely wrong, for there is a great deal in a name. Buffalo Bill, Jr., was christened "Zane Castleton" when he came into the moving-picture world and as such was betrothed to Molly Malone, alias "Alice Hardy." Their parents had some fool idea that regardless of any predilections or ideas they might have when they grew up, they should marry each other. As it turned out this was alright, but it was a long gamble. Moreover, the guardian of the girl to get the property, or for some such devilish reason, had the second villain, the "Bad Man" of the plot, take that same name and pose as the predestined bridegroom. They might have gotten away with it if the actor with the historic name of Buffalo Bill had not come along in his flivver to spoil it all. You see, when his father died, everything but the unsalable flivver was gotten rid of to try to satisfy the creditors.

"Bad Man's Bluff" will do what other similar, inexpensive productions have for producer Lester F. Scott, Jr., and that is make money. It understandably lacks characterization or any real depth of emotional or intellectual appeal but why should it have such handicaps?

The Cast: Buffalo Bill, Jr., Molly Malone, Frank Whitson, Robert McKenzie, Wilbur McGaugh, Grace Wood. Director, Alvin J. Neitz. Story by Paul Bryan. Continuity by Betty Burbridge.

THEME: Usual heroic rescue by poor but honest cowboy of harassed heroine, rich in cattle and lands and love (for the hero) from dastardly, moustached villain, with young love triumphing in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Hard to discover.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Buffalo Bill, Jr.'s growing popularity in this sort of piece.

DRAWING POWER: Good in neighborhood houses.

Presented by Lester F. Scott, Jr. Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. Distributed by Associated Exhibitors through Pathe. Length, 4,441 feet. Released December 26, 1926.

Tell It to the Marines

—And Hard-boiled Chaney Does That Thing

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE sea-soldiers or land-sailors landed alright and, without knowing about subsequent box-office statements, I imagine "they have the situation well in hand." They should, if they have not. Here is a picture that easily shares with "Old Ironsides," "Faust" and "The Fire Brigade" the distinction of being one of "the pictures," not only of the month but the season. No matter what its propaganda intent, an intent that brought the thorough co-operation of the government in the filming of the story, the result is a straight-from-the-shoulder tale that never flags in interest and is as well done as any picture of recent months within my ken.

Credit for the result must go several ways. George Hill did an admirable piece of directing (surely here is the happiest augury for worth-while things from his megaphone), Lon Chaney, make-upless, contributes to his amazing portrait gallery one of the most effective studies imaginable in the hard-boiled sergeant of Marines who damns, yet really loves, the never-ceasing line-up of rookies, and William Haines in a well-nigh perfect characterization of the fresh "smart alec" recruit "made" by the service. Eleanor Boardman's role as the navy nurse is one making few demands on her ability so there is little but the damning "adequate" to attach to her performance.

The Cast: Lon Chaney, William Haines, Eleanor Boardman, Eddie Gribbon, Carmel Myers, Warner Oland, Mitchell Lewis, Frank Currier, Maurice Kains. Director, George Hill. Author, E. Richard Schayer. Editor, Blanche Sewell.

THEME: Life of the Marine Corps. Love story of a recruit and a sergeant for nurse in the service.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Many. Convincing story well told, directed, acted, photographed. Shots on battleship worthy "Potemkin." In Tondo and China, graphic thrilling melodrama pictures of best type.

DRAWING POWER: Should be splendid.

Length, 8,800 feet. Released December 23, 1926.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Sin Cargo

A Sea Story Not in the Conrad Manner

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MELODRAMA galore is provided in this Tiffany picture by Leete Renick Brown. And I am bound to say that it is good melodrama that holds you and has you guessing to the very end. The moral, if moral there be, seemingly is do not ship a cargo of jazz-mad fox-trotting blondes (or other colors at choice) with their boy-friends.

It all happened because the hero, with that trusting nature and simplicity of soul characteristic of sailors, brought in a Chinese idol filled with pearls for his boss, the brother of his beloved. Caught with the goods by the customs men, the hero pays the penalty because he cannot explain with any degree of satisfaction how the pearls happened to be there. Loss of his license as navigator, a five-thousand-dollar fine, and naturally he takes the first job he can get, on the villain's sea-going auxiliary loaded down with liquor, women and a radio. Thus he is in a position to rescue the heroine who has agreed to surrender to the villain's importunities (without benefit of clergy) to save her careless, check-signing brother from going to jail. Brother makes amends by blowing up the yacht.

It is a wild tale but well directed and acted and does appeal as most melodramas do.

THEME: Villainy of the jazz age versus the rugged honesty of a sailor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Sea shots. Shirley Mason's acting. Melodramatic suspense. Jazz revels on private yacht.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up melodramatic angles of smuggling, simple love story, good acting and good photographic background. The cast also provides you with something worth playing up strongly.

DRAWING POWER: good.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany Productions.

Length, 6,100 feet. Released December 1, 1926.

Studio Briefs

An O. Henry comedy of two reels, "Roses and Romance," is now going into production at the West Coast studio of Fox Films. Carol Lincoln and Leslie Fenton have the leads under the direction of Jess Robbins.

Buck Jones begins work soon on "Whispering Sage," a story of the desert by Harry St. Clair Drago and Joseph Noel. The scenario for this new Fox Films drama was written by Harold Shumate.

The cast of "A Kiss in a Taxi," Bebe Daniels' next starring comedy for Paramount, has been augmented by the addition of Eulalie Jenson. Rose Burdick and Elwyn Raffeot have also been engaged for parts in the picture which Clarence Badger is directing. Douglas Gilmore and Chester Conklin head Miss Daniels' supporting cast.

A second story written for Tom Mix by Adela Rogers St. Johns, entitled "The Broncho Twister," was put into work this week at the Fox Films West Coast studio under the direction of O. O. Dull, who is directing from John Stone's scenario. Appearing opposite the cowboy star in this Western is Helene Costello, and others in the cast are Dorothy Kitchen, George Irving, Doris Lloyd, Paul Nicholson, Malcolm Waite and Jack Pennick.

J. G. Blystone is directing his thirty-ninth production for Fox Films at the West Coast studio in "Ankles Preferred," a story by James Hamilton in which the leading roles are portrayed by Madge Bellamy and Lawrence Gray. Others in the cast are J. Farrell MacDonald, Barry Norton, Marjorie Beebe and Allan Forrest.

August Tollaire, who was seen in "What Price Glory," has been cast by Paramount in "Looie the Fourteenth," in which Wallace Beery will be starred. James Cruze will direct this picture, which is slated to go into work on January 3.

Olive Borden, Margaret Livingston and Earle Foxe are preparing to start working immediately on "The Secret Studio," a Hazel Livingston story which Harry Beaumont will direct for Fox Films from a script by Randall H. Faye.

"Bachelor Baby," a new comedy which Frank R. Strayer has just finished directing at the Columbia Hollywood studio, has Harry Meyers, Helene Chadwick and Midget Gustav as the principal fun-makers. It was adapted from the Garrett Fort story, "Too Many Keys."

In Norma Talmadge's forthcoming "Camille," which is now being produced by Joseph M. Schenck for First National, the star will wear Parisan gowns of the most gorgeous character. Especially elaborate and beautiful, it is said, will be robes worn in the boudoir scenes now being filmed. As the picture, based on the story by Alexander Dumas, is to be thoroughly modern in this screen version Miss Talmadge is enabled to garb herself with the very latest modes from the French capital. Fred Niblo is directing her.

John St. Polis, character actor, has been assigned one of the chief supporting roles in "Too Many Crooks," the Paramount feature which will herald the return of Mildred Davis to the screen.

Max Davidson and Lester Barnard have been signed by Harry Cohn, general manager of production for Columbia Pictures, for parts in "Business Before Pleasure." Pat O'Malley and Virginia Browne Faire are the featured players.

More than one thousand extras appear in F. B. O.'s "Tarzan and the Golden Lion," from Edgar Rice Burroughs' story, directed by J. P. McGowan and starring James Pierce. The cast of this pretentious production, one of the most important on the company's schedule for the current year, includes Edna Murphy, Dorothy Dunbar, D'Arcy Corrigan and Fred Peters.

A one-time contender for the lightweight boxing championship, Eddie Diggine by name, has a small part in Marie Prevost's latest Metropolitan production, "Getting Gertie's Garter."

Appearing with Johnny Hines in "All Aboard," his forthcoming feature comedy for First National, are Sojin, the Chinese character actor, and Anna May Wong, another Oriental. Edna Murphy plays the leading feminine role in this production and others include Frank Hagney, Babe London, James Leonard and Charles Reed.

Harry Crocker, of the San Francisco family of that name, has been assigned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the prominent role of Pennington Fish in "Tillie the Toiler," the Marion Davies vehicle. This role was recently vacated by Ralph Forbes because of a part he is playing in Lon Chaney's "Mr. Wu."

The title of Alberta Vaughn's next feature for F. B. O. has been changed from "Fast and Furious" to "Follow Your Hunch." David Kirkland will handle the megaphone and Garnet Weston is now occupied with the continuity. It was expected that the picture would be put into work this week, but Miss Vaughn's sickness and other unavoidable delays has necessitated postponing the production until after the holidays. Director Kirkland finished the final cutting of "Uneasy Payments" at the F. B. O. Studio last week. The new Vaughn picture is his first under his recent contract with F. B. O.

Responsible for the titles of "Twinkletoes," Colleen Moore's current McCormick production, is Morton Blumenstock, formerly associated with the publicity and advertising departments of First National in New York. This is his first official titling assignment since joining the staff at Burbank several months ago.

J. Leo Meehan is now midway in production on "Mother," directed by Mr. Meehan with Belle Bennett in the title role. In the supporting cast are Crauford Kent, William Bakewell, Joyce Coad, Sam Allen and Mabel Julienne Scott.

Frank R. Strayer, who is under a long-term contract with Columbia Pictures, has been lent to Famous Players-Lasky to direct Clara Bow.

The latest to join the staff of Cecil B. De Mille for "The King of Kings," Jeanie Macpherson's pictorial story of Christ, is Curt Rehfield, formerly first assistant to Rex Ingram. He is associated with Frank Urson and William Cowan in the handling of the crowd scenes of the De Mille special.

"Hello Bill," the Elks special picture which in all probability will be renamed, is rapidly rounding into shape for production. Camera work is expected to start in the very near future at the F. B. O. lot under the direction of Ralph Ince.

The most recent stellar name to be added to the cast of "The King of Kings," is that of Vera Reynolds, who will appear in the Hill of Calvary sequences. The date for the starting of "The Little Adventuress," Miss Reynolds' next starring vehicle, has been re-set in consequence.

J. Stuart Blackton has engaged Ward Crane for a featured role in "The American," the first natural vision screen drama, in which Charles Ray has the leading role. Other well-known players of the cast will be announced shortly. Marion Constance Blackton is writing the continuity and adaptation of the story, which is taken from Jewell Spencer's "The Flag Maker." Major Spoor and Conrad Luperti will be the cameramen for the new stereoscopic cameras. William Adams will handle the Bell and Howell cameras, aside from the men on the natural vision cameras.

Doris Hill, sixteen years old and titian haired, has been chosen to play the leading feminine role in Raymond Griffith's forthcoming starring vehicle, "All Women Are Beautiful." Miss Hill stepped before the camera for the first time a mere six months ago.

The role of father in "Soundings," the Paramount screen translation of the A. Hamilton Gibbs best-seller, will be portrayed by Norman Trevor. Lois Moran will come to Hollywood to play the feminine lead. The production is to be put into work on February 1. Joseph Jackson did the screen treatment.

George Siegmann will play the role of "The Walrus," a denizen of the underworld, in "Too Many Crooks," The Paramount feature wherein Mildred Davis will once again appear on the silver sheet.

James Hall, a former Broadway musical comedy player, has been chosen to play opposite Betty Bronson in her first Paramount starring piece, "Ritzy," a story by Elinor Glyn.

Harry Cohn, general manager of production for Columbia Pictures, has signed Max Davidson and Lester Bernard for parts in "Pleasure Before Business," a comedy with Irish-Jewish atmosphere, featuring Pat O'Malley and Virginia Browne Faire.

Regional News from Correspondents

New York & New Jersey

APPROXIMATELY eighteen thousand seats, apportioned among from twelve to fourteen new theatres, were added to the ever-increasing list of motion picture houses in the New York and New Jersey zone over the Christmas holidays. Most of these were given a short description in last week's issue of this publication, and as practically all the information came from the National Theatre Supply Company, the equipment concern largely instrumental in furnishing supplies, the figures must be considered authentic. We take it that Joe Hornstein and all of his capable staff had a busy time covering these dozen or so new houses where perfect first-night projection means so much to a theatre owner ready to launch a standard of entertainment in a new neighborhood.

Now that the city of Irvington, N.J., so much in the public eye for the past few weeks on account of the blue law disturbance, is apparently reconciled to Sunday amusement in the form of motion pictures it was to be supposed that similar attempts would be made for a wide-open Sunday in other New Jersey communities where the laws are enforced.

According to all reports Paterson, N.J., will witness its first Sunday show on January 2nd. This, according to further reports, will undoubtedly be followed by some more Monday morning stories in the local newspapers, so certain members of the film trade seem to think.

It is reported that the Fabian-Stanley organization has taken over Morris Kitay's Rivoli Theatre in Paterson. The Rivoli is one of the finer type of houses, having cost around the $500,000 mark when built.

Word has reached the trade that a new theatre circuit has extensive operations under way in several sections of New Jersey. The name of the firm is the Unison Amusement Company and it is composed of Messrs. Sobelson, Unger and Thompson, and Louis Heiman, the latter formerly of the Empire Theatre at Rahway.

Unison will open their new El Mora Theatre on February 15th and also took over the Lincoln Theatre, Newark, on December 27. The Lincoln is a modern neighborhood house, formerly owned by Dan Mate. One of the features of the El Mora's first night will be dancing in the foyer before and after the performance.

In addition to the above, Unison will break ground January 5th for their new "Betsytown" Theatre in Elizabeth. (We hear that Eddie Carroll is responsible for that name.) They also will get under way a new 1800-seat house, the Ritz, in Bayonne. Theatre properties recently reported acquired by Unison include a site at Irvington, and two pieces of property in the suburbs of Newark. Besides having a house under way in Linden, they also own and operate the West End and Empire theatres in Bayonne.

In connection with the following correct list of theatres which were brought together by the merger of Chrisedge Theatres, Inc., and D'Stamatis Brothers holdings in Brooklyn, it is interesting to note that Matty Chrystmos, of the former, and the two D'Stamatis boys started in the exhibition end of the business fifteen years ago. After a breach of seven years they are again operating as a circuit.

Chrisedge theatre properties include the Parkhill, 1,700 seats; the Broadway, 700 seats; the Orpheum, 1,700, and the Cameo, of about 800 seats. All these are in Yonkers. In the Bronx, there is the Bronxville, seating around 1,700; the Interboro, a 2,000-seat house, and the Rosedale, seating 1,700. In connection with the Bronxville house, it is said that Bronxville society takes over that house once a week for a special bill.

Chrisedge also has two other houses under construction; one at 234th Street and White Plains Avenue, called the Wakefield, which will be devoted to vaudeville and pictures and be ready for business about January 15th, and the other, the Castle Hill, to be completed during September, 1927. Both are 2,000-seat theatres.

In addition to these holdings, Matty Chrystmos is also reported to have a controlling interest in three small houses in Yonkers, the Model, Riverdale and American.

The D'Stamatis houses in Brooklyn include the Apollo, Classic, Mapleton and Parkway. It is also said that Gus and George D'Stamatis also hold a fifty per cent. interest in the three Cocalis houses in Elizabeth, the Strand, Royal and Gayety, all recently reported as pending in a deal between Cocalis and the Fabian-Stanley organization.

From all reports, the exchange managers and salesmen in all the local offices were more than good to each other at Christmas time. Most of the exchanges wore, and still wear their holiday dress; business is said to be picking up from the pre-Christmas lull and everybody's happy with expectations for a prosperous year. Incidentally, in extending this department's New Year's greetings to all exhibitors and exchange men in this zone, the writer also wishes to thank the several who have contributed the news items.

Many executives at the Pathe Exchange this week: Pat Campbell, Eastern Division Manager; his assistant, Charles Henchel, and Feature Sales Manager E. A. Eschman. All of them in over the holidays.

Two theatres in uptown New York are reported as changing hands: The Consolidated Amusement's Ritz, at 180th Street, Bronx, an 1,800-seat house, has been sold to Julius Joelson and the Hudson Theatre, 157th and Amsterdam Avenue, formerly owned by "Mike" Kikorian, has been taken over by J. M. Karesh.

Over in Brooklyn the Miracle Theatre, 752 Meserole Avenue, formerly operated by James Brothers, has been purchased by Berman, who owns the Hub and Pantheon theatres in the Bronx. Jack Steinhauer, connected with the Pantheon as assistant manager, will take charge of the Miracle.

Another house to change, over in Brooklyn, is the Bay Theatre, 2401 Bath Avenue, Bensonhurst. A. Weinberg, who at one time operated the Nostrand Theatre, 657 Nostrand Avenue, is the new owner.

A Brooklyn house reported as perhaps definitely closed is the Review, at New Lots and Sheffield avenues. Ever since the boiler blew up in this house the doors have been closed. The owners, Lowenthal and partner, are reported as reopening the Blake Theatre, Blake Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Universal Theatre Corporation's theatre project at New Utrecht Avenue and 46th Street, delayed somewhat on account of changes in plans, is again under way. This house, when completed, will be one of the finest of the modern neighborhood theatres. Plans were drawn by John Eberson, Chicago architect, famous for his "atmospheric" type theatres.

Milt Kronacher, Pathe salesman, again remembered his friends with an appropriate Christmas gift. This time Milt donated a magazine-type pencil.

The employees of the local Educational Exchange presented Manager Arthur Greenblatt with a handsome English traveling bag.

There is a report to the effect that the city of Asbury Park will sponsor the erection of a million-dollar amusement pier which will operate all season and contain a 2,800-seat motion picture theatre.

The St. James Theatre, a Walter Reade house in Asbury Park, has increased its seating capacity by an additional one thousand seats and will reopen after the first of the year with a picture and vaudeville program.

Al Moley, of the firm of Moley and Seider, who are supplying novelty acts to local neighborhood houses, is much concerned over the New York Giants trading Frankie Frisch. Again, Al says, McGraw did not consult him on the deal.

Canada

A SPECIAL tribute was paid by the Rotary Club of Ottawa, Ont., to J. M. Franklin, manager of B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, for the splendid community spirit shown by Mr. Franklin in looking after the entertainment of 1,600 crippled children and orphans of the city in a special show the Saturday before Christmas. At the subsequent Rotary meeting, three cheers were given for Mr. Franklin and his staff and Mr. Franklin gave a speech in reply. The incident was given considerable play in the local newspapers.

Before leaving Winnipeg, Manitoba, for Vancouver, B.C., Mrs. Thomas, wife of H. M. Thomas, western division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was responsible for the presentation of a big Christmas pantomime with many adult and child performers at the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, during the holiday season. Mr. Thomas has been transferred to Vancouver to take charge of the Capitol there which had been managed for the past five years by the late Ralph Ruffner.

Orpheum Circuit, Inc., is building a large theatre in Vancouver, B.C., it is officially announced. The house alone will cost $539,000, without interior decorating or electrical fixtures, and the site has cost $200,000 besides. The theatre, which will seat more than 3,000, is to be located at Seymour and Granville streets, in the heart of the city. Joseph Finn, C. C. Hamilton and Marcus Priteca, representing the Orpheum organization, were in Vancouver to arrange details.

When the 16th session of the Canadian Parliament was formally opened in the Houses of Parliament at Ottawa, moving pictures were taken of the ceremony within the House of Commons for the first time on record. The inside views, as well as various outside shots of the Guard of Honor, Royal salute and other details, were taken by Canadian Government moving picture cameramen under the personal direction of Frank Badgley, assistant to the director of the Government studio.

P. J. Nolan, owner of the Rex and Columbia theatres, suburban houses of Ottawa, Ont., has experienced considerable headway with the Columbia Theatre since he took it over some months ago. Special attention to film bookings and the presentation of amateur and community divertissements have helped greatly to build up new patronage at the Columbia.

Seattle

D. C. MILLWARD of the Western Film Exchange, a state right office in this city, last week announced that he had been selected as the director of a Seattle and Pacific Northwest Distribution branch for the Tiffany Productions, Inc. At the same time came the announcement of the selection of Howard G. Mapes as manager in the Portland district. The local office is located at 2014 Third Avenue, and the Oregon branch at 449 Glisan Street.

Frank Edwards, manager of the Winter Garden Theatre, and H. W. Bruen, general manager of the suburban houses owned by Pacific Theatres, Inc., returned from New York last week with the confirmation of the reported sale of the Pacific chain of Seattle houses to Universal, as recently announced. Mr. Edwards will remain in his position of managing director of the Winter Garden, the only downtown house included in the sale, and Mr. Bruen retains the general management of the entire chain, including ten suburban houses.

Reports were current on Film Row last week to the effect that the coming of 1927 will see the establishment of a new Film Row in the vicinity of Second Avenue and Battery Street. The new site, as reported, is about four blocks north of the present Row, in a less widely built up territory of the retail district. It is rumored that United Artists, Warner Brothers and Film Booking Offices will pioneer the movement in March or April, although no leases have been signed as yet.

Harold Horne, former managing director of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, has recently formed a new theatrical publicity and advertising bureau, according to announcements made last week, and will specialize in the preparation of advertising and publicity for motion picture houses. His group at present handles the work for the Fifth Avenue Theatre and other Pacific Northwest, Inc., houses, and plans to branch out over the entire Northwest territory.

Jack Cohen, formerly associated with the Universal office, has returned to his former stand on the sales staff at Manager A. H. Huot's local Film Booking Office exchange. He will cover the Washington territory for Mr. Huot.

And at Universal, Manager Matt Aparton has added the Beale Brothers, Jimmy and Charlie, to his sales organization. Jimmy was formerly Pathe man in the Salt Lake City district, and Charlie has been connected with the local F. B. O. exchange for some months past.

Leroy V. Johnson, for the last several years manager of the Liberty Theatre in this city, resigned that position last week when the house was closed for renovating by the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc. Shortly after, he announced that he was now a junior partner in the Jensen-VonHerberg chain, at present holding several suburban houses in this territory. He will maintain offices for the present in the Majestic Theatre building, pending the announcement of future plans by the J. & V. group.

A. J. Sullivan, assistant manager of Ben Fish's local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, left last week for Alaska, aboard the S. S. Alameda on a business trip for his company.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president and general manager of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., returned to his office in the Liberty Theatre building last week, after a trip of several weeks duration in California. On his way to this city, he had a brief visit with the Pacific Northwest managers in Portland.

Bob Monaghan, booker at Manager William Ballantine's Fox exchange, returned last week from his vacation, achieving the distinction of having the latest "summer" vacation of anyone on the local Film Row. During his absence the books were handled by Jockey Carruthers.

Tampa

WITH the kind permission of the Editor of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, this writer wishes to thank his good friends, and readers of this column, who have assisted him with news items during the past year, and to extend to them his sincere good wishes for the New Year.

Deserving of special mention are the following Tampa Exhibitors: John B. Carroll, general manager of the Consolidated Amusements; George B. Peck, manager of the Victory; James M. Wiest, of the Tampa; J. H. McLaughlin, of the Franklin; O. G. Finley, of the Strand; Charles A. Sappal, of the Central and Maceo; N. V. Darley of the Rivoli; Anthony Juran, of the Casino, and dozens of other good show-folks in Tampa and the State of Florida.

The Airdome in Ybor City has closed. Manager E. D. Krim has tried hard to attract patronage in paying quantity. Just lately he added a stage and put on vaudeville acts with his picture programs, but the added attraction failed to pull the business to pay the added overhead.

Cecil Fernandez, a well-known projectionist of Tampa, who has charge of the projection department of the Trumbull Enterprises in St. Petersburg and who handles the installation of the projection rooms for the S-B-T Properties, left here this week to install the equipment in the new Palace Theatre at Bowling Green.

With the new year the Victory will make quite a change in their policy. The Keith Vaudeville will hold the boards on Monday and Tuesday of each week. Wednesday will be held open for road shows. Thursday, Friday and Saturday a permanent musical comedy stock company will give the people snappy musical shows with a cast of 45 people, including the Honey Bunch Chorus, and Sunday will be given over to the showing of feature films.

Several of Tampa's theatres are advertising Midnight Matinees for New Year's Eve. These midnight shows have been very successful in other years and with the weather just like June down here now, there seems no doubt but what capacity houses will prevail.

Ed Tarbell, who along back in 1911, '12 and '13, was manager of the then big houses of Tampa, was a visitor here this week. Ed is now representing the Marr & Colton Company, who make organs for the theatres, in the Southern States. Ed reports business good and says that he is putting in organs in the small cities as well as the large, for, "good music puts a powerful kick into a picture program," says Ed.

R. H. Palmer, Jr., formerly manager of the Frostproof Theatre, has been appointed manager of the Gem Theatre of Jacksonville, by President Charles A. Sappal, of the S-B-T Properties, Inc.

Moving pictures will be shown for the first time at the Tampa Municipal Auditorium, when the Municipal Chorus of 150 voices will present a film taken in the Holy Land.

Tarpon Springs will be added to the "No Sunday Show Towns" as a result of an election held there last week, in which 225 votes were cast in favor of Sunday shows and 256 against them, which puts the lid on with a majority of 31 votes.

Graham and Danielson have opened a theatre for negroes in Dade City. The house has not been given a name as yet, the owners having offered a prize to the one suggesting the most appropriate name. Dade City has two theatres for the white race, and as there is quite a negro population the new theatre should do well.

P. C. Parrish, purchasing agent for National Theatre Supply Company, returned to Atlanta last week from a trip to the Memphis branch.

George R. Allison, generalissimo of the local Fox forces, played a familiar and becoming role Friday when he officiated at the Christmas tree celebration which he has made an institution at the Fox Exchange.

C. L. Peavey, local F.B.O. manager, assembled his staff around a well-laden and brightly tinseled Christmas tree Friday morning, for a merry exchange of gifts and good-will.

Ben Y. Cammack, head of the Universal Exchange in Atlanta, left Wednesday for New York, where he will spend the Christmas holidays.

Joe Shear, southern representative of the Lee Lash Studios, left Atlanta last Thursday at noon for New York, where he will spend the Christmas holidays.

Thos. H. James, manager of Loew's Grand, caught the Christmas spirit early and had a gaily bedecked tree decorating the lobby this week.

Ernest Morrison has brought cheer to hundreds of children, and almost as many grown folks, with his invitations to the Howard Theatre last week.

Butte

ALBERT NADEAU, general manager of the Washoe Amusement Company, at Anaconda, Montana, has recently been on a business trip to Seattle, where he made purchases of all necessary furnishings for the Margaret Theatre, which has been undergoing a complete remodeling. The entire interior has been in the hands of a wrecking crew. Old drapes, curtains, seats, and furnishings were uprooted and the entire interior will be of the newest and most up-to-date theatre furnishings. Under Manager Nadeau's direction, and the expenditure of approximately $30,000, the Margaret will be one of the finest playhouses in the Northwest.

It is expected that the doors of the Margaret will be open to the public the first of the year. In the changes made the seating capacity will be reduced from 1,200 to 1,000. This is to make room for greater comfort of the patrons.

The Margaret is to be devoted to road shows and advanced price movies.

The Columbia Exchange in Butte is undergoing a change. The powers that be, at Seattle have decided to convert the exchange into a shipping office. This gives to E. C. Shaffer, the present branch manager for Montana, the western territory and locates him in Spokane, Booker Merrill Denton, will go on the sales force and have Northern and Eastern Montana. Miss Boyle, the stenographer will have charge of the office in Butte. Miss Perkins, will remain as inspectress of films.

Dave Farquhar, manager of Warners Exchange in Salt Lake City, who has direct charge also of the Montana territory, has been quite ill with flu' but is able to attend to his official duties. H. A. Dunklee, salesman for Warner Brothers, under Mr. Farquhar, is winding up the year's work in Montana and will report back t Salt Lake at the close of this week.

Manager L. Chester Wingham of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation out of the Salt Lake City office was in Butte last week in company with Seth Perkins, district sales manager.

MOTION picture exhibitors of Southern Illinois are facing the approach of 1927 with more optimism than they viewed the coming of 1926, according to reports.

Due to the resumption of work in nearly all of the coal mines in the Southern Illinois field the section of the state known as Little Egypt is now the most prosperous it has been since the World War.

Heavy payrolls during October, November and December have enabled the miners to catch up with their back debts and they now have more surplus cash with which to enjoy amusement, such as motion pictures, vaudeville shows and the like.

Charitable organizations in the section now report but one-third as many needy familes as in the last five years.

Harry Weiss, manager of the St. Louis office of First National and president of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade, had the pleasure of renewing his aquaintance with J. F. Dittman and Messrs. Mager and Calvert, all connected with the John Dittman Amusement Enterprises of Freeport, Ill., when the trio paid a visit to St. Louis the past week. Dittman reported that conditions in the Freeport territory are good for this season of the year.

Mrs. Frank Paul, owner of the Marvel Theatre, Carlirville, Ill., which was destroyed by fire recently, and who is now operating the Grand Theatre in that city, planned to leave January 7 for a ten-weeks' vacation at Miami, Fla. Whether the fire will interfere with her plans is not definitely known.

Oscar Wesley, owner of the Colonial Theatre, Gillespie, Ill., has offered a reward of $250 to be paid through Harry Weiss, manager of the St. Louis First National office, for the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who started a fire on the stage of his theatre recently. The firebug soaked furniture and scenery with gasoline and then set the fire. An organ, the furniture and scenery and stage of the theatre were destroyed. However, Wesley has succeeded in continuing to operate the house, but will have to spend many hundreds of dollars to repair the damage.

Charles Lundgren, an old time exchange man in Chicago, was a St. Louis visitor the past week. He was here to look over the ground with a view of opening a local office for a new national film distributing organization.

M. A. Lightner has taken over the Majestic Theatre, Stuttgart, Ark., formerly operated by Fred Smith.

William Maloney has purchased the Grand Theatre, Eldorado, Ill., from B. O. Lanhan.

A. R. McNeal has sold the Community Theatre, Raymond, Ill., to the Farmers' Theatrical Company.

Mrs. Frances Peart has sold the Worder, Worden, Ill., to M. Lannae.

Ray Spicer has purchased the Arlington, Arlington, Ky., from R. O. Reeves.

The Liberty Theatre, Binghamton, Tenn., has been sold by P. E. Breece to E. L. Hunt.

W. D. Mumma is the new owner of the Princess Theatre, Gideon, Mo. It formerly was operated by W. R. Anderson.

The Grand Theatre, Empire Theatre and Liberty Theatre in Jonesboro, Ark., have been sold by Collins & Mack to the Southeastern Chain Theatrical Enterprises.

The DeSoto, Memphis, Tenn., is now under the management of L. S. Goolsky.

Houses reported closed in this territory include Richland Theatre, Richland, Mo.; Star, Griggsville, Ill.

Salt Lake City

JACK CURRY, Western Division Ad-Sales Representative for Famous Players-Lasky, has been spending a few days in this city.

Lawrence J. McGinley, local branch manager for Famous Players-Lasky, has returned to the exchange.

District Manager Seth D. Perkins and Local Branch Manager L. C. Wingham of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange here, returned a few days ago to this city from a swing into Idaho.

The local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange is having the projection booth here equipped with two machines, and, according to Manager Wingham, it will resemble a regular miniature theatre.

Al O'Keefe, manager here for Producers Distributing Corporation, is in from the Montana territory.

R. B. Epperson, sales representative out of this office, has been snow bound at Ashton, Idaho.

Frank Galvin, exploiteer from the Producers Distributing Corporation, San Francisco office, is in this city, assisting W. E. Shippley, manager at the Gem Theatre, on his new first run policy.

John Rugar and Frank Knowws, exhibitors who have recently built the new Egyptian Theatre at Park City, Utah, are opening this house this week rather than the first of the year as has been their previous intention.

L. N. Strike, manager of the Kinema Theatre of this city, returned recently from a trip throughout the northwest.

Mike Neilson, who is constructing the new Grand Theatre at Logan, Utah, is visiting the local exchange managers for a few days.

J. J. Gillette, owner of the Strand Theatre at Tooelle, and the Opera House at Grantsville, Utah, is an exhibitor visitor here this week.

Cleveland

THE big local event in motion picture circles the past week was the opening on Christmas Eve of M. B. Horwitz' new Plaza Theatre. The Plaza, located at East 152nd Street and St. Clair Avenue, is a beautiful 1500-seat neighborhood theatre, and is the tenth in the chain known as the Washington Circuit.

About ten years ago Horwitz entered the motion picture exhibition field as co-owner of the Haltnoth Theatre with Louis Isreal. This theatre prospered. He has gradually increased his interests and holdings until now the Washington Circuit of which Horwitz is general manager, is one of the leading circuits in this part of the state. The Plaza is a new theatre which takes the place of the old Virginia. It is located in the same city block as the Virginia. But the opening of the Plaza marked the close of the Virginia.

The new house has its entire seating capacity on one floor. Complete stage equipment has been furnished although the house will play a straight motion picture policy. A lighting system new to Cleveland has been installed. This system consists of ten bowls, located on the side walls. Each bowl contains four 100-watt lamps which throw the light up to the ceiling. There are no installed ceiling lights at all. This system is not only effective but also very restful. The side brackets also are equipped with dimmers which are used when the show is in progress. Old rose and gold are the predominating decorative colors. These colors are repeated in the walls, the carpets and the drop curtain. All the newest projection room equipment has been supplied, together with ideal facilities for operating.

The opening of the theatre on Christmas Eve was an invitational party. Sandwiches and light refreshments were served during and after the performance. H. J. Mandelbaum, who is associated with M. B. Horwitz in the building, will manage the Plaza.

Silverman Brothers, operating a chain of motion picture theatres in Ohio under the name of the Ohio Theatres Company, have leased the Shaw-Hayden Theatre, Cleveland, from M. B. Horwitz. The Shaw-Hayden, and the entire building of which the theatre is a part, was built several years ago by M. B. Horwitz and his associates. It has approximately 1,000 seats and is one of the leading first-run houses in East Cleveland. Horwitz leased the entire building to Silverman Brothers for 99 years. The Silvermans also own the Wind-A-Meer, Cleveland; Opera House and Majestic, Mansfield; Alhambra, Canton; Strand, Akron; and other houses in Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Georgia Moffet, Secretary of the Film Board of Trade, put on a very successful screening of "A Reel Film Exchange" last Monday in the auditorium of the Cleveland News. More than five hundred were present to see this film made and sponsored by the National Safety Council. Gradwell Sears, manager of the Cleveland First National Exchange, presided at the meeting. Speeches were made by members of the local National Safety Council and by representatives of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

A large delegation of Cleveland exhibitors has signified its intention of being present in Columbus on January 6th and 7th to participate in the meeting of independent theatre owners.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association has issued a call for a general association meeting to be held at the Statler Hotel, January 4th.

H. H. Harper, manager of the Gordon Theatre, Cleveland, who has been ill for several weeks, is reported to be convalescing.

Leo Maloney,

Christmas cheer was in evidence in most of the Cleveland theatres. Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., was host to 5,000 orphans and children of institutions during the week. Each day was set aside in the various Loew houses for designated organizations. This is an annual treat.

Kansas City

THERE virtually was a "raid" on the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, Saturday afternoon. It previously had been announced that toys would be accepted as admission from youngsters between 4 and 6:30 o'clock, the toys to be given by the theatre to the Mayor's Christmas Tree Association for needy youngsters of the city. Bill Bruce Fowler, 7-year-old son of Bruce Fowler, manager of the Newman, was the first youngster through the door with a toy for admission. Young Bill does not need the price of admission to enter, but he brought his toy nevertheless, as did hundreds of other boys, as well as hundreds of little girls.

Kansas City is to have still another major motion picture theatre, according to Ralph D. Hornbrook, consulting engineer for the United Artists Theatre Circuit, organized recently. Mr. Hornbrook was in Kansas City on his way to Chicago and Detroit, where his company also is planning to build theatres, he said. No details as to the approximate cost or size of the theatre were announced.

C. E. "Doc" Cook, former business manager of the M.P.T.O., Kansas-Missouri, returned from his first territorial trip in Kansas as a Pathe representative with a gruesome tale of woe. Not only were the roads almost impassable, but his car froze up and hard luck descended upon him like plaster off the ceiling. But "Doc" brought back a plentiful number of contracts, so the damage was comparatively small, after all.

The Mayfield Theatre, Seventy-first Street and Prospect Avenue, Kansas City, has been purchased by P. G. Vaughn from George Costa, who has been an exhibitor in Kansas City for ten years.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: J. J. Newcomb, Burlington, Kas.; C. W. Norman, Leland Theatre, Troy, Kas.; Hugh Gardner, Neosho, Mo.; "Curley" Wilson, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; S. E. Wilhoit, Springfield, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.

There was snow, but there also was brisk business along Kansas City's Movie Row this week.

John Nolan, Fox branch manager, made a hurried trip into the territory, as did C. A. Schultz, P.D.C. branch manager, who went to Wichita, Kas., and other key towns.

The occupants of the Economy Exchange, the Educational branch and the "Movie Row" Western Union branch shivered many hours Monday when the oil fuel used for heating gave out. And Monday was a cold day, too.

Miss Ruth Ward, minus her tonsils, which were extracted, is back on the job at the Pathe exchange.

Howard De Weese is the new booker at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange.

After six years as stenographer at the Pathe branch, Edith Lightfoot has resigned, being succeeded by Miss Edna Beal.

Lou T. Rogers, independent producer, was a Kansas City visitor.

The National Screen Service has opened an office on Movie Row, being located with the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri at 128 West Eighteenth Street.

Charles Bessenbacher, manager of the Kansas City Independent Exchange, was confined to his home because of illness this week.

J. E. Lyons is a new Pathe salesman.

C. W. Allen and S. E. Scheahn, P.D.C. representatives out of Kansas City, have returned after two weeks in the St. Louis territory.

Robert Carnie, Paramount representative, has recovered from illness and is back on the job.

Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, already is contemplating a trip to Europe with Carl Laemmle next summer. He added up his gross sales the other day, then dreamed of the prize award.

Miss Gladys Libby, formerly of the Warner Bros. branch, has accepted a position with Capitol Enterprises in Kansas City.

Albany

THERE is a whole lot of talk these days relative to new theatres during the coming spring and summer. For instance, there was a report current along Albany's Film Row last week that there will be a 1,500-seat house erected in Beacon. It is said that Utica is also slated for a new suburban house. A third theatre, which is past the stage of being a rumor, is in course of erection in Oneida, and should be ready to open by the Kallet brothers, some time in February. It will have 1,000 seats.

The stork beat out the reindeer to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nate Robbins of Utica, N.Y., last week, bringing a seven-pound daughter as a Christmas gift to the well-known exhibitor. Mr. Robbins, who has theatres in Utica, Syracuse and Watertown, was so happy over the newest arrival, that when he returned home with his arms ladened with presents for his other children, he included at least a half dozen articles for the new born.

Fenton Lawlor, a well-known film salesman in Albany, narrowly escaped being seriously injured one day last week, when an auto truck crashed into his car between Herkimer and Albany. Mr. Lawlor came within an ace of being overturned. Incidentally, Fenton and the Mrs. will trip the light fantastic at the Inaugural Ball on New Year's Eve.

Charles Derry, owner of a theatre in Port Henry, remarked that he felt perfectly at home the other night when he was called to operate the projection machine after the regular operator had suffered a severely burned hand.

Reade's Theatre re-opened in Kingston, on Christmas Day, with L. A. Texier as manager.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, owner of theatres in Schenectady, Catskill, Yonkers and elsewhere, will be one of the outstanding figures at the inaugural of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Mr. Portier is now doing the buying for the theatre in Lyon Mountain.

A. J. Stafford is conducting the orchestra at the Playhouse in Hudson, a theatre which is being advertised by Walter Suckno, the manager, as being "the joy spot of Hudson."

Even though Mrs. Arquette has closed her theatre in Parishville, she has been the busiest woman imaginable during the last week or two. In other words, Mrs. Arquette not only runs the theatre, but is also the postmistress.

In Clayton, the theatre run by Mrs. Tann is now down to one night a week. Len Garvey, of Clinton, is operating three nights a week, while Mrs. Dennis Regan, of Greenwich, is running four nights a week. Mrs. Ida Grant has closed her house in Hobart, and Keene and Lord have followed suit in Phoenicia.

Mike Kallet was in New York last week doing his Christmas shopping. His brother, Joe, who runs his theatres in Rome, slipped over to the neighboring city of Utica to buy his presents.

John Augello, who owns the Family Theatre in Utica, had the scare of his life one night last week, when a meat market in the same block caught fire.

Slotnick and Perlman are as busy as the proverbial bee these days, in connection with the last minute details on the theatre which they will open shortly in Utica. An organ is now being installed.

With the wind howling across the St. Lawrence River, the theatre in Clayton is running but two nights a week now, while in Cape Vincent, one night a week seems to be sufficient to take care of the villagers.

Mrs. Alec Herman, wife of the local manager for Pro.-Dis.-Co., journeyed up from New York one night last week with her parents.

Jake Rothstein, who ran the Gaiety, last winter, in connection with his hotel at Inlet, is back from Texas, and naturally enough complaning of the zero weather around Utica.

Alex Weismann, local manager for Metro-Goldwyn, is as proud as a peacock these days over his exchange. One of the features is a ladies' room, equipped even to a bowl of flowers.

Van Orman runs the postoffice at Essex, and has just opened a motion picture theatre. Figure it out for yourself whether or not he was busy last week with the Christmas mail and trying to get the theatre under way at the same time.

Ben Warman is giving the village of Westport some exceptionally fine pictures these days. Mr. Warman was a former New York City man who is now president of the village bank. He runs the theatre.

Des Moines

C. W. HILL has just acquired the Royal Theatre at George, Ia., buying it from Frank Wilson.

The Opera House at Kimballtown, Ia., has changed hands and is now being operated by the Faaborg Brothers.

H. Muss is now the owner of the Pastime Theatre at Rake, Ia., and promises excellent programs.

Russell, Ia., is to have a brand new moving picture theatre, D. V. Fogarty being responsible for the project.

Shelby, Ia., is also the home of a new theatre, which is being opened by E. T. Krohn.

The Opera House at Wyoming, Ia., has been sold by the Eastern Iowa Theatre Company to B. G. Milner.

The Princess Theatre at Prescott, Ia., has passed from the ownership of Glen Cooper to A. Pearis, and will continue with high-grade programs.

William McLean has sold his theatre, the Princess, at Dexter, Ia., to Edward Awe.

Greenfield, Ia., is to have a nice movie palace in the New Greenfield Theatre, now being opened by G. O. Meisner.

G. H. See has sold the Opera House at Mount Auburn, Ia., to Charles Heiss.

The Community Theatre, at Plainfield, Ia., has become the property of W. C. Dayton.

H. C. Reagan is the new proprietor of the Cozy Theatre at Toledo, buying it from C. V. Burdock.

H. L. Upham has sold the Burg Theatre, at Fredericksburg, to Frank Mertz.

A new theatre has just been opened at Wellsburg, Ia. It has been named the Majestic.

Two new Iowa theatres are the Public School Theatre, at Denmark and Our Theatre, at Brayton.

The Opera House at Grimes, Ia., closed during the last month, as did the Legion at Portsmouth, the Community at Blanchard and the Deloit at Deloit.

H. A. Kauffmann, manager of the Pathe Exchange at Des Moines, spent Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of Christmas week in Omaha, on business.

Andre Bustanoby, inspector broker of the same company, who has been in Des Moines for a short time, returned to New York for the holidays.

Omaha seemed to be the Mecca for Universal executives for holiday trips. Mr. James Wynn and R. B. Gorham went to spend Christmas with their families. Mr. Levy, of Metro, also spent the holidays in Omaha.

L. D. Hendrix, of Mount Vernon, Feldhans, of Odebolt, and George Adams, of Cedar Rapids, were visitors at the Educational offices during Christmas week.

Minneapolis

THE Dodge Lumber Company of Rochester, Minn., recently sold the property opposite the postoffice to Northwest Theatres, Inc. Work on a new theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,500, will start in the spring. All theatres in the city are at present in the control of F.&R., including the Metropolitan, a legitimate and road show house with a capacity of 1,000 and the Empress and the Lawler, both motion picture houses with a capacity of 900. The Lawler was remodelled not long ago.

It is commonly rumored that other theatre purchases by F.&R. are now in the process of making, although F. J. Cubberley, contact man, says that no such deals have yet been consummated.

L. D. Hendrix, manager of the Strand Theatre in Mount Vernon, Iowa, told the city council last week that he will not reopen his theatre until he has an understanding that he will be able to operate his theatre on Sundays in spite of the Sunday closing ordinance.

W. H. Hay of Fairmont, Minn., died unexpectedly of heart trouble December 9. For the last fifteen years Mr. Hay had operated theatres in Fairmont with W. L. Nicholas and was one of the most esteemed members of the motion picture industry.

A dinner and dance was held at the Carpenter Hotel, Sioux Falls, S.D., recently by the personnels of the Universal, Famous Players-Lasky and F.B.O. branches. One of the honor guests was Max Weisfeldt, F.B.O. district manager. Ways and means of furthering the motion picture business and of improving conditions in South Dakota were discussed.

J. E. Mason, Minneapolis theatre architect, has announced that he is drawing plans for a new $65,000 theatre in White Bear, Minn. The house will be begun in the spring by Mrs. H. V. Jensen, owner of the Rex Theatre at White Bear. There will be two stores on the ground floor and one apartment and two offices on the second floor. The theatre will have a seating capacity of more than 400.

The Strand Theatre, Winona, Minn., has removed all signs of having been a theatre and is being remodelled for occupancy by a McLellan Stores Company chain store. The theatre was discontinued by F.&R., who operate all other downtown theatres in Winona, because the city is badly overseated.

Art Seibel, salesman for First National, was driving in a snowstorm recently on the road from Brookings to Flandreau, and, being blinded by the snow, missed a turn in the road. The car turned over three times as it rolled down a big embankment and was badly damaged. Seibel and his companion, Les Davis, assistant manager at the Minneapolis First National branch, escaped with minor injuries.

As part of the holiday festivities all children of Jasper, Minn., were given free movies at the Happy Hour Theatre on December 23.

J. B. Johnson of Mason City, Iowa, and his son, Russell, are seeking a site for a new theatre at Moose Lake, Minn.

Ludy Bosten has sold his half interest in the Lyric Theatre, Columbus Junction, Iowa, to J. R. Collins of Muscatine, who will assume management of the house.

A $25,000 theatre is to be built at Medford, Wis., by O. G. Blakeslee, according to J. E. Mason, Minneapolis theatre architect.

The Plaza Theatre, Fort Dodge, Iowa, has been sold by F. F. Weiss to Mrs. Georgia Glen and J. W. Alstott. The latter is also operating the Lyric.

Philadelphia

THE East Coast Theatres Co., operated by Oscar Neufeld and Sam Stiefel, has acquired the Globe Theatre, Marcus Hook, Pa., on a ten-year lease with an option to buy. The house has been operated for the past seven years by the owner, W. R. Wilson, who with the disposition of the property, will retire from active participation in the picture business. The house has a seating capacity of 800 and the established policy of vaudeville and pictures will be continued. Jas. Flynn, salesman for the De Luxe Exchange, which is also controlled by Stiefel and Neufeld, has been appointed managing director of both the Globe and the Spielmont, two houses now operated by East Coast Theatres Co., in Marcus Hook. Lester Wurtle, who has been in charge of the Spielmont, has been transferred to the Palace at Quakertown.

Mike Stiefel, of the Stiefel chain of theatres, who suffered a nervous breakdown several months ago, is now recuperating at the Knickerbocker Hotel, Atlantic City, and will spend a month or two there before returning to Phialdelphia.

The proposed consolidation of the De Luxe and Twentieth Century Exchanges has been dropped without an agreement being reached between Gene Marcus of Twentieth Century and Neufeld and Stiefel of De Luxe. It was felt that with only two exchanges taking part in the independent merger, sufficient benefit would not be derived to warrant the move. It is hoped, however, to bring the three or four independent exchanges under one roof some time in the future. It is pointed out that only from a consolidation on a large scale would any great benefits inure to the exchanges taking part.

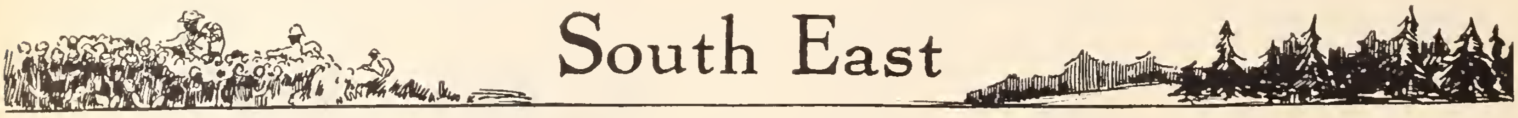
George P. Aaron, secretary and counsel of the M.P.T.O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, has been confined to his home for the last week with a severe attack of intestinal grippe.

A move to commemorate the memory of Jules E. Mastbaum, president of the Stanley Company of America, has been started by those active in the forces of the Federation of Jewish Charities. It is proposed to name a large convalescent home to be erected in the vicinity of Willow Grove, Pa., after the late motion picture leader and philanthropist. The convalescent home will cost approximately half a million dollars and will take care of those who have not the proper surroundings in their homes. Another movement is gaining headway for the erection of another memorial in the heart of the city, probably in the form of a statue on City Hall Plaza.

Mrs. Rose Neufeld, wife of Oscar Neufeld, of the De Luxe Exchange, is recovering from a severe attack of ptomaine poisoning, which confined her to her home for several weeks.

William Holgate, formerly connected with Lewis M. Swaab & Son, has become affiliated with Clem Rizzo in the motion picture theatre equipment store recently opened by him on North Thirteenth Street.

South East



PLENTY of Christmas spirit was shown along Film Row last week. Evidence of same was the Christmas banquet given by E. F. Dardine, manager of Universal, and wife, to the employees of the Charlotte Exchange. The banquet was held at Mr. Dardine's beautiful country estate, Darvilla. This is an annual affair and is looked forward to by the employees as they are assured of a sumptuous feast and an enjoyable evening from every standpoint.

Raleigh Goode, formerly manager of the Enterprise Distributing Corporation, has resigned.

H. F. Kincey, general manager of the Wilby circuit, which includes Greensboro, Durham, Fayetteville and Raleigh, spent Monday along Film Row setting in bookings for the new year.

Nat Wyse, playdate representative of Universal Film Exchanges, is spending several days in the Charlotte office.

Thomas Little, formerly with Producers & Distributors, in Atlanta, we understand has been appointed manager of the Enterprise Distributing Corporation at Charlotte.

Mrs. Fred Pollock, wife of Mr. Fred Pollock, manager of Metro-Goldwyn Exchange, has returned home after spending several months visiting her parents in New York City.

W. F. "Bill" Yenehan, spent Christmas with his parents on Long Island.

L. C. Rose, owner of theatres at Mooresville, Belmont and Mount Holly, N.C., recently visited in Charlotte along Film Row.

G. W. Parr, of the Imperial Theatre, Lancaster, S.C., was also along Film Row setting in some special pictures for the new year.

Joseph Walters, who formerly had the Temple Theatre, at Sanford, N.C., has purchased the Palace Theatre, at Chester, S.C.

'Peaches' is Here

Baltimore

BERNARD DEPKIN, JR., one of the pioneer exhibitors of Baltimore, who was recently manager of Warners' Metropolitan Theatre, here, has now become associated with the Stanley-Crandall Company of Washington, D.C. He will manage the affairs of that company in Baltimore and will have charge of the new Stanley Theatre now being built at a cost of $2,225,000. It is being built on North Howard Street on the site of the old Academy of Music.

Mr. Depkin went to Frederick, Md., Monday, December 20, to supervise the final preparations for the opening of the Tivoli Theatre, the new Stanley-Crandall house in that city which has a seating capacity of 1,700 persons. The cost of the Tivoli was approximately $250,000. It was opened to the public Thursday, December 23.

Mrs. M. A. R. Brown, bookkeeper at the New Theatre, 210 West Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md., has been suffering from a severe case of grippe for the past ten days.

Marie Lee, of Donovan and Lee, playing the Garden Theatre, here during the week beginning Monday, December 13, was called to Philadelphia, Thursday, December 16, due to the death of her father.

A watch and chain was presented to Sheriff John E. Pottee of Baltimore, by Frank H. Durkee, president of the Deputy Sheriff's Association and a prominent motion picture exhibitor of this city.

Sheriff Pottee was re-elected recently, and that means that the deputy's organization will be held together for another four years. It was organized by the Sheriff about three years ago when he was first elected.

Practically all the exhibitors of Baltimore are members of the association and are appointed without pay.

A benefit motion picture and vaudeville entertainment was given at Keith's Hippodrome Theatre Sunday evening, December 19, by the Advertising Club of Baltimore to raise money to give an entertainment for the orphans of the Monumental City.

Those in charge of the affair included E. Lester Muller, president; Howard H. Cone, assisted by members of the Women's Advertising Club, and Jerome P. Fleishman.

The Avalon Theatre, Park Heights and Kate Avenues, Baltimore, Md., will be opened to the public about January 15, it is announced. The seating capacity of the house is 1,800 persons.

A new motion picture theatre project is under way for the Wolf property located several blocks from the Pimlico Theatre on Park Heights Avenue. Mr. Wolf is associated with the companies operating the Pimlico and Belvedere theatres, it is said.

A scare was thrown into the audience at the Ritz Theatre, here, recently when there was a roar in the cellar and smoke rose into the theatre. The oil safety switch on the furnace blew out, causing trouble. Those in the house were quieted quickly, however, by Louis Gaertner, manager, and several ushers and there was no interruption of the performance.

The Odeon Theatre, Richmond, Va., has been closed and the property will be used for stores. This was a Wilmer and Vincent house.

Harley Davidson, who has been handling the Eastern Shore of Maryland, for Paramount, is now covering the Clinch Valley territory for that company.

The eastern section of Virginia will now be handled by Joe Walsh for Paramount. He was formerly with Pathe.

Joe Oulahan has been busy shaking hands with many of his friends in Baltimore, where he has returned as Paramount representative.

Cincinnati

THE funeral of Ike M. Martin, owner of the Orpheum Theatre, Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, and general manager of Chester Park, who died suddenly at Palm Beach, Florida, was held in Cincinnati, and largely attended, many men high in the amusement and motion picture fields having come from distant points to pay their last respects. Andrew G. Hettesheimer, who has managed the Orpheum for many years, will continue in that capacity, it is announced.

Manager John Schwalm, of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, is receiving the plaudits of the public on account of the elaborate lighting program he is featuring during the holiday season. A series of multi-colored lights forming appropriate seasonal designs are manipulated during each performance with excellent effect.

Managers Silver and Turberg, of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, announce the return of Glen Wortendyke's Concert orchestra early in the new year. The pit has been presided over by Arkey and His Boys since the opening of the current season.

What is believed to be the most unusual method of theatre operation in Ohio, if not in the entire country, has been found at Plymouth, Ohio, where Reuben Deisler operates a small, but up-to-date house which bears his name. Deisler, a man in middle life, is sightless, having been blinded in a railroad accident some years ago. Although he has lost his sight, he has not lost his vision, as evidenced by the fact that, despite his handicap, he acts as cashier, seldom, if ever, making an error in giving out tickets or making change. He likewise personally attends to all bookings, billing, advertising, and the general business of the theatre. His wife is projectionist and a good one, at that.

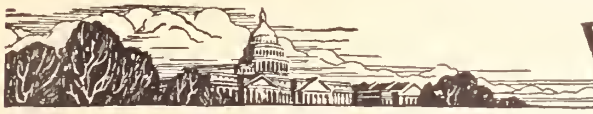
Much newspaper space has recently been devoted to the activities of Jacob Wayne, treasurer of the Opera House and Majestic Theatres, Mansfield, Ohio, recently acquired by the Silverman interests. Wayne, who came to Mansfield from Altoona, Pa., has inaugurated several new ideas, and the local press has not been slow to play up the fact. Harry Brown, Jr., is manager of both houses.

A 1,300-seat house to cost $250,000, will be erected by the Elks' Lodge at New Philadelphia, Ohio. The building will be four stories high, and will be financed by the sale of bonds.

Actual construction work is expected to start in January on a new house which the Loew organization will erect in Columbus, Ohio. The plans, which have been developed by Thomas W. Lamb, architect, New York, call for a seating capacity of approximately 4,000.

Mrs. J. H. McLeod, Defiance, Ohio, has disposed of her Elite Theatre to J. S. Rex, who will continue to operate the house.

Although exhibitors in this region do not anticipate any immediate reaction from the enforcement of the law in Cleveland which prohibits sale of tickets for standing room in theatres, yet most exhibitors hereabouts are watching the standing room situation carefully, in order to have a "clean bill of health" in case someone should start something.



Washington

A MIDNIGHT supper was given on Tuesday, December 7, by Frank Braden, publicity representative for the Loew's theatres here, including the Century, Parkway and Valencia, for Gus Edwards and his company playing at the Century during that week, to which a number of prominent Baltimoreans and newspaper people were invited.

A small fire occurred in the Linwood Theatre, 902 South Linwood Avenue, recently, but it was extinguished before it could do much damage and before the firemen arrived.

Frank Steffy is now managing director of the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D.C., succeeding W. L. Doudlah.

The interior of the Savoy Theatre, Washington, D.C., is being completely renovated.

The Capitol, a new motion picture theatre being erected at Danville, Va., with a seating capacity of 1,100 persons, will be opened shortly by the Tribute Theatres Corporation with Jack Frost as general manager.

A new theatre to seat 1,000 persons will be built on the site of the old Bijou playhouse, Danville, Va. The cost of the new structure will be about $135,000. It is to be operated by the Southern Amusement Company.

Work on a theatre building with a seating capacity of 350 persons, has been started at Mocksville, N.C. J. A. Daniel is back of this project and the playhouse will measure 25 by 90 feet.

Seven hundred new seats have been installed in the orchestra of the Liberty Theatre, Cumberland, Md.

A new $1,000,000 vaudeville theatre is planned for Richmond, Va., by Wilmer and Vincent and work will begin about January 1st it is announced.

John Grady, who has been in the advertising department of the Griffith Theatres at Tonkawa, has been changed to Stillwater, where he is doing exploitation work for the Aggie and Mecca theatres.

Milwaukee

FRANK COOK, manager of the New Strand Theatre at Platteville which was recently destroyed by fire, was in the city straightening out his bookings. It is understood Mr. Cook will not remain in Platteville, but is interested in a house in Appleton.

The Goetz Brothers have taken over the management of the Regent Theatre. Fred Seegert is the present owner of the Regent. Goetz Bros. also recently closed negotiations for the Empire and Radio theatres of this city.

J. Vander Vaart, of the Vander Vaart Theatre of Sheboygan, was in the city on Tuesday.

Louis Rossa, of the Douglas Theatre, Racine, spent a few hours in town during the week checking up his holiday bookings.

Atanasoff Bros., who are building a new theatre on the south side, have announced that the house will be opened about the 1st of April. It will be known as the New World Theatre.

The A. J. Strauss interests are planning two new theatres on the north side, one on 3rd and Center and one on 21st and Teutonia. Construction will begin very soon.

Chester Goetz, theatre owner, of Janesville and Beloit, was seen along Film Row on Wednesday.

Langdon Burkes, special representative of the Eucharistic Congress production, was in Milwaukee during the week, arranging for a showing here which will have an extended run at the Auditorium in the near future.

Miss Ruth Hellerman, of the Celebrated office staff, has finally succumbed to the pleadings of her fellow employees and has had her hair bobbed.

The Pyle Delivery Service, a film pick-up service, has changed hands, and will be known after the first of the year as the National Film Delivery. Routes will be established as far north as Green Bay and as far west as Madison.

Clyde Eckhardt, Fox District Manager, was in the city this week for a conference with F. G. Sliter on a matter pertaining to the Anniversary Week and the Fox midseason drive.

Art Desormeaux, manager of the Strand at Madison, it is reported, got his deer while on his trip north recently. J. P. Anton, formerly of the Princess, Plymouth, who accompanied Mr. Desormeaux, was equally successful in bringing down a buck.

Gene Hemmings, M.-G.-M. salesman, also was reported as one of the successful hunters.

L. F. Thurwachter, manager of the Park at Waukesha, visited at several exchanges during the past week.

C. A. Armour, who was formerly assistant booker at M.-G.-M., has established a film pick-up service, the Armour Film Service. A fleet of twelve trucks will be at the command of local exchanges. In the spring service will be extended to include Green Bay.

Mr. O'Donnell, home office representative, is spending a few days in the local First National office.

F. G. Sliter, manager of the Fox Exchange, returned from a ten-day trip through the territory.

E. J. Bregger, manager of the Gem Theatre at Crystal Falls, Mich., called upon local exchanges during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Olson, of the Pastime Theatre at Delavan, combined Christmas shopping and business in a recent visit to the city.

The local Fox Exchange has definitely closed the deal for a new exchange and work on the new building is to begin at once. They plan to be in by the 1st of March.

Denver

S. H. CAIN, sales representative for the local Universal branch office for several years, has succeeded G. E. Rosenwald as branch manager is Denver. Mr. Rosenwald has been transferred to the managership of the Los Angeles branch of Universal. Mr. Cain assumes his new duties Monday.

L. O. Lukan, district manager for First National, was a Denver visitor Friday and Saturday of this week. Mr. Lukan left for Butte, Mont., Saturday noon.

Max Roth, home office representative for Fox, was suddenly called back to New York last Thursday after spending several weeks visiting the local branch office.

Chas. Klein of the Black Hills Amusement Company of Deadwood, S.D., arrived in Denver Thursday to spend some time around exchanges. Other Denver visitors during the week were Mr. W. R. Logan, Rex Theatre, Basin, Wyo.; G. A. Loveland, Strand Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo.; P. H. Hoppen, Mountain Theatres, Inc., of Pueblo; Tom Love, of Hanna, Wyo.; Jim Lynch, America Theatre, Laramie, Wyo., and Wm. Menagh, who operates the Park Theatre of Greeley, Colo.

A thousand dollars' worth of films were destroyed last Sunday night while they were being taken from the Bluebird Theatre in an automobile to the local Producers Exchange after the last performance. The films were in metal containers in the rear of the car, a coupe, when the gas tank of the car exploded for some unknown reason. The films were melted in their containers, so intense was the heat. Harry McWilliams, the operator who was driving the car, escaped without injury; however, the automobile was slightly damaged.

Clayton Parker, popular First National salesman of the Denver office, was compelled to leave last week for a lower altitude on account of his health. Mr. Parker was widely known among exhibitors of the Denver territory and we join with them in wishing him a speedy recovery back to good health.

The Princess Theatre of Meeker, Colo., was, for the second time this winter, compelled to close its doors on account of a smallpox epidemic last week. About six weeks ago the theatre closed down for a short time, but soon reopened when the cases of smallpox began to decrease. A sudden outbreak of several new cases last week again forced the city authorities to order all public gatherings discontinued.

Planning Home Town Movie for L. & T. Circuit

Extend Idea to Capture Local Interest; Cast Will be Selected by Patrons of Theatres

An extension of the home town movie idea is being planned in Chicago in an ambitious manner. Heretofore, this money-getting idea has usually been the making of a short-length comedy in a patchy manner, but Lubliner & Trinz are going to put the idea on in Chicago in a way which stamps it as actually being a new and refreshing idea.

J. J. Hess, Publicity Director Lubliner & Trinz Theatres

J. J. Hess, Director of Publicity for the circuit, has written the story, entitled, "A Chicago Boy," which will be filmed in feature length proportion upon the stages of the better-class theatres of the circuit.

It was at first intended to select the cast through one of the daily newspapers on a contest basis, but the project assumed such large proportions, and created so much interest among all the dailies, that the cast will now be selected at the theatres and executive offices of the organization.

The details of the plan as given out are as follows: In the early part of January, the first scenes of "A Chicago Boy" will be taken upon the stages of the Congress, Pantheon, Covent, Windsor and State theatres. Five of the sets necessary to the action of the film will be placed upon each of these stages, and these will be alternated each week, so that upon one night, the public, who have already been made conversant with the story, will see the hero and heroine perhaps battling in a bootleggers' den, and the next night, upon the same stage, there will be shown a lavish interior, in which a cast, expensively gowned, will enact a society scene. In this way, the public will be treated to diversified material, and it is presumed that after the selection of the cast, and as the public becomes familiar with the actors and actresses, a good deal of interest will be evinced in their acting capabilities. Later, as further sets are needed, it will become necessary to extend these scenes to other and perhaps larger theatres on the circuit.

It is in no way intended to sell advertising in the film, and scenes which will be taken in department stores, the stock yards, or upon the streets, will be carefully filmed with a view to eliminating any free or paid advertising.

No "rushes" will be shown the public, it being deemed sufficiently interesting as staged to bring money at the box-office through the interest built up through the publicity secured in the selection of the cast. After the completion of the picture, it will be shown at the theatres involved in the actual making of the scenes.

To assure entertainment to the public, the important scenes will be rehearsed in the mornings, so that there will be no delay or an excess of rehearsing at the actual filming of the scenes, and this will enable David Smith, director, to interject discreet comedy and to manipulate the lights rather more than necessary so as to give the public an idea of how motion pictures are actually made.

The advertising and publicity campaign, as outlined by Publicity Director J. J. Hess, will consist of advertising the scenes to be taken, in the dailies, for example: "Tonight Jack and Mary meet Spinelly in the bootleggers' hang-out. See the big battle scene, actually filmed." A special bulletin to be used at all the theatres and devoted entirely to the selection of the cast, the progress of the filming and other details will be used in a house-to-house distribution, and special scene trailers with interest-stimulating material, but not actual scenes from the film itself, will be run from week to week at the theatres.

The largest chain of drug stores in Chicago will carry a weekly bulletin with the latest stills of the scenes in process, and advance window displays showing interior sets will be shown in department stores. This will be supported by a regular advertising and bill-board campaign featuring the line: "A Chicago-made movie, by and of Chicago."

Vaudeville at Midnight Show

James Roach, manager of the Farash theatres in Schenectady, will use several acts of vaudeville in connection with a midnight show that will be staged from 11:30 o'clock on, in the observance of New Year's Eve.

Equipment

Deserved Promotion

By P. M. ABBOTT

For years past, projectionists have been criticized for their lack of a sense of responsibility to their work. They have been accused of doing just as little work as was possible to "get away" with their jobs. Also, cooperation between managers and projectionists was a nice theory, but hat's as far as it got—at least in most cases. .

All this showed projectionists as fair retardants to the progress of better shows. And, further, very often the projectionists actually deserved no better rating than the industry gave them.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been a leader in a movement to educate projectionists to assume greater responsibility and to cooperate with exhibitors. Nor was a message to the exhibitors themselves forgotten, as fairness on their part was equally essential to effective cooperation. Regardless of where credit is due—to our efforts, to projectionists themselves, or a combination of both or other influences,—a gratifying change of conditions has taken place.

Many projectionists today can be rated as minor executives especially in the better-class houses. In theatre circuits and first-class houses as well as a large portion of the lesser important theatres the chief projectionist assumes the responsibility of guaranteeing perfect projection. It is his duty to keep fully informed on all new and improved equipment and methods that are introduced to this field

The projectionist's recommendation is now usually final in the selection of equipment. This is as it should be. For good projection is so essenial for the successful operation of any theatre, and the equipment required to assure the desired results of such complicated nature, that it takes a specialist to intelligently supervise its selection and operation.

Those exhibitors and projectionists who have not kept step with these changes will soon be back numbers. For this new standing of projectionists is in accord with modern showmanship.

Managerial Changes in Canada Chain

F. P.-L. Switches Follow Death of Ralph Ruffner

The recent death of Ralph Ruffner, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver, B.C., for five years, has meant quite a change in the Western organization of Famous Players Canadian Corp. The theatre has been under the charge of John R. Muir, British Columbia supervisor of Famous Players houses, but announcement has been made of the transfer of H. M. Thomas, Western Division manager, from Winnipeg to Vancouver, to assume the management of the Capitol. The Western headquarters of Famous Players are moved temporarily from Winnipeg to Vancouver also.

Mr. Thomas has been the general manager of the Capitol at Winnipeg and now C. A. Schauffele, formerly general manager of theatres at Winnipeg for Canadian Universal Pictures, has been appointed to the Capitol Theatre, to be assisted by E. A. Retallick. Earle Hill will continue to have charge of the Capitol orchestra and others of the Capitol include V. Armand, projectionist, Syd. Barnes, Norman Code and Miss I. Kaplan.

Announcement regarding the changes so far was made by N. L. Nathanson of Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., who is now on a trip of inspection through the Western territory.

Loew Signs Frances White and Vesta Victoria

Frances White and Vesta Victoria have been added to the list of "name" acts for Loew's vaudeville and de luxe picture theatres.

Miss White will open her tour in New York February 14th, while Miss Victoria opens at Loew's State, White Plains, next week.

The list now includes, in addition to Frances White and Vesta Victoria, Gene Tunney, McIntyre and Heath, Nora Bayes, Ruth Roye, Irene Franklin, Cissie Loftus, Al Herman, Sissle and Blake, Jane and Katherine Lee, Franklyn Farnum, Jean Southern and Morris and Campbell. Herbert Williams, of the act formerly known as Williams and Wolfus, has also accepted a Loew tour.

Birmingham House Redecorated

The Trianon Theatre in Birmingham reopened Christmas Day after several days' darkness during which the interior of the house was remodeled and redecorated. The house presented "Twinkletoes" as the feature of the program which reopened the Trianon.

Isis Offers New Orchestra

The Isis Theatre in Houston, Tex., last week introduced a "new idea" orchestra with Pedro Avelar, violinist, as the lead. The orchestra has been in rehearsal for some time and will specialize in musical accompaniments for the pictures. In addition, they will offer overture sand novelties as featured units of the programs at the Isis.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

J. H. McCARRON, for several years connected with the B. F. Keith enterprises, has been appointed manager of the Globe and Garden Pier theatres in Atlantic City, N.J.

JACK QUINLAN, for several years manager of the Main Street Theatre in Kansas City, has succeeded Earl T. Cook as manager of the Pantages Theatre there. Cook has assumed his duties in the new post he fills at the home office of the Pantages circuit in New York.

ARTHUR STEUERLE is manager of the Crescent Theatre in Louisville, Ky. He is the son of Joseph L. Steuerle, manager of the Walnut Theatre in Louisville and one of the first motion picture managers in that city. The Crescent is operated by the Broadway Amusement Enterprises.

K. C. Suburban House Offers Stage Novelties

The management of the Madrid Theatre, Kansas City suburban house operated by Universal, is carrying on a vigorous campaign to attract the patronage not only of the south side district but the downtown crowd as well. Last week the Madrid advertised a program headed by "Stella Dallas" and with a short musical comedy and "Black-bottom Dance Contest" as added features of the "best entertainment buy, in town."

A vaudeville tour was offered as the prize which will go to the winner of the dance contest, audience applause deciding this issue. Elimination trials are being held every evening and free classes are given on the Madrid stage every afternoon from 3:30 to 5.

The Madrid management also featured a "ladies free" show Monday night of last week. Every lady patron accompanied by one adult who had purchased a ticket at the box office was admitted free.

Road Show Films Played at Harrisburg Majestic

The Majestic Theatre, Harrisburg, though maintained primarily as a legitimate theatre, has been resorting to the policy this winter of introducing high class film spectacles for one-week runs, having already shown "Ben-Hur," "Beau Geste" and "The Big Parade." Each was booked for one week and drew capacity houses most of the time, notwithstanding the price of the best seats was $1.65, including tax, a big advance over ordinary movie prices in Harrisburg. Manager Keubler, of the theatre, says these types of film shows, when obtainable, are more profitable than most road shows of the legitimate type.

Midnight Shows Open New Bills at Publix Houses

The Paramount and the Rialto, Publix houses on Broadway, will open new programs with special midnight performances on New Year's Eve. The Rialto offering will be "Sorrows of Satan," the opening of which was postponed one week owing to the continued popularity of "We're in the Navy Now."

N. Y. Capitol Offers Xmas Features

Music and Dance Numbers Win Applause

The ingenuity and talents of the versatile organization at the Capitol Theatre, New York, is utilized to celebrate the Christmas season on the current program, headed by "Valencia," the screen attraction. Orchestra, soloists and dancers contribute to the elaborate and festive nature of the entertainment.

The spirit of the Yuletide season is conveyed in a group of Christmas Carols sung by the Capitol Singers. The numbers consist of "Holy Night," "Adeste Fidelis," "Let Our Gladness Know No Ends," "Cantique Noel." A special setting provides a background of realism and an atmosphere of beauty for the selections. Caroline Andrews sings the "Doll Song" from Offenbach's opera, "Tales of Hoffman."

In lighter vein and expressing the happier phases of the holiday season is the "Toyland Ballet" with Joyce Coles as premiere danseuse; the Capitol Ballet Corps and the Chester Hale Girls. Several episodes make up the component parts of Mr. Hale's choreography, each colorfully costumed and scenically invested. Margaret Schilling, lyric soprano, sings Victor Herbert's "Toyland" as an interpolated solo.

Phonograph Concert Albany Strand Feature

A phonograph concert of classical and popular music featuring the new auditorium Victrola was one of the units of the program offered recently at the Strand Theatre in Albany. Records played on the instrument included "Mary Lou," played by the Silvertown Cord Orchestra; "O Come All Ye Faithful," as sung by the Trinity choir; the Reveler's interpretation of "Dinah," and Sousa's band playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

"The Great Gatsby" was the screen attraction for the week. Other features were a Harry Langdon comedy, "Lucky Stars;" the topical review, and the Strand symphony orchestra's overture, "Il Trovatore."

New Year's Eve Shows at Two F & R Theatres

Two F & R theatres in Minneapolis will present special midnight matinees on New Year's Eve. The State will offer a revue with 40 entertainers, headed by Dave Vine, comedian; Taylor and Hawks, Harmonists; Roy Smeck and Maurine Marseilles.

At the Strand the special attraction will be a showing of "The Winning of Barbara Worth," the Samuel Goldwyn screen version of Harold Bell Wright's novel.

Midnight Show at Michigan

The Michigan Theatre in Detroit will present a midnight show on New Year's Eve. The leading acts at all the Kunsky theatres will be on this special bill, as well as other talent booked only for this show. A "surprise" feature film will be the main unit of the program.

To continue without Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps is to continuously pay for them anyway and still be without them.

It further means that, besides losing the tremendous savings they afford in reduced current and carbon costs, you are also without the vast increase in screen illumination they deliver at half the price you are now paying.

Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps will bring your present projection results up to an unsurpassable standard of perfection, they will pay back their original cost in an extremely short time. Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps pay a bigger return for the money invested than your ENTIRE theatre investment.

Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps are standard factory equipment on Simplex Projectors, they are used by the Nation's largest and finest theatres and outsell all other lamps "two to one" so—

Blue Mouse Celebrates 6th Anniversary

Olympic Opening Adds to Features of Week In Seattle Theatres

SEATTLE, WASH., Christmas Week and the Holiday Season witnessed the opening of one new theatre and a mammoth sixth anniversary celebration in another house. The new theatre to throw open its doors to the public was the Olympic Theatre; John Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre celebrated its sixth birthday with appropriate features.

The Olympic is an 800-seat house, and will present second-run pictures, with two program changes each week. A fully-equipped small stage is a feature of the house. A large Wurlitzer organ will furnish the musical accompaniment for the pictures, and room for an orchestra is provided both on the stage and in the orchestra pit.

At the Blue Mouse Theatre, Manager John Hamrick celebrated the sixth anniversary of the opening of the house with an elaborate screen and musical program. As the featured film attraction, Hamrick presented "Ladies at Play." Leonard Hagen and the Blue Mouse Music Masters presented a specially arranged anniversary overture, featuring the holiday season and the birthday of the house in a well-arranged medley of numbers. On the stage, Walton McKinney, the popular Blue Mouse soloist, offered an elaborate song revue with several assistants and a novel stage effect.

As usual, the electrical effects and the presentation features were quite elaborate, having been worked out especially for the occasion by the Blue Mouse staff of projectionists and presentation artists. A color scheme of red and green, exploiting the holiday motif, was used, and into this was worked the anniversary idea through mammoth candles surmounting the stage and the foyer of the house.

F & R Theatre Entertainers at "Good Will" Dinner

A number of Finkelstein & Ruben theatre entertainers contributed their services at a "good-will" dinner recently tendered St. Paul by the Good-Will Club of Minneapolis. Nearly 900 business and professional men of the Twin Cities attended the dinner. The official program included numbers by the State Theatre concert orchestra with William Warville Nelson conducting and by Bob Brose and his entertainers from the Lagoon Theatre.

Cambria Production Staged at Paramount Theatre

"The Pearl of Damascus," a stage feature with an Oriental background produced by Frank Cambria, is the presentation which heads the stage portion of the current program at the Paramount Theatre, New York. The name role is played by Teddy Walters, of Walters and Ellis, dancers, who are making their second tour of the Publix houses in this new offering.

The screen attraction for the week is "The Cheerful Fraud," starring Reginald Denny. Other units of the bill are "A Christmas Fantasy"—presented in the manner of the Miracle plays—Jesse Crawford's organ solo, "A Kiddie Koncert," and "Let's do Black Bottom," a Castle film novelty.

Opera Company Attraction at Tampa Theatre

All of the Tampa theatres seem to have enjoyed excellent holiday business. The Victory had four days of Grand Opera, extending through Christmas, with the San Carlos Grand Opera Company the attraction. Manager James M. Wiest, of the new Tampa Theatre, gave the poor children of Tampa a free show Christmas morning. He brought the film "Peter Pan" back for this show and all inmates of the several children homes and institutions were his guests.

Yuletide Frolic Feature of Strand Program

An elaborate Yuletide program is the current offering at the Mark Strand Theatre in New York. "Twinkletoes" is the screen attraction of the bill, which includes a Mark Strand Yuletide Frolic staged by Managing Director Joseph Plunkett.

The Yuletide Frolics have always been one of the outstanding features of the Christmas Holiday attractions at Broadway cinemas, and the presentation this year is the most pretentious and elaborate in the history of the Strand.

The current offering is in six scenes and includes "The Cab Horse's Christmas," "A Box of Sailors," "The Enchanted Forest," Joe Thomas' Saxotette, and "The Palace," with George Ali, the Mark Strand Male Quartet, Pauline Miller, an augmented ballet corps, Charlie Bennington and others. The special scenes and costumes were designed by Henry Dreyfuss, the music arranged by Jacques Grunberg and the ballets by Anatole Bourman.

Other features of the bill are the Yuletide Prelude, played by the orchestra, the Strand Topical Review and organ solos by Walter Wild and Frederick Smith.

"Faust" Feature of Second Program at Kilbourn Hall

"Faust" will be the feature of the second of a series of special film presentations at Kilbourn Hall, Rochester. The German screen production will be offered January 9 with a special musical score including selections from the Gounod opera and played by an orchestra of selected musicians under the direction of Guy Fraser Harrison.

"Alaskan Adventures" was the feature of the first program in the series which General Manager Eric Clark of the Eastman Theatre gave a month ago.

Straight Policy Fails at Embassy; Return Acts

Plans to do away with special stage attractions in conjunction with the motion picture programs at the Embassy Theatre in Baltimore proved a failure and the house is again presenting acts on programs with feature films.

Theatregoers would not pay 60 cents top at night to see pictures alone, with the result that the Embassy was forced to abandon the straight films policy and book in stage acts again.

Favorable Reaction

The constantly increasing use of Eastman Panchromatic Negative Film by producers means more and more pictures with blues, reds, yellows and greens in their true black and white relationship.

Effects unobtainable with ordinary negative are usual with "Pan". And the difference—the superiority—of prints on Eastman Positive from "Pan" negatives is readily apparent on the screen.

Such an obvious—and important—improvement in the art cannot fail to have favorable box office reaction.

J. H. Hallberg Returns

After Absence of 4 years Pioneer Inventor Introduces New Reflector Arc Lamp

UP in Chickering Hall, 29 West 57th Street, New York City, are the newly equipped offices and salesroom of J. H. Hallberg, whose return to the motion picture industry, after an absence of about four years, he is celebrating with the introduction of a reflector arc projection lamp.

Mr. Hallberg needs but little introduction to the readers of this publication.

Not only is he the author of "Motion Picture Electricty," a standard work of reference, but was for some years a regular contributor to our Projection Department.

He is the inventor of the Hallberg electric economizer, for use with alternating current, also of a later invention known as the Hallberg A.C. to D.C. motor generator, which has saved exhibitors thousands of dollars in current bills.

Mr. Hallberg became connected with the motion picture industry as far back as the fall of 1907. A year later his economizer appeared on the market, to be followed by his A.C. to D.C. Motor Generator.

He was the first tenant on the ground floor quarters of 729 Seventh Avenue, which, originally arranged and fitted up by him, later served the United Theatre Equipment Corporation and still later the Independent Movie Supply Company as the finest motion picture supply emporium that New York City had known up to that time.

In 1917 the establishment was disposed of by Mr. Hallberg to the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, of which he became Vice-President, Director and Chief Engineer.

This connection existed until the fall of 1922, when Mr. Hallberg resigned from the United Theatre Equipment Corporation to assume the Directorship of Experimental Research in the Burnett-Timken Research Laboratory with which he was identified until December, 1925.

During his connection with the Burnett-Timken Laboratory Mr. Hallberg, whose experiments have been along the lines of developing medical light ray apparatus, had unexcelled facilities for extending his previous investigations of optical principles.

The results of this post-graduate course, as we may call it, have been embodied in the new Hallberg Reflector Arc Projection Lamp and with improved models of his economizer and A.C. to D.C. Motor Generators, he has assembled as a nucleus a collection of high-grade motion picture apparatus, with which he is now prepared to serve the exhibitors and projectionists of the world.

Mr. Hallberg has gathered around him a skilled staff of expert assistants and in addition to the marketing of high-grade projection apparatus, he will maintain an experimental developing and testing laboratory for electrical and optical devices and is open for consultation and advice on these subjects to exhibitors, inventors and manufacturers.

Atlanta's Veteran Theatre Man Opens New House

James A. Rebb, who in point of service is the oldest exhibitor in Atlanta and the first to operate a suburban picture house here, is planning to open his new theatre at 510 Decatur Street the first week in January. It is christened the New Victory.

For the past twelve years Mr. Rebb has been running the Victory Theatre at 514 Decatur Street, near the Fulton Bag & Cotton Mills.

Having outgrown this house, which seats only about 300, Mr. Rebb recently purchased the site a few doors away and set to work to remodel the building, which is 32 by 100 feet, and seats 500.

A new front has been built and other improvements made, including a stage, which is to be used from time to time for the presentation of vaudeville acts.

Smith Amus. Co. Completes Virginia House

L. R. Smith, head of the Smith Amusement Company, controlling seven theatres in eastern Ohio, has recently completed a new motion picture house known as the Palace at Huntington, W. Va. The new structure is modern and up-to-date in every respect and is located in the centre of the downtown district.

Allentown's Pergola Holds Premiere

New House Replaces Eighteen-Year-Old Theatre

Formal opening of the New Pergola picture theatre, erected at 28 North Ninth Street, Allentown, by James K. Bowen, took place on the evening of December 6, with dedicatory exercises and a fine film program that attracted a capacity crowd to this highly artistic and modern play house. This theatre replaces a theatre of the same name where Mr. Bowen started in the business eighteen years ago. D. Ellsworth Knorr, who has been associated with him as house manager during all that time, has been made manager of the New Pergola.

The seating capacity of the theatre is 1,200. The building is exquisite in design and the interior decorations are of rare beauty. The auditorium has been built with special care for the comfort of the patrons, one feature being that ample space has been left between the seats to prevent cramping the occupants. Early in the new year a unit organ will be installed, especially constructed by A. Gottfried, of Erie. There is a permanent six-piece orchestra under direction of Professor Vermond A. Knauss.

Among the well-wishers who sent gorgeous flowers on the opening night were the Allentown Kiwanis Club, The American Heating & Ventilating Company, The National Theatrical Supply Company, and Harry Bradsky, of Philadelphia.

It was announced that the policy of the theatre will be to offer first run programs of Fox and Warner Brothers feature pictures, O. Henry comedies and Fox varieties and news films.

"Bigger and Better Shows" for Ala. Small Towns

There is strong evidence that the smaller Alabama towns believe in "bigger and better shows." Among the more ambitious projects for towns in the 1,000 population class is the new Red Bay Theatre now being erected by T. A. Wilson, who has already established himself as a successful showman in the management of the Gem Theatre of Red Bay. The new Red Bay house is of brick, 50 by 100 feet, seats 800, and represents an investment of approximately $30,000.

Calvin Bard Announces Cedar Rapids House

ANNOUNCEMENT was recently made in Cedar Rapids, Ia., that Calvin Bard, who is said to be identified with the Loew interests and a theatre man of Indianapolis, has purchased the Boyson block and will erect a $750,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre building. The house will seat around 2,000 and will contain a large stage.

It is said that Mr. Bard will build the Cedar Rapids theatre as a personal investment, although it is believed that on its completion the house will be leased to the Loew interests.

M. P. Operator's Dance to be Held February 3rd

THE tenth annual reception and dance of the Moving Picture Machine Operator's Union will be held at Kruegers' Auditorium on Thursday evening, February 3, 1927. This event is sponsored by Local Number 244 of Newark, N.J., with offices at the Strand Theatre Building, suite 53.

Co-operation of all in this zone concerned is invited as the proceeds are to be used for the Sick and Death fund. Address all communications to W. C. Uessler, 25 Vernon Avenue, Newark, N.J.

Ground Broken for House at Venice, Fla.

Ground was broken last Monday for the erection of a theatre building at Venice, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' city on the West Coast of Florida. The structure is stated to cost $175,000, and is being built by Nieupert P. Estes of Orlando. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,500.

Inquiries and Comments

Effect of Aperture Size on Screen Illumination

Part I

IT is commonly accepted as a fact that the size of the aperture in a motion picture projector is one of the important factors in determining what screen illumination can be obtained with any given set of conditions as regards type of light source, diameter of objective lens, etc.

It has long been claimed that the present standard size of aperture (.906 in. wide by .6795 in. high) acts as a limit in the way of screen illumination and that if it were only possible to increase these dimensions, without, at the same time creating havoc among film standards, everything would be "hunky-dory" in a manner of speaking, since higher screen intensities could be obtained by the simple means of increasing the size of the light source (higher amperage arcs).

In other words, it is claimed that the present size of standard aperture makes it impossible to obtain higher screen intensities (a more brilliantly lighted screen) due to the fact that with any given optic system, there is a point beyond which an increase in size of light source will result in no further increase in intensity of screen illumination.

Thus, the limits for the common systems are approximately as follows:

Mazda lamp—30 volt. 30 ampere (filament 0.5 in. x 0.45 in.).

Ordinary Arc (Parabolic Condensers)—60 amperes.

Reflector Arc—25 amperes.

High Intensity Arc—Limit not yet reached.

Units of Illumination

At the present time, relatively few people have a clear conception regarding the correct use of the units which are employed for expressing illumination results and, indeed, it can be safely said, that only a comparatively limited group of people have any idea at all that there are such units and that they can be employed to differentiate between two degrees of illumination with any kind of accuracy.

Wrong concepts of fundamental units, or the possession of no concepts at all regarding fundamental units, are largely responsible for much of the ignorance among projectionists and a certain class of "technical writers," concerning even the simplest optical phenomena, since it is impossible for them to construct a satisfactory mental foundation to guide them when analyzing a given set of conditions. Hence, all the foolish statements concerning light action in general and optics in particular.

As regards illumination, there are two units which are more commonly used than others, these being the foot-candle and the lumen. The foot-candle is used to express the intensity of illumination at a point located some distance from the original source and so represents the energy remaining in the wave vibration after the light has traveled from the source to the point in question. Since energy is expended (as regards light) in making the light travel from one point to another it should be obvious that the farther the light proceeds from the source the weaker it becomes. In the same way that water waves become weaker and weaker the farther they travel from the point at which a stone is dropped into a pool of still water, so also do light waves diminish in strength as they leave the source and travel out into space.

The intensity of illumination, therefore, on a piece of paper held in the path of light from such a source as an incandescent lamp will become smaller and smaller as this paper is moved farther away from the lamp. In fact the intensity, expressed in foot-candles, will decrease inversely as the square of the distance between paper and lamp so that if the distance is doubled, the foot-candle intensity will be reduced to one-fourth its former value.

This is the well-known Law of Inverse Squares the application of which, however, appears to be not so well known. The fact that minors and lenses are used to intercept and redirect the light in no way alters this law if certain conditions are satisfied.

Illumination and Brightness

The intensity of illumination, expressed in foot-candles, in combination with the reflecting power of an object, and its surface finish (whether polished or dull) determine the degree of brilliancy so that for any given object, doubling the intensity of illumination will result in doubling its brilliancy. Strictly speaking, this is not true since the brilliancy of an object is the effect or sensation made upon the eye and the relation between sensation and illumination is not a direct one as will be shown in a later article.

The thing that we wish to bring out here, however, is that 4 foot-candles represent twice the illuminating power as do 2 foot-candles, and 8 foot-candles represents 4 times the illumination, etc.

The foot-candle, therefore, is a measure of the degrees of illumination at a point.

Now a point is really non-existent since it is defined as having no dimensions, so that while it is convenient in explaining things to refer to individual points, in practice the consideration is that of surfaces and not points. Any surface, however, can be considered as being made up of an infinite number of points so that in this manner it is possible to tie in abstract theory with practical conditions else practical solutions would be impossible.

If, now, a piece of paper (made up of a collection of innumerable points) measuring 12 x 12 inches were held in the path of light from an incandescent lamp, each point on the square of paper would be illuminated to an intensity determined by the light emitting power of the lamp and its distance from the paper. Let us suppose the intensity on each point of the paper is 2 foot-candles.

In order to avoid stretching our imagination too far and thus run the risk of permanently cracking it, let us discard the generally accepted definition of a point as something which has no dimensions and concede that a point is something which is microscopically small but nevertheless has size. This size may be only one one-millionth of an inch or anything else your fancy dictates. If your fancy is particularly dictatorial and you are in a bitter, critical mood as a result of rash holiday celebrations, you may even assign it a value of one ten-millionth of an inch.

No matter what size the point has, it should be obvious that a certain small volume of light will be required to illuminate it to our supposed value of 2 foot-candles. Furthermore, since the piece of paper is composed of millions of these points the total volume of light falling on the paper will be the number of points multiplied by the amount of light falling on each one of the points. The sum total will be the volume of light on the paper and this light volume is measured in lumens.

A lumen can be defined as the volume of light falling on a piece of paper measuring one foot square when each point on that paper is illuminated to an intensity of one foot-candle. Since our particular piece of paper has each of its points illuminated to an intensity of 2 foot-candles, twice the amount of light falls on each point and, therefore, twice the total volume falls on the entire paper so that there are 2 lumens on it.

To sum up what has been said so far—light intensities are measured at a point and are expressed in foot-candles. Since extended areas in the form of surfaces are encountered in our daily work we can hardly expect to illuminate a single point so that it is necessary to have an expression for denoting the volume of light falling on an area which is nothing more than a collection of points.

E. J. Sparks Opens Cameo at Lakeland, Fla.

THE opening of the Cameo Theatre, Lakeland, Fla., by the E. J. Sparks Enterprises was an unusually successful event and since that time the new house has enjoyed capacity business. B. B. Garner is the resident manager.

This house, operating with carefully selected first- and second-run product, is part of a nucleus of a chain of "Class B" theatres now being developed by Mr. Sparks, a veteran Florida showman, who, at one time, had as many as forty-nine houses under his control. These holdings were sold to Famous Players and the Universal Theatres Corp. some time ago.

Much care is given selecting the equipment for these houses, which includes such installations as heavy type upholstered chairs, Minusa screens, latest model Power's projectors with Peerless arcs and Wurlitzer organs.

Donovan Building House at Taunton, Mass.

James Donovan is erecting a 1,900-seat house on Broadway, Taunton, Mass., on the former Black and Spitz properties. The theatre will be pushed forward with all speed as soon as foundations are in. The recent fire which destroyed the Park Theatre there has made the need of another theatre imperative. Plans had already been started, however, for the new playhouse before fire destroyed the Park Theatre.

F.&R. Announces Largest Picture Theatre Stage in Country

THE State Theatre in Minneapolis is to have one of the largest stages of any picture house in the country. Announcement of this was made last week by Finkelstein & Ruben in full page ads which were carried in Minneapolis papers. The new stage, which will be completed about February 1, was termed "Finkelstein & Ruben's Christmas gift to the people of Minneapolis."

A corps of artisans, carpenters and stage experts are already at work enlarging and remodelling the State, which, when completed, will accommodate a score of entertainers and legitimate spectacles which cannot ordinarily be produced in a motion picture theatre. The curtain line will be extended 20 feet nearer the audience, and peristyles built into the background at enormous expense will be sacrificed in the rebuilding. In the place of these peristyles will be "huge papier mache sets given a flexibility of position by means of rollers, yet retaining the dignity and beauty of the rostrum." The most modern types of electrical equipment will replace the old, with footlights replaced by larger lamps set at greater intervals and spraying their rays upon the State through new diffusing lenses. The new lighting system will include 50 fine spot and 30 flood lights. Dressing-rooms which will accommodate 150 performers are being built as part of the general scheme of improvement.

It is claimed for this new stage that it will boast "500 yards of silk plush, 200 yards of gold braid, equipment to hang 52 sets of scenery, an enlarged orchestra pit, the largest electrical switchboard of any theatre in Minneapolis, a lighting system consuming a voltage capable of lighting a town of 3,000 inhabitants."

Once the stage is completed, it is planned to produce stage revues more pretentious than any which have yet been seen in the Twin Cities. One such offering is George Beban and his large company of players who will visit the State early in February, appearing both on the screen and in an elaborate stage sequence.

Valencia Opens on Roof

Lowe's Valencia Theatre, Baltimore, was opened to the public Christmas Eve with the new Mae Murray vehicle, "Valencia," as the attraction. The Valencia, a Spanish atmospheric type of playhouse, is located on the roof of Loew's Century, and replaces with new and more beautiful trimmings the old Century Roof Garden. The policy of the house will be extended runs for special pictures with performances continuous from 11 A.M. to 11 P.M. The price scale is 25 cents, from 11 to 12:30 noon; 35 cents from 12:30 to 5 P.M.; 60 cents from 5:30 to closing, for week days, with 50 and 65 cents admissions Saturdays and holidays.

Glen Dickinson is Active

Kansas-Missouri Theatre Owner Makes Radical Changes in Two Houses

PLANS for the complete rebuilding of the Bowersock Theatre, Lawrence, Kans., were recently announced by Glen Dickinson, owner of a string of playhouses in Kansas and Missouri. Boller Brothers, Kansas City architects, have been commissioned to draw the plans for what will probably be one of the finest motion picture theatres in the state.

While complete details are not available at the present time, a few of the most important features are mentioned in Mr. Dickinson's communication.

The main auditorium will be approximately twice its present size. This space will be gained by shortening the stage and moving the present balcony stairways inside the main auditorium. The remodeled stage will still be of ample size for road shows and vaudeville should those policies ever be adopted.

The front of the theatre will be at least twenty feet higher than at present, adorned by a seventy-five foot marquee. The front and marquee will carry over one thousand lights. A Persian design will be followed out.

The main auditorium will seat approximately 800 and specifications call for the finest seats obtainable. A spacious foyer will also be provided.

Mr. Dickinson also controls the theatres in Manhattan, Coffeyville, Junction City, Independence, Parsons and Lawrence, Kans., and Chillicothe and Independence, Mo.

Another theatre recently rebuilt by Glen Dickinson is the Varsity, also located in Lawrence. The entire front was changed to conform to Spanish design and the interior radically changed. New seats were also installed by the American Seating Company, 650 on the main floor and 550 in the balcony. An expensive new organ is included in the new equipment.

Frank Barnes is the house manager and the policy of the Varsity is high-class, first-run feature pictures.

Frank Amusement's Cedar Rapids Theatre Under Way

THE Frank Amusement Company of Waterloo, Iowa, announces the erection of a 2,500-seat vaudeville and photoplay combination theatre for Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to be operated jointly by the Frank Amusement Company and the Orpheum circuit of vaudeville theatres.

The plans call for a 2,500-seat house—1,600 seats on the main floor, 900 on the balcony, with a stage 30 feet by 100 feet; theatre to be equipped with a refrigerating plant. The building will occupy a site 180 x 140, covering an entire half city block on Third Avenue and Second Street, Cedar Rapids.

The theatre will be built according to plans prepared by W. P. Whitney, Chicago. These plans are to be approved by the Orpheum circuit architect.

The building will contain in addition to the theatre thirteen stores, basement cafeteria, basement billiard hall and bowling alley. There will also be sixteen offices and twenty-eight apartments. The building is to be completed by November 1st, 1927, and construction is to be started immediately. The contracts and financial details are being handled by Rupert Levine & Company of Chicago. Specifications call for a building consisting of three stories with a terra cotta front.

The Frank Amusement Company, which operates a number of theatres throughout Iowa, also has approved plans for the new Orpheum Theatre for Waterloo, Iowa, with a seating capacity of 2,000, located on Commercial Street between Fourth and Fifth streets adjoining the Paul Davis Dry Goods Company building. Construction of the Waterloo Orpheum Theatre will commence on January 17th, theatre to be completed on or before November 1, 1927.

Rialto At Williamsport, Pa., Holds Opening

The formal opening of the Rialto Theatre, Williamsport, Pa., proved to be quite an event in the civic life of that city, many prominent officials being present.

The Rialto was built at a reported cost of $350,000 and has every modern convenience. W. B. Wilson is the manager and part owner.

Inquiries and Comments

A collection of points, each illuminated to a certain intensity, represents a certain volume of light (no matter how small the area be) and this light volume is expressed in lumens.

The intensity of light on each point of an object will determine the brilliancy of that object to the eye and if the object is small, only a small volume of light will fall on it, whereas if the object is large, a greater volume of light will fall on it. If the foot-candle intensity is not changed, however, the brilliancy of the object will remain the same regardless of its size.

This assumes, of course, that the character of the object's surfaces is also not changed.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Upstage" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Allen Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio

Plain Dealer: "'Upstage' is a simple story, uncomplicated, and its pace varies with the mood of the sequences. Norma Shearer gives a finely calculated performance as Dolly Havens. The most exciting part of the picture is when Norma Shearer substitutes for another actress in a knife-throwing scene. Oscar Shaw repeats his good work as Johnny Storm, the hero of the picture. The remainder of the cast, with Gwen Lee, Dorothy Phillips, Tenen Holtz, Ward Crane and J. Frank Glendon, also does good work. Monta Bell, who has an unusual flair for seeking out realities, those too often slighted by most directors, makes this simple tale a vivid and highly stirring drama, resorting at the climax to a trick to fetch those hardhearts which have not already yielded to his deft touches at bringing life to the screen. It seems to be an unusually good picture of its kind, and I recommend it to you."

"Parisian Inspirations in Color, Displayed by Hope Hampton" —Educational, Paramount Theatre, New York

Herald-Tribune: "During the overture they were showing 'Fashion Flashes,' a film made by Hope Hampton in Technicolor. Anyone interested in clothes must not miss this short picture. It is exquisitely beautiful and more interesting than any of the previous reels in the series. Never before has Miss Hampton been so perfectly photographed. However, we confess to being one critic who believes that any picture is improved by a sequence in color."

Telegraph: "Hope Hampton is ravishing in her beauty at the Paramount. She isn't, in the film, listed as the feature. But she is a feature all by herself. Hope's gorgeousness shows to double advantage as do the wondrous things she models. Miss Hampton was well applauded. The feminine portion of the audience seemed enthralled with the gowns; the masculine contingent with Miss Hampton herself."

Graphic: "Hope Hampton, in a fashion film in color, is a feature of the program. Miss Hampton, undeniably one of filmdom's fairest, shows us what the well-dressed girl is wearing this winter."

Journal: "An added feature is a short color film in which Hope Hampton displays the current Parisian styles. Hope is lovely in color photography, and the gorgeous costumes include the kind of suits, hats, coats, evening dresses, daytime frocks and pajamas that the well dressed woman wears if she can afford to."

"The Volga Boatman"—Producers Distributing Corp., Embassy Theatre, Shanghai, China

China Press: "'The Volga Boatman' is a real drama, stirring—gripping—alarming—and suspenseful in combining to make it one of the greatest pictures of the decade. 'The Volga Boatman' is primarily a picture with a soul and as such has a tremendous appeal for all nationalities and races and is a masterpiece of an artist—Cecil B. De Mille."

Three Centuries of Learning How to build Pipe Organs Results in "The Voice of the Silent Drama"

BACK in 1640 Sebastian Kilgen built the first pipe organ which bore his name. That rare old instrument went into an old time abbey, now in ruins, and there it served its inspiring purpose.

Today in motion picture theatres throughout the nation, toneful descendants of that early instrument delight millions of theatregoers with "The Voice of the Silent Drama."

The Kilgen Wonder Organ has attained its position of preeminence among theatre organs only because of the three centuries which have contributed to its development. Since 1640 the Kilgen Family has been helping to improve pipe organ music. The pinnacle of its effort has been reached in "The Voice of the Silent Drama." . . . An interesting brochure on Kilgen achievement will be sent on request.

How to get the best results from Incandescent Lamp Projection Equipment

Your theatre or studio may be ideally suited to incandescent lamp projection—your projection unit may be the last word in efficiency, but unless you use lamps that effectively meet the hardest tests of service you will not get the steady, economical and thoroughly satisfactory results that are possible with this new method of projection.

The great majority of projectionists have learned that Edison MAZDA Lamps assure the best possible results from any type of incandescent lamp projection equipment.

And no wonder! They were developed by the General Electric Company through years of research and experimentation and represent the very limits of engineering ability in this particular field.

Edison MAZDA Lamps are available at supply dealers in all sections of the country. If your own supply dealer cannot supply you, write direct to the Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, N. J., and you will be notified promptly of another convenient source of supply.

BROADWAY ABLAZE WITH WELCOME FOR M-G-M $2 HITS

"Fire Brigade" and "Tell It to the Marines" are talk of town

NEW YORK, N. Y.—New York has just witnessed the most exciting premieres of its theatrical history with the opening of two great M-G-M $2 attractions.

"The Fire Brigade" opened December 20th at the Central Theatre amid the applause of a public that welcomed the first real thriller of years. Newspaper reviewers are commenting on the wonders that this unique fire spectacle unfolds and point out that it has a heart-throb power even greater than "The Old Nest". The advance sale at the box-office with a $2 admission charge indicates that "The Fire Brigade" is a real hit. New York firemen are behind the engagement solid.

In line with its policy to present only the biggest attractions at the Embassy Theatre, Lon Chaney in "Tell It to the Marines" began a sensational engagement Thursday night, Dec. 23rd, at $2 admission. Theatrical circles on Broadway predict another "Big Parade" and this theory is born out at the box-office where the house is sold out for four weeks in advance. William Haines is the talk of critics and public. Full cooperation of the U. S. Marines is helping to establish this rousing M-G-M attraction.

"SCARLET LETTER" BOOKED HEAVILY

Lillian Gish's big $2 hit ends five-month success on Broadway

RICHMOND, VA.—At the Capitol Theatre, Richmond, Va., in one of the first engagements of its heavily booked schedule, "The Scarlet Letter" indicates that the country at large waits eagerly for Lillian Gish's starring triumph fresh from five months of Broadway acclaim at $2. Roy P. Rosser, Manager of the Capitol wires: "'Scarlet Letter' opened Monday to turnaway business—matinee today in pouring rain. House filled. Looks like extended run production. Unanimously acclaimed great picture."

CLEVELAND, O.—"The Scarlet Letter," in snow-bound Cleveland, registered on its second Monday, the biggest day's receipts so far this season at the Stillman Theatre.

Few pictures have enjoyed the advance praise and publicity received by Miss Gish's great production and the volume of bookings promises to exceed any attraction in which she has ever appeared.

"TIN HATS" BREAKING RECORDS EVERYWHERE

Telegrams continue to pour into the offices of M-G-M regarding the sensational box-office success of the comedy hit "Tin Hats." Doug Kimberley, Manager Colonial Theatre, Tacoma, Washington, wires: "'Tin Hats' breaking all records. Best business this year. S. R. O. sign out Saturday, Sunday, Monday. Crowds stood on line two hours tonight. 'Tin Hats' a Riot."

From the Pasadena Theatres Corp., Manager H. B. Wright, telegraphs: "M-G-M still breaking records. 'Tin Hats' does biggest business history of house."

In big cities as well as small towns it is evident that "Tin Hats" has struck the popular flair for comedy and will go on record as one of the year's most successful pictures.

DETROIT WILD OVER CHANEY IN "MARINES"

S.R.O. for "Tell It to the Marines" at Madison Theatre

DETROIT, MICH.—Detroit film men are watching with keen interest the S.R.O. crowds at the Madison Theatre, where Lon Chaney in "Tell It to the Marines" is settling into an extended run. The box-office reports opening day "from one this afternoon until nine-thirty tonight it has been standing room only. It looks as though the New York success will be topped in Detroit and throughout America. William Haines is coming star."

According to present indications bookings on "Tell t to the Marines" will have reached a greater total in quicker time than any previous M-G-M release.

M-G-M STUDIO REVEALS BIG PRODUCTIONS COMING

"Old Heidelberg" goes into work with Ramon Novarro starring

CULVER CITY, CAL.—The Culver City studio of M-G-M is humming with activity. Spurred on by the success of their nationally famous specials, studio officials, stars and directors are engaged on the greatest period of activity in the history of this company.

"Old Heidelberg," starring Ramon Novarro, is under way. Ernest Lubitch is directing this giant enterprise and it will set a new mark in production annals.

Clarence Brown is directing M-G-M's great epic of the opening of Alaska, based on Robert W. Service's "Trail of Ninety-Eight."

Lon Chaney is working in the famous vehicle "Mr. Wu", noted as both a novel and stage success.

Among other important pictures nearing completion are Norma Shearer in "The Demi-Bride" with Lew Cody; "Women Love Diamonds", with an all-star cast; "Winners of the Wilderness", Tim McCoy's new offering to follow "War Paint" and "Slide Kelly Slide", with William Haines featured in a picture that will be to baseball what his "Brown of Harvard" was to football.

Ten other companies are working on the M-G-M lot in addition to the above, and the audiences which today are applauding "The Fire Brigade", "Tell It to the Marines" and other M-G-M hits may look forward to even greater entertainments in the coming months.

Get the Best Reflector Arc
Get a Stereopticon —FREE

The HALLBERG REFLECTOR ARC

It possesses the following points of superiority embodied in no other Reflector Arc:

POINTS OF SUPERIORITY

(1) Operates on a continuously steady amperage adjustable between 10 and 30. Arc voltage adjustable between 45 and 55 with one volt variation of any desired setting.

(2) Takes full 16″ carbon trim. With a second negative carbon in a magazine attachment.

(3) No variation in carbon resistance, because current always is fed to carbon within 1½″ of crater.

(4) Shortest lamp built. No longer than a vertical arc lamp house. No extension foot plates required for projector.

(5) Even crooked carbons center perfectly and cannot get out of alignment.

(6) No sliding rods or carriages within lamp house. Mechanism and feed are along high intensity arc lines.

(7) Lamp weighs less than 50 lbs.

(8) No condensers.

(9) ARC CONTROL and MOTOR FEED in SEPARATE CASING OUTSIDE LAMP HOUSE. This obviates damage from heat and carbon dust.

(10) Stereopticon attachment has individual auxiliary arc, thus providing perfect slide projection.

INSTALLATIONS

Early models of this lamp are used in the following theatres:

Novelty Theatre, New York
Arch Theatre, New York

A Real Aid to the Box-Office

AS 1927 gets under way, everybody is agreed that the call for quality product is insistent. That has been true of every year; but in 1927 the situation is heightened by the fact that the quality theatre is definitely established—country-wide—and the studios will have to keep pace.

Theatre records show that, however excellent the surroundings and the presentation, grosses at the box-office go up or down in accordance with the feature picture. Exceptions noted; but they are only exceptions and do not nullify the rule.

It is true, however, that modern mechanical aids do figure emphatically at the box-office. They cannot redeem a poor picture; but, by contributing to the comfort of the patron, they pull the average higher at the box-office.

* * *

The facts show this to be true. Let's take the subject of cooling and ventilation.

We have recently seen some rather astonishing figures on a group of theatres, now air-conditioned where previously they were not, at least on the most modern scale.

The cooling system, in the best known of these houses, for example, is reflected definitely at the box-office.

The summer average of business at this theatre, prior to refrigeration, was about $18,500 per week. After installation of this apparatus, it went up to approximately $24,000. This, in itself, is remarkable.

Even the year's average was pulled up—from about $21,000 to $23,000—after the adoption of air-conditioning.

And the extraordinary thing is that the summer average, for the refrigeration period, is actually higher than the year average. When it is remembered that the best product is not ordinarily released in summer, the argument for theatre refrigeration becomes still more impressive.

There can be no question, after a study of these figures, that the summer bugaboo has no longer any excuse for existence. If further proof were needed, take the case of "Variety" and its remarkable run on Broadway last summer. A record was set, it will be remembered. The picture, itself, was of course, extraordinary. But let's not forget that the house itself, because it was refrigerated, contributed definitely to the box-office gross.

Theatre refrigeration—or air-conditioning—is indispensable, because the facts demonstrate it. These processes seem to us to be one of the most important of all allies to the growth and expansion of the industry. If it is true that they increase grosses at the box-office—and they do—they play a great part in progress. The theatre is the life-blood of the business; as it grows, box-office wise, the industry prospers.

Such a remarkable increase in business as the above figures indicate should be called to the attention of every exhibitor. The means are now at hand to make the theatre an all-the-year-round earner; the mechanical means.

Their wide adoption, in theatres throughout the country, seems to us inevitable, because of the proved facts. In any event, it is by no means too early for the progressive exhibitor to begin thinking of his summer problem. The houses that are refrigerated will be insuring themselves against a summer slump, speaking conservatively. But they will be doing far more than that: they will be assuring themselves a higher average gross for the year; and their industry still greater expansion.

The Week in Review

By William A. Johnston

FOLLOWING last week's remarkable showing, when the 15 Broadway houses showing pictures turned in a total estimated at from $425,000 to $450,000, business continued remarkably strong with every attraction on the street this week. While not as heavy as last week, the fact that most of the Broadway picture theatres now open on Saturday, which was New Year's Day, will boost the total figure.

Practically all of the long-run pictures took a strong jump last week, including some which were about ready to leave, and were still holding up firmly this week. "The Big Parade," for instance, went over $21,000 last week, and the New Year's Eve business was as heavy as a year ago. "What Price Glory" went to its highest figure so far, in excess of $19,000, at the Harris. "Beau Geste," at the Criterion, now rounding out its first six months, went well above what it has been doing the past several weeks. All of these will continue above the average this week. The Vitaphone shows, "Don Juan" and "The Better 'Ole," received a strong increase last week, some of which continued this week.

At the Cohan, "Michael Strogoff" last week went to better than $15,000, which is much the strongest showing it has made so far.

* * *

AT the same time, "The Cheerful Fraud" at the Paramount Theatre was turning in a gross in excess of $78,000, so Universal executives had every reason to feel it was a Happy New Year.

The Capitol Theatre came in second with "Valencia," business being around $65,000. "A Little Journey," this week, is doing very nicely, although it is not the draw that "Valencia" is, naturally enough. Better than $45,000 on the week may be looked for. "The Flesh and the Devil," which follows it, is counted on to hold for two big weeks.

The Strand Theatre had a big Christmas week with "Twinkletoes," and "The Lady in Ermine," which followed, is bringing in good, average business. Probably not far from $30,000 will be recorded.

* * *

AT the Cameo "The Gorilla Hunt" continues to be one of the surprise pictures of the season. Last week it went close to $6,500, and the figure up to Wed. night of this week was just over $3,200, making another $5,000 gross for the week likely. Very little special advertising has been given the attraction.

The Rivoli and Rialto were both doing strongly the early part of this week with "Old Ironsides" and "Sorrows of Satan." Now that the pre-holiday slump is a thing of the past, "Old Ironsides" is expected to settle into its stride for a long run, while "The Sorrows of Satan" in its shorter form and on a continuous run policy is counted on for a much better showing than it made as a two-a-day.

ALTHOUGH there are other and more spectacular features in the Paramount Theatre, none is more significant than that to be placed in the house by the Paramount Pep Club—a life-size portrait of Adolph Zukor, presented by the club as a token of its esteem and regard for the man who built this organization and brought his vision to fruition in the erection of this palatial edifice. It is being painted by Giuseppe Trotta, and Mr. Zukor is now sitting for the portrait.

The committee in charge of this included Palmer Hall Stilson, Eugene J. Zukor, Melville A. Shauer, Harry A. Nadel, Fred L. Metzler, Glendon Allvine, Vincent Trotta, Agnes F. Mengel, Irene Scott, Arthur J. Dunne and Sally McLoughlin.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

A.M.P.A. ENTERTAINED

MEMBERS of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers were guests of the Cheese Club at the Twin Oaks restaurant in New York on December 30. The affair was a memorable one, with Lew Fields and Joe Weber, Vesta Victoria and Sissle and Blake among the entertainers. Harry Hershfield, president of the Cheese Club, was master of ceremonies, while appreciation was voiced for the A.M.P.A. by its president, Walter Eberhardt.

SHOT IN THE AIR

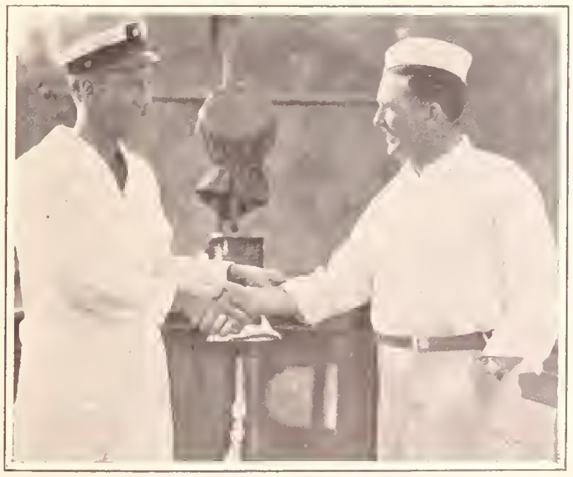
AMONG the unusal qualities of "Wings," Paramount's story of the part played by the birdmen in the great war, is the fact that almost the entire picture has been shot off the ground. Except for a few scenes which, in their very nature, had to be taken from "sea level," all shooting was done from airplanes, 100-foot towers and captive balloons.

FINANCIAL FOREBEARS

JESS SMITH, head of Jess Smith Productions which soon starts filming "The Poor Nut" for First National, has associated with him as treasurer a man with a remarkable financial background. He is Alexander Hamilton, great-great-grandson of the Alexander Hamilton who signed the Declaration of Independence, became first Treasurer of the United States and mapped out our money system. He is also a nephew of J. P. Morgan, and is widely known in financial circles himself.

WAITED FOR THE BOATMAN

ON the unimpeachable authority of Frank Pope, we pause to relate the story of an elderly lady in



Billy Dooley, player in Christie comedies, and William Watson, director, off on a yachting cruise, "put 'er there" to pledge their best efforts for bigger and better Laugh Months

Lou Diamond, representing the M. P. Athletic Association, presents Alan E. Freedman, Fox athletic chairman, with the baseball trophy won by Fox in 1926

A goodly share of the chuckles, chortles and guffaws during Laugh Month will be due to the Whirlwind comedies produced by Charley Bowers' process for F. B. O.

Lloyd Hamilton greets Laugh Month with a solemn face. He's been lying awake nights thinking of funny stunts for Laugh Month Educational comedies

Hope Hampton displaying four of the fashion creations which she wears in "Parisian Inspirations in Color" and "Paris Originations in Color," two of the McCall Color Fashion News films released by Educational and made by the Kodachrome process in natural color.

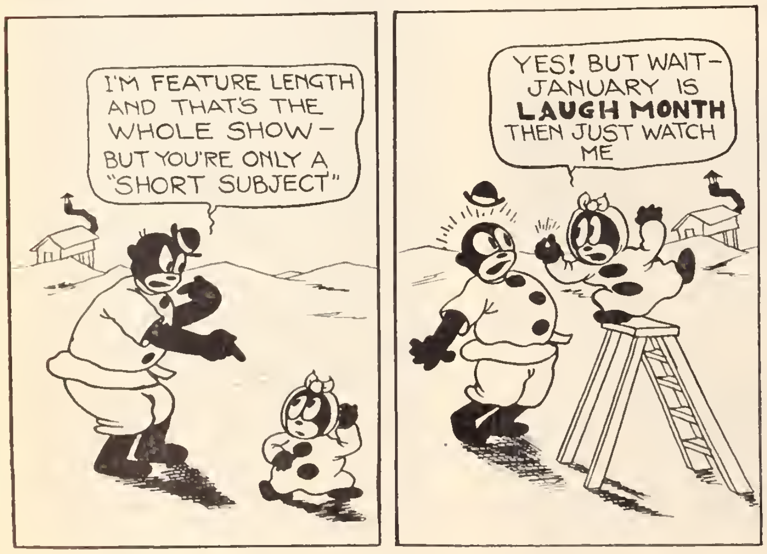
Globe, Ariz., who presented at the Globe Theatre during the run of "The Volga Boatman" a ticket some five years old. Asked why she had kept it so long she replied that she had purchased it and then decided to wait until a picture came along that she really wanted to see. We suggest that Albert Raboghiatti of the Globe Theatre try to sell her another ticket for use along about 1942.

UP THEY COME

NOTHING is more fascinating in this colorful industry than the parade of new faces, the sudden ascent of new personalities, the stories of success earned after years of apparently fruitless effort. Here are a few from the week's batch of news, in no wise remarkable or unique in themselves, but illustrative of the constant change of personnel that brings new blood into this business.

Natalie Kingston—educated at a convent—showed a love and talent for dancing which subsequently led her to appear with Fanchon and Marco—dancing partner of Jack Holland—a season's engagement at the Winter Garden in New York. Then two-reel comedies for Mack Sennett in support of Harry Langdon—small roles in features—feminine lead in "The Silent Lover"—and now a Wampas Baby Star, to be given the support of all the publicity which goes with that honor.

Dorothy Arzner—college—ambulance driver in New York and Los Angeles during the war—back to Los Angeles—met William de Mille and decided that her future lay in motion pictures—became a script typist in the scenario department—script holder with Nazimova. Made up her mind to be a director and took up film cutting as the next step—cut "Blood and Sand"—Cruze drafted her to do the same for "The Covered Wagon"—wrote originals and continuities—visited Cruze during filming of "Old Ironsides" and was asked to edit it—accepted and returned to Paramount. Executives who had studied her work offered her a position as director—her first assignment, "Fashions for Women," with Esther Ralston.



I'M FEATURE LENGTH AND THAT'S THE WHOLE SHOW—BUT YOU'RE ONLY A "SHORT SUBJECT"
YES! BUT WAIT—JANUARY IS LAUGH MONTH THEN JUST WATCH ME

Two of the characters in Life Cartoon comedies, released by Educational, pose for a little pantomime in two scenes, the moral of which is: "It's a long worm that has no turning"

Sally Blane—ten years ago, under the name of Betty Jane Young, a 6-year-old player before the camera—three years of success—then the age when she became too old for child parts and too young for ingenues—back to the school books. Then, a few months ago, the decision to try again—cast in a Universal picture—attracted attention—a member of the Floradora sextette in "Casey at the Bat"—and now, cast to play opposite Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery," his next vehicle.

Polan Banks—cub reporter on the Ledger-Dispatch in his native Norfolk, Va.—wrote historical feature articles, followed by a serial of the days of Louis XIV, "The Unusual Honeymoon." Wrote "Black Ivory," published by Harpers and purchased for the screen—sold an original to Fox Films, "Stage Madness"—another to Fox, "My Wife's Honor"—and now, as this is written, he is on the 20th Century for Hollywood to join the Fox scenario staff—and 21 years of age.

JUNIOR STARS FORGE AHEAD

IN less than a year since their graduation seven of the Paramount Junior Stars have had the thrill of being cast in featured roles in Paramount pictures and one has been in a number of roles for another company. The coming year bids fair to start them on the road to fame.

It was last March that they were awarded diplomas and contracts by Jesse L. Lasky, after a six-months' course.

Since then Charles Rogers has played one of the leads in one of the biggest pictures of the year, "Wings," directed by William Wellman; Walter Goss has had an important part with Gloria Swanson in "Fine Manners," and Jack Luden has played in several F.B.O. pictures.

Among the girls Mona Palma has been leading woman for Thomas Meighan in "The Canadian," directed by William Beaudine; Josephine Dunn has had the feminine lead in "Love's Greatest Mistake," an Edward Sutherland picture; Iris Gray has had an important role in the same picture and in a Robert Kane production, and Ivy Harris has had a featured role in W. C. Fields' third starring picture, "The Potters."

Thelma Todd has just begun work in an important role in Ed Wynn's first starring picture for Paramount. "Rubber Heels;" Mona Palma will begin work soon in the Gilda Gray picture, "Cabaret," and Miss Harris is under consideration for another role.

WHAT DOES A DELIRIUM LOOK LIKE?

WRITING the plot of a delirium is the difficult task that has fallen to the lot of Emmet Crozier of the Paramount Long Island studio scenario department. The shot will be used in Thomas Meighan's latest starring picture now in process of filming under direction of Frank Tuttle. It shows the disordered images that whirl through Meighan's mind as he is recovering consciousness on a hospital cot after being struck by an automobile. According to Crozier's script the scene will represent a chaos of confused traffic, taxi-cabs and automobiles crossing in a maze of gleaming headlights, finally one huge machine bearing down into the center of the picture. The family outlined knobs of the bedposts assume the form of blinding searchlights plunging on top of their victim and, out of the middle of the scene, appears the face of his sweetheart, growing larger until it almost fills the screen. Meighan awakes to consciousness. The shot will be made by Fred Waller, expert trick illusionist at the Long Island studio, and will be effected largely through the use of camera lens distortion and multiple exposure.

Colleen Moore, to prepare herself for her role in "Orchids and Ermine," her latest First National picture, takes instruction in the art of switchboard chauffeuring at the Southern California Bell Telephone Company's operators' school, with Miss May Converse as tutor

THE FAIR SIGRID PLAYS CHEF

THAT the epicures of the trade papers—and some few others—might be impressed with the culinary skill of Sigrid Holmquist, she decided she would play chef-hostess at luncheon. Accordingly the S.S. De Grasse was selected for the affair which, considering the justified reputation which the French have for excellence in cooking, was most fitting. The date January 3rd. Miss Holmquist received her guests in a chef's head-dress and apron and when they had been properly greeted and impressed with the fact that she had just come from the kitchens of the French liner removed these habiliments to be her modish Swedish self. Partly because officials of the steamship line were entertaining in the main dining room at the same time and partly through consistency the luncheon was served in the Salle à manger des enfants (Children's eating salon). Among the better known "children" who sat down were Kelcey Allen, of Women's Wear (not a fashion authority but play reviewer), Frederick Schader of Variety, Charley Hastings of the Moving Picture World, Al Selig of Tiffany Pictures, Mr. and Mrs. William T. ("Mary Jane") Warren of Motion Pictures Today and other luminaries. Commenting on the food when your hostess is as physically and mentally attractive as Sigrid Holmquist is becomes rather difficult if not impossible. I imagine it was excellent; it must have been if she prepared it—or even if she didn't and had a French chef understudy.

We can't reproduce it in natural color, but here is one of the scenes from "Fishermen's Luck," a short subject in technicolor made by Colorart Pictures and released by Tiffany. Actually made with the fishing fleet, it shows the real story of deep sea fishing

The luncheon really was more to tell the world that she is beginning a series of personally fashioned pictures for Colorart under C. F. Nagel's direction. With her fair hair and skin and blueness of eye and redness of lip she should make decidedly effective pictures. The company has already turned out several novelty films which have made a hit, such as the story of the origin of Whittier's "The Barefoot Boy."

NEW YORK TO HOLLYWOOD

AN array of First National executives, headed by General and Production Manager Richard A. Rowland, left on the 20th Century for Los Angeles on Tuesday. Also accompanying the party was Natli Barr, celebrated Russian beauty now under First National contract, who will make her first picture for the company at the Burbank studios.

Others in the group who went to the Coast were Ned E. Marin, sales manager; Mrs. Florence Strauss, scenario editor; Charles Rogers, producer of the Ken Maynard features, and Mrs.

"All aboard for Laugh Month," says Charles Puffy, rotund Universal comedy star. We'd like to have a photo of what happened after he mounted the diminutive equine

Comedy, romance and thrills are blended in the story of "The Kid Brother," Harold Lloyd's newest comedy for Paramount release. These three scenes show something of the humor of the medicine show sequences, the youthful romance, and the melodrama of the sequence in which the "kid brother" shows the stuff that is in him and asserts his rightful place

Rogers; and D. S. Squires, manager for Richard Barthelmess.

Manager Rowland will confer with John McCormick, manager of West Coast Productions, and M. C. Levee, general executive manager, anent current and future production activities at Burbank. He will also arrange the final details for the annual sales convention which takes place at Burbank this Spring.

Mrs. Strauss carried with her to Burbank recently purchased story material and will advise with the West Coast scenario department in regard to its preparation. Sales Manager Marin, after a two weeks' stay at Burbank, will visit the Western exchanges.

DE MILLE'S DAUGHTER IN DEBUT

THE eldest daughter of William C. de Mille, Agnes de Mille, will make her professional debut as a dancer in the production of Mozart's comic opera, "La Finta Giardiniera," which Macklin Marrow, who directed the production of Gluck's "Orpheus" at the Provincetown Theatre last season, and his newly formed Intimate Opera Company will soon present at an uptown Broadway theatre.

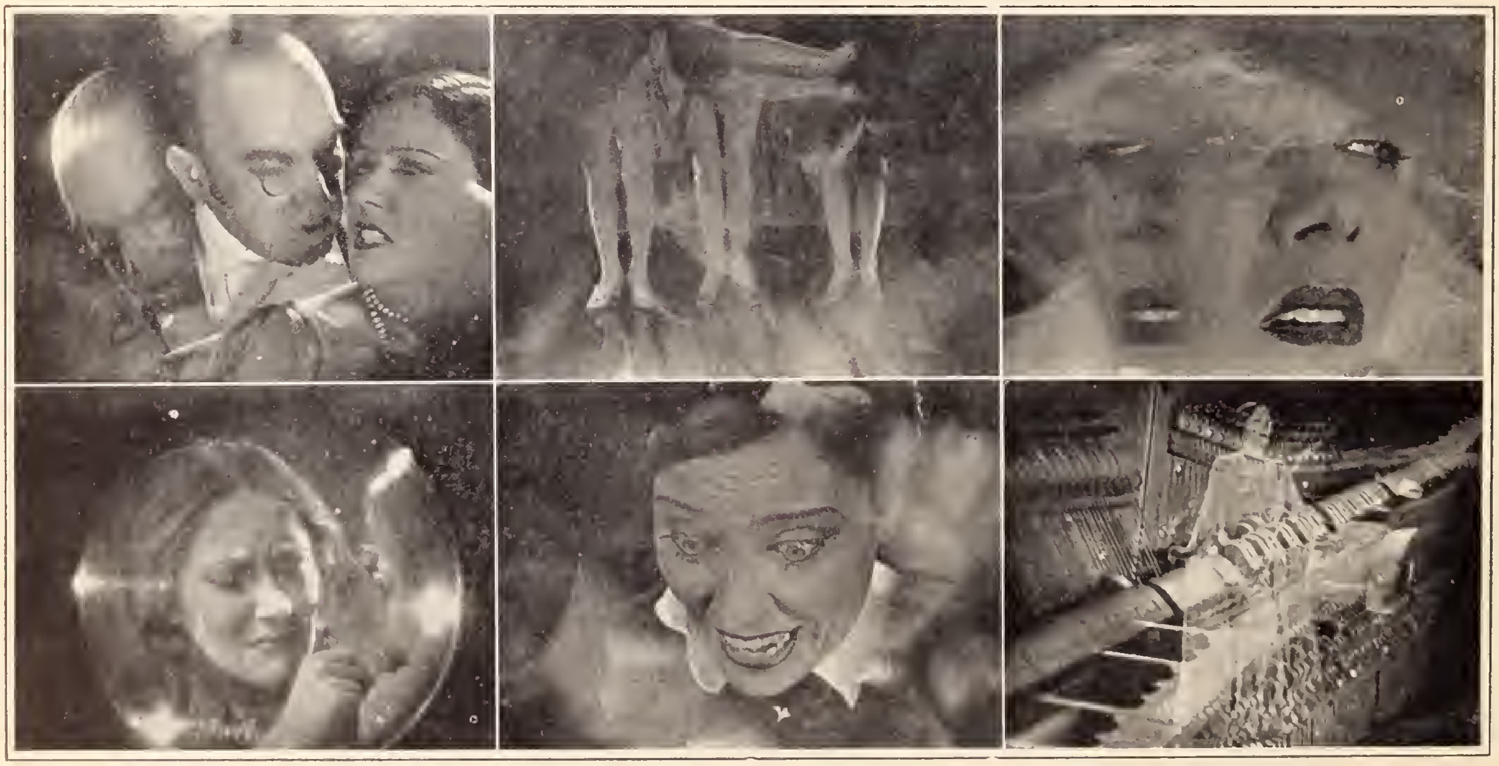
Miss de Mille was graduated from the University of California last spring and directed the ballets and danced in Gilmore Brown's Pasadena Community play and in "The Soul of Mary Jane," adapted from Lord Dunsany's "Kith of the Elf Folk," which Mr. Brown later produced on the West Coast. She has studied dancing under Theodore Kosloff, now a popular motion picture actor, and under Alexander Volenine.

IT WILL BE DONE

UNIVERSAL has purchased as a vehicle for one of Laura La Plante's stories next year an original scenario by Don Cobb and J. Frank Beale. It has been given the title, "It Can Be Done," which is the Carl Laemmle slogan used extensively by the sales force of Universal.

The story is written around a department store girl and in its final analysis will be, it is hoped, the epic of the department store. For the last six months the authors have been in consultation with department stores in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago to insure accuracy of detail, the proper and authentic atmosphere, and in order to justly represent the activities, problems and life of thousands and thousands of department store people.

J. Frank Beale is the former advertising director of Macy's, Strawbridge & Clothier's and several other big department stores.



Unusual dramatic effects and the saving of a great deal of unnecessary footage has been made possible in "Sunya," Gloria Swanson's first for United Artists, by the unique camera work of Dudley Murphy, who assisted Fernand Leger on "Ballet Meccanique." The various threads of the story are connected by scenes viewed in a crystal globe, which offered a logical place for the introduction of the odd photographic effects shown here, at the same time effecting a considerable saving in footage over the usual methods of going from one episode to another

Fox-Case and Vitaphone in Joint Arrangement

Licenses Exchanged, Making it Possible for Theatres to Show Both Types of Talking Picture; Use Same Amplifiers

THE Vitaphone Corporation and the Fox-Case Corporation announced on Thursday that they had entered into a contract by the terms of which the Vitaphone has licensed the Fox-Case Corporation to produce the so-called talking motion pictures under the system developed by the Western Electric Company.

The majority stock in the Fox-Case Corporation is jointly owned by the Fox Film Corporation and the Fox Theatres Corporation. The product of this new company will be distributed by the Fox Film Corporation and will be known as "Movietone."

The Vitaphone Corporation will continue to license exhibitors to reproduce synchronized pictures, and Fox-Case plans to distribute its pictures to theatres so licensed by Vitaphone and having Vitaphone equipment installed. Reciprocally and by the same agreement the Fox-Case Corporation has granted the Vitaphone Corporation licenses under its patent and patent applications and the right to use the method devised by it.

To Continue Developments

It is understood that the Western Electric Company intends to continue its developments in this field. Through the arrangements just completed, the facilities of the powerful Fox interests are made available in connection with this further development. It is expected that this will lead to the more rapid introduction of equipments in theatres.

The agreement further covers the exchange by the two companies of artists and for their mutual co-operation in all particulars. The Fox-Case studios have already made a number of productions and expect to increase their activities along this line so that there will be made available to theatres in which Vitaphone equipment is installed the productions of both the Vitaphone and Fox-Case studios. Arrangements have been made with artists of such a comprehensive character as to assure programs of wide variety and interest.

Fox-Case and Vitaphone differ materially, Fox-Case recording and reproducing sound photographically and Vitaphone phonographically. Both systems require for their highest development the use of Western Electric recording and reproducing units.

Fox Comments On Possibilities

Commenting on the possibilities of this new field, William Fox said: "Heavy responsibility rests on those whose happy fortune it is to have the opportunity of public service through this new art.

"This amazing accomplishment, now perfected, certainly is destined to have far-reaching influence in the world. Its influence will be felt not only in motion picture theatres everywhere, but in 150,000 churches for religious purposes, and in 270,000 schools for educational purposes, and in the 20,000,000 American homes.

"Sight and hearing have at last been successfully combined on the screen; the scientists who have perfected this amazing development may have reached the highest achievement in this age of wonders. Therefore, it is fitting that in this public announcement they should be named. They are the engineers of the Western Electric Company and the Bell Telephone laboratories, and the Case Research laboratories of Auburn, N.Y. While the Fox companies have been interested for some time in the development of this and other new features in motion pictures, we have refrained from making any announcements until we could form and perfect an association which we felt was broad enough to develop these new fields.

"We believe Movietone pictures will appeal not only to the twenty-five millions who now see motion pictures weekly in this country, but to an additional twenty-five millions who are not now regular patrons of motion picture theatres. To that end we pledge our most earnest endeavor."

Warner Congratulates Fox

Harry M. Warner, President of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., says:

"I cannot help but compliment, and congratulate William Fox and the Fox interests for the far-sighted step they have taken in obtaining a license from the Vitaphone Corporation. I consider this one of the greatest forward moves that has taken place in the industry since the inception of motion pictures and the birth of the Vitaphone.

"It is my sincere belief that the Vitaphone, in the course of a short time, will play not only the greatest part in the entertainment of the public, but will be one of the greatest forces directed toward educational advancement. Not only will it be used in synchronizing music to pictures, but legitimate dramas, comedies and operas will be produced by the Vitaphone and reproduced in theatres throughout the world.

"I always believed Mr. Fox was a great showman, but now I am more than convinced that he has even a greater foresight as to the future of the motion picture entertainment."

Peacock Will Distribute in China for F. N.

DISTRIBUTION of First National product in Far Eastern Republic and Mongolia has been secured by the Peacock M. P. Corp. under a contract just signed. Forty-seven features will be handled.

Peacock now is producing four features and two-two reel comedies a year at its studio a Shanghai. Native players are used exclusively and S. J. Benjamin Ching, a Columbia University graduate, is directing. The product is distributed in the Federated Malay States, Dutch East Indies and the Philippines as well as in China. Peacock has just taken over management and control of the Palace Oriental in Shanghai, which has about 600 seats. The company also operates a house in Tsinanfu.

A.M.P.A. Discusses Newspaper Rates

Discussion of proposed revision of newspaper rates to give amusements the same price scale enjoyed by other industries was the chief business of the A.M.P.A. at Thursday's meeting. H. M. Newman, publisher of "The Fourth Estate," which is advocating rate revision, was the principal speaker. A committee is to be named to represent the A.M.P.A. in the campaign.

William A. Crinley of Universal Dead

William A. Crinley, 41, unit production manager at Universal City, died at a Los Angeles hospital when he failed to rally after an operation for stomach trouble. He had been connected with Universal since 1914.

Directors Postpone Exhib. Body Meet

DUE to the nearness of the dates to the new year and the consequent inability of many members of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. A. to attend the meeting and conference scheduled for Columbus, Ohio, on January 6 and 7, the convention has been postponed. The date will be agreed upon by the national office after it has learned definitely of the dates most agreeable to the business convenience of the majority.

Many of the officers of the organization were of the opinion that the conference and meeting should take place simultaneously as they would bring together the active persons of the organization and thus the major problems of the industry could be laid before them and solutions agreed upon.

Corinne Griffith Signed By United Artists, Coast Reports

Corinne Griffith

ACCORDING to reports from Los Angeles this week, Corinne Griffith has been signed to make one picture for United Artists. It is believed that this contract is the forerunner of complete affiliation with the other stars in the organization, though no official announcement has been made.

The Coast report said that the United Artists contract was made,, following the failure of Asher, Small & Rogers to exercise their option on Miss Griffith's services. Her contract expires with the completion of "Three Hours," twelfth of the series made for Asher, Small & Rogers for First National release on March 20.

Appeals for Abolition of Bureau in Address at Opening of Legislature

ADDRESSING the New York State Legislature on January 5, Governor Alfred E. Smith, who was inaugurated on January 1, as Governor of the State for the fourth time, declared in his annual message that he favored the abolishment of motion picture censorship in the Empire State. Governor Smith was emphatic in his declaration against motion picture censorship and declared that there was no more reason for it than there was for the censorship of books, the press or the spoken drama.

Governor Smith said:

"Although the legislature in pursuance of a constitutional mandate, abolished the Motion Picture Censorship Commission, the function of censoring motion picture films still exists in our government and has been transferred to the department of education. I renew my recommendation that the State cease its censorship over motion picture films.

"To my mind, there seems to be no more reason for it than for censorship of books, of the press, or of the spoken drama. The method of correcting evils is by recourse to the penal statutes after the offense.

"No useful purpose is served by the continuance of this function and it constitutes an unnecessary drain upon the revenues of the State, even though they may be compensated by taxation upon the business itself. If there is any reason for such a tax it might well be continued for the benefit of public revenue, but to dissipate it in a senseless censorship seems to be entirely without either rhyme or reason."

It now looks as though motion picture censorship would become a thing of the past in New York State within the next six months. Never have the chances appeared brighter for abolishing censorship. At the very outset of the session of the Legislature, Governor Smith comes out in his message and declares against what he terms a senseless censorship. While both houses of the Legislature are again Republican, and the original censorship bill in 1921 was a Republican measure, the fact remains that that party no longer has any interest from a political standpoint in the future of the censorship commission.

This means that every Democrat in the Legislature will support Governor Smith and vote for any bill introduced doing away with motion picture censorship. During the past two or three years there has been a breaking away on the part of Republicans from the whip hand and these will surely be with the Democrats as well as will be many others from the Republican ranks who feel that Governor Smith is right.

Even the New York State education department apparently views censorship as being a matter of but a few months more, for a position is being held open until July 1, next, for James Wingate, who was named by the Board of Regents from the department and who on January 1 became the single head of the censorship commission.

R. B. Wilby Takes Lease on Property in Selma, Ala.

A deal involving the property at the corner of Broad and Selma streets, Selma, Ala., was consummated last Wednesday when R. B. Wilby, owner of the Academy of Music, secured a long term lease option to buy the property recently acquired by Henry Plant. This move by Mr. Wilby undoubtedly means that a new theatre will rise on the spot in the not distant future, but leases on the property by present tenants will preclude any immediate steps in that direction. In his announcement of the deal Mr. Wilby stated that the theatre would necessarily be larger and finer than his present one and would probably cost $150,000 or more. Though present business in Selma did not warrant expansion Mr. Wilby believes that the future growth of the town will justify his acquisition of the property which can accommodate an 1800-seat house with a large stage, it is said.

Anti-Blues Stir Opposition to Ohio Reformers

Another act has recently been added to the Sunday closing drama which has held the center of the stage in Ohio for the past few years. As a result of the recent campaigns which have been carried on in Lorain County, and other sections of the State, there are now threats of intervention from the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws, according to reports which seem to be authentic.

Olin J. Ross, of Columbus, national committeeman of the association, has given out the statement that workers will be sent throughout Ohio to oppose the National Reform Association, and another organization known as the Lord's Day Alliance.

Ross is credited as saying that his organization foresees an attempt on the part of the opposing forces to make the Sunday closing laws more drastic, at the coming session of the Ohio legislature, and declares that if this is done, the attempt will be opposed as "an abridgement of individual and constitutional rights."

C. L. Yearsley Resigns From British National Pictures

C. L. Yearsley has resigned from British National Pictures, his resignation to be effective April 1. The company's New York office, meanwhile, is being moved to the offices of the International Variety and Theatrical Agency, located at 218 East 41st Street and operated by Max Schlesinger of the Schlesinger interests which control British National Pictures.

"Alonzo the Armless" Soon to Get Under way

Tod Browning will start direction soon on "Alonzo the Armless," an original by Browning which will star Lon Chaney.

Stress Farce in Colleen Moore's Picture Plans

Colleen Moore

IN Colleen Moore's production plans for the remainder of the 1926-27 season and for the season to follow, the program will consist chiefly of comedy. The plans have been decided upon by John McCormick, producer of the Moore vehicles for First National. The new year's production will start off with "Naughty But Nice," an adaptation of the stage comedy, "Miss George Washington." In this production will be injected new blood both in direction and support, it is promised. The producer is searching the field and an announcement may be anticipated as to a new director and a leading man. The picture to follow will be, "Oh, What a Life!" These two will complete the star's 1926-27 series and a lavish production will start the 1927-28 group.

Decries Exorbitant "Amusement Rates"

George Carpenter, Salt Lake Exhibitor, Endorsing News' Campaign, Tells of His Experiences with Newspapers

SOME first-hand observations and experiences on the need for the commercial rate on picture theatre adverstising in newspapers are given this week by George E. Carpenter, of the Paramount-Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mr. Carpenter has been battling for the lower rate for five years, and with no success. However, he points out the injustice of the situation in comparison with other industries, and makes some caustic remarks on the discrimination against picture theatres, so far as rates and handling of material are concerned.

Mr. Carpenter's experience in Salt Lake City shows the imperative need for a national campaign on the subject. This is now being conducted by Publix Theatres, "The Fourth Estate" and "Motion Picture News." Says Mr. Carpenter: " 'Motion Picture News' is starting an editorial campaign for reduction of the amusement rate in newspapers, so that picture theatres will receive the commercial rate, on the same basis as other lines of business.

Praises News Stand

"Bully for the 'Motion Picture News'! More power to all concerned.

"We have had a nice little campaign of our own covering a period of years. Committees have been appointed to wait on the newspapers, exhibitors playing a lone hand and theatre managers en masse have called upon the powers that be, have been courteously received, listened to and politely bowed out. In the past five years the rate has been raised three times and there are now rumors of an additional raise on amusement advertising space on the first of the coming year.

"Here is the situation as far as Salt Lake is concerned (we won't say anything regarding Denver where things are even worse):

"There are three daily newspapers with varying circulation, but the daily advertising rate is the same for all three. Sundays the 'Tribune' charges thirty cents an inch more.

Sports Do Not Advertise

"Each paper daily devotes two or more pages to sports, all free publicity whether it be for a champion golf player or a meal-ticket pug—no paid display advertising!

"Mining gets a page. Tom can dig a prospect hole in the side of a mountain, come to town and get a column on how promising his development looks. . . . Did you ever hear of a mining concern advertising?

"Finance, stocks and bonds, receive columns of free stuff.

"And so one might go right down the line.

"Theatres have an advertising rate all their own, topping all other industries and classifications, save those of candidates for election who generally are mulcted all the traffic will bear. Theatres have cut down their advertising space and played the bill boards heavily. The newspapers have sat back and complacently waited for some theatres to come back into the fold and the rest to fall over each other with bigger space than ever.

"We have asked for a commercial rate time and time again with its accompanying contract covering so many inches to be used within a specified time, but the newspaper has sat pat—nothing doing!

The Newspapers' Viewpoint

"The viewpoint of the newspaper is that the theatres receive in exchange for their high rate, one preliminary notice, an alleged criticism the day after opening (as often as not covered by the police court reporter or the girl who answers the telephone for the society editor) and a daily line in the Amusement box.

"Then by way of a come-on, some odds and ends of press dope are printed on the Amusement page Sunday.

"Salt Lake exhibitors time and again have asked for a commercial rate together with the privilege of paying pro rata for such space as may be consumed by readers. They are still asking.

"We are told that we get lots of free space. So does the department store for that matter for about half as much per column inch they pay for their display advertising. When a buyer goes east, a new stunt pulled in window display or a woman gets ruined in a bargain rush—then follows publicity as sure as day and night.

Theatre Name Deleted

"But let anything of interest transpire around a theatre and the chances are that the item may be printed, with the deletion of the name of the house and the substitution of 'a down-town theatre.'

"Go ahead 'Motion Picture News' with your arguments that there are more people interested in motion pictures than in sports, finance, society, mining and all the rest of the free publicity columns put together. Tell the newspapers that Motion Pictures are NEWS and like Castoria the baby's crying for it.

"We have done it, and more, here in Salt Lake for several years past. More power to you.

"Did you ever see a bunch of exhibitors stay together, and stay put? First get the exhibitors to stand pat on your proposition and then something might be accomplished.

"The newspapers have something to sell which we all want. We pay a lot more for some pictures than they are worth, but in both cases it is a proposition of take it or leave it."

George D. Gould Dies in Los Angeles

GEORGE D. GOULD, former managing editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, died at the Sylvan Lodge Hospital, Los Angeles, on January 3. He was thirty-three years old and had been under the care of a physician for a year.

Mr. Gould was found unconscious in the bathroom at his home, 5616 Lexington Avenue, Los Angeles, by his wife, who immediately summoned aid. He was rushed to the hospital, where he revived, but on the following day suffered a relapse and died.

He is survived by his mother and his wife, Mrs. Peggy Gertrude Gould. Funeral services were held on January 4, at the Bagley Funeral Parlors, Hollywood.

Estimates $197,000,000 Will Be Spent on West Coast Production in 1927

ACCORDING to a survey made by the Guarantee Building and Loan Association of California 1927 will witness the greatest production program in the industry's history with $197,000,000 to be spent in California studios during the year. This represents a gain of $25,000,000 over the year just closed.

While exact figures are unobtainable it is estimated that the weekly pay roll of the studios during 1927 will average $1,750,000. Schedules of the larger producers call for expenditure of $30,000,000 more in 1927, than this year, but $5,000,000 of the amount was deducted to cover decrease over 1926 figures because of consolidations, closing of studios and other changes.

According to the survey, $156,000,000 was expended on production in 1923, $168,000,000 during 1924 and $170,000,000 in 1925.

N. Y. Better Films Conference

Sessions at Waldorf-Astoria January 27-29; Will Discuss All Phases

"THE Motion Picture, Its Broadening Influence and Uses" will be the keynote of the Third Annual Better Films Conference which will be held in New York City, in the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, January 27, 28, 29, 1927, under the auspices of the Better Films National Council of the National Board of Review.

Thursday afternoon, the Social Influences of the Motion Picture, The Psychological Influence of the Motion Picture on the Community, and the Influence of the Motion Picture on the Home and on the Family will be treated. Thursday evening, Terry Ramsaye, author of "A Million and One Nights," will give a History of the Motion Picture, telling of the development of Motion Pictures from the inception of the idea to the present day.

The Motion Picture as an Entertainment Medium, the topic for the session Friday morning, January 28th, will be discussed by speakers prominently identified with the Motion Picture Industry. The topic for the Friday afternoon session will be "The Motion Picture in Cultural, Educational and Religious Fields"; Clubwomen and the Motion Picture; Teachers and the Motion Picture, Ministers, Artists, Schools, Museums, Libraries and the Motion Picture, will be presented. Saturday morning, January 29th, "The Motion Picture for Specialized Uses" will be the topic, and this feature will be illustrated by Motion Pictures, which may be adapted to the programs of various national organizations.

Jersey Sunday War Continues

Attempt Shows at Dunellen, Woodbridge and Red Bank; Fabian Cancels Paterson

SUNDAY shows were attempted in three New Jersey cities, the Fabian interests canceled proposed shows in Paterson, and Orange theatre licenses issued contained a clause threatening revocation of the license if theatres opened on Sunday; these are the outstanding developments in the war now raging in a number of points throughout the state.

When the Carlton at Red Bank was opened Sunday, after about 200 tickets were sold, 12 policemen were discovered in the lobby. Sale then was stopped and announcement made that admission was free. A capacity house witnessed the show. At Dunellen, George W. Hosford, manager, his wife, ticket seller and his operator were arrested for attempting to operate. One hundred patrons had their money refunded when the show was stopped. Nathan Marcus, Woodbridge theatre owner, was summoned to appear in court yesterday for operating his house.

Paterson theatres will not be opened on Sunday pending expected revision of the state "blue" law. After a conference with the mayor and police commissioner, George R. Christie and Jacob Fabian, of the local Stanley-Fabian interests, announced the proposed shows had been canceled.

Three licenses for the new year have been issued at Orange, each containing a clause that it will be revoked if Sunday theatre operation is attempted.

Vidor Ready to Start His Own Screen Story

AN original story, written by King Vidor, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, and described as typical of the average American of the ordinary works of life such as live in any large American city at the present time, is soon to go into production under the guidance of its creator.

James Murray

Eleanor Boardman will be seen as the working girl.

The role of the hero is unfilled as yet.

James Murray, a young extra from New York, and a discovery of Vidor, will have a featured part, it is said. Murray, who has just been placed under contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been striving for recognition as a Hollywood extra for more than three years. He is a little over twenty years of age and a graduate of Evander Childs High School in New York.

Mo. State Court to Judge Springfield Sunday Fight

The Missouri Supreme Court will be the next step in the Springfield Sunday closing battle as the result of the dismissal by Judge Warren A. White of the case against W. W. Smith and D. D. Nelson and O. K. Southwick, two of Smith's employees. City Attorney Dan M. Nee, who is carrying the fight against the theatre men, has announced that he would carry the fight to the State Supreme Court. It is said that Mr. Smith will carry the case to the Federal Court in an effort to show that the blue law is a violation of the constitution of Missouri as well as that of the United States. The Sunday closing ordinance was clamped on in Springfield in 1921, though the city had previously refused to pass such a law.

Ontario Board of Censors Condemns Ufa's "Faust"

It is understood that the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, Toronto, has condemned the Ufa production "Faust" on the ground that it was a German feature, a ban against all German pictures being maintained by the Province of Ontario.

Fred Niblo

Fred Niblo to Make Pictures for United Artists

Fred Niblo, director, signed a long term contract this week with Joseph M. Schenck to make pictures for release through United Artists. The agreement with Mr. Schenck stipulates that the director shall return to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to produce one feature each year for a period of three years. His United Artists pictures will be called "Fred Niblo Productions, Presented by Joseph M. Schenck."

In making the announcement by wire from Los Angeles Mr. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, declared that the best of screen material is now being sought for Mr. Niblo's first United Artists feature.

The director is now handling Norma Talmadge's "Camille" at the United Artists studio in Hollywood.

Eight Companies Procure N. Y. S. Charters

The closing week of the year brought the incorporation of the following motion picture companies in New York State: Buffalo-Granada Theatre Corporation, Gloversville, capitalization not specified, Louis Broide, Louis Mehl, Frances Hoffman, New York City; Levinson & Eldridge Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., capitalization not stated, Jay B. VanVeen, Michael J. Levinson, Harold F. Eldridge, New York City; Ameranglo Film Dealers, Inc., $1,000, Evelyn Stern, Ruth Rosenblum, Max Arnowitz, New York City; Franchise Pictures Corporation, capitalization not specified, Harry Lewis, Grant Hoerner, Walter Herzbrun, New York City.

The Britton Voiceaphone Film Corporation, $20,000, Robert Hanover, Philadelphia, Pa.; Leon Britten, Abner J. Rubien, New York City; Hudson Movies Corporation, $10,000, Simon Bier, Brooklyn; Emanuel Stempel, Charles Rabinowitz, New York City; Playedwell Picture Corp., $50,000, Earle E. Lockwood, Anna Schwartz, Fortunate Marine, New York City; International A.C.A. Corporation, capitalization not specified, Edward and Etta Klein, Louis J. Rosett, New York City.

Publix and U. A. Now in Minneapolis

Famous Leases $2,000,000 House Under Construction; F. & R. No Longer Control First-Run Situation; "U" in Portland

WITH the announcement that Publix has secured a 25-year lease on a theatre now under construction and the further declaration that United Artists will build on a site recently acquired, it becomes evident that Northwest Theatres (Finkelstein & Ruben) no longer control the first run in Minneapolis. The United Artists' house will be located on Ninth and La Salle streets, just opposite the Publix Theatre.

The Publix house is to cost $2,000,000 and it is said the company will pay a total of $4,000,000 for the 25 years with an option for renewal for a similar period. The theatre will have a 4,200 seating capacity, and construction is scheduled to start this month.

Theatre building activity, as presaged by announcement of the two theatres, comes as a surprise in view of conditions here. Plans for the new houses were announced following a period of depression which has seriously affected theatre attendance. The extent of the decrease is reflected in proposals of Northwest Theatres, which control the local situation, to close the New Garrick and Astor.

Minneapolis long has been one of the few key cities immune from invasion in the first-run field. For years, Northwest (Finkelstein & Ruben) has operated without competition, buying holdings of outside firms which sought to enter the field. Several years ago, Asher Bros. entered the city, starting erection of the State, which subsequently was purchased by Finkelstein & Ruben and became the key theatre of the chain. Later a short-lived attempt was made by Joseph Friedman to operate the Auditorium as competition. Some time later, Clinton-Myers, Duluth firm allied with Publix, took over the house, which was remodeled and renamed the Lyceum. After several months the theatre was closed, presumably by arrangement with F. & R.

Control of the Northwest is practically complete, very few key cities being without houses operated by the company. Duluth is practically the only major city, with the exception of Sioux Falls, where the firm has competition, the Lyceum there being operated by Clinton-Myers in association with Publix, and the Orpheum by Blackmore Bros.

Loew's Nets $1,000,000 for Christmas Week

LOEW'S INCORPORATED, according to "The Wall Street Journal," will realize approximately $1,000,000 net income for the week ending New Year's Eve or Christmas Week. All of the Loew houses in New York did excellent business, it is declared. The Capitol receipts totaled $25,000 in addition to the $12,000 rental fee for the film. The State took in around $12,000, the Metropolitan about $20,000, and the Astor somewhere between $10,000 and $12,000 above the rental fee.

During the last few years several distributor-exhibitor firms have threatened to build in Minneapolis, claiming they could not get equitable treatment from F. & R. Universal went so far as to announce plans which later were abandoned, while North American Theatres, P.D.C. ally, also intended building.

Universal is reported to be preparing to strengthen its position in Portland, Ore., in preparation for the rush of theatre building activity impending in the Pacific Northwest. With several companies entering the territory in earnest, the company is planning to entrench before the building boom, now being felt at Seattle, extends to this city. This will be done, it is stated, through erection of a house to replace the Columbia, present Universal first-run outlet here.

At the present time Universal has 14 houses in Portland and vicinity and two at Eugene, Ore., as a result of its affiliation with the Multnomah interests. A new subsequent run house, the Bagdad, has just been completed, with its opening scheduled for January 1.

Carl Laemmle is scheduled to attend the opening of the Bagdad and will remain in the city to make a survey of Universal holdings. Building of the proposed first-run house will depend on his analysis of the local situation.

The company recently closed a deal for 11 theatres at Seattle.

Construction work on the Alabama Theatre, the new Publix house in Birmingham, is expected to start early in February. It will be located next to the Loveman, Joseph & Loeb department store on Third Avenue, North, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, and directly across from the Lyric.

The house will seat about 2,500 people and will cost between $1,125,000 and $1,500,000. Plans are now being completed by Craver and Mayger, Chicago architects, and work of actual construction will get under way as soon as they are ready.

It is expected that the new house will open on New Year's Day, 1928, thus allowing one year for building and equipping.

Famous Answers Commission's Brief

Charges Violation of Supreme Court Decision that Commission Has No Power to Force Competitors to General Level

VIOLATIONS of decisions of the United States Supreme Court holding that the Federal Trade Commission has no power to force all competitors to a general level is charged against the commission in a brief filed January 3 by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in answer to a brief filed by counsel for the commission.

The whole "philosophy" of the commission's brief, it is declared, is that methods of carrying on business which give an advantage over weak competitors who, because of their weakness, cannot avail themselves of the same methods, are necessarily unfair. "The commission is asked to slow the entire motion picture industry to a competitive pace which the poorest competitor can maintain," the respondents contend. "Producer ownership of theatres and block booking are asserted to be illegal principally because they have contributed to the success of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and of other companies and to the failure of wholly unnamed competitors."

Producers without theatres and distributors who do not make enough pictures to sell them in blocks are at a disadvantage, it is admitted, but because Famous Players enjoys these and other advantages, they cannot be held to be unfair.

The main issue remaining in the case is the legality of block booking, the respondents hold, and but passing attention is paid to other phases, it again being denied that Famous Players is a monopoly, or that ownership of theatres is illegal. The very fact, it is held, that Famous Players has as many competitors today in all the lines in which it engages as it ever had refutes such charges.

Block booking, it is again reiterated, is merely wholesale selling and the exhibitor who does not take an entire line naturally pays a retail price for a single purchase. The charge of the commission's counsel that first class first run houses are used to make certain pictures indispensable to other exhibitors and that others less popular are tied to such "indispensable" pictures in order to force the whole line upon exhibitors, is denied. Attention is called to the fact that of 322 contracts for Paramount pictures introduced into the case, only 31 were for all of the pictures in any block, while 98 were for but a single picture each. It is also denied that by block booking, all of the available exhibition time of competitors is used by the respondent.

The fact that block booking is and always has been the universal custom of the business argues strongly in favor of its fairness, the brief contends, and the commission has introduced no evidence to support the proposition that it is illegal. Similar contracts in other industries, which have been upheld by the courts, are cited in support of the contention that it is a legitimate mode of sale.

Dismissal of the case again is urged.

M. H. Hoffman

Trademark is No Criterion Says M. H. Hoffman

In speaking of competition and its beneficial results to the motion picture industry, M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, points out the fact that, unlike the early days of the business, a trade-mark or the past performance of a company or star is no criterion of the worth of product sold from day to day.

It is Mr. Hoffman's contention that because art and ingenuity are part of the business, no one company can ever control the entire industry and in this connection states that his company's films, 26 Gems to be released during the current year, will be worthy of showing in every theatre throughout the country.

Schwerin New U. A. Sales Representative

A new appointment in the United Artists ranks is that of Charles F. Schwerin, who will henceforth operate from the United Artists home office as special sales representative.

Ticket Manufacturers' Assoc. Enjoined

In a consent signed in the District of Columbia Supreme Court, the Association of American Amusement Ticket Manufacturers and its thirteen members were permanently enjoined from operating in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law and from exchanging information concerning prices. The action of the court followed an effort made by the association to determine its powers under the Sherman law.

The Government charged that the association and its members had restrained trade by fixing prices and by allotting buyers. The statement was made that the ticket firms manufacture 85 per cent of all amusement tickets used in the United States. The members of the association have plants in New York, New Jersey, Nebraska, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Massachusetts and California.

In and Out of Town

W. F. CLARKE, of Cranfield and Clarke, was in town for the holidays and returned to Montreal in a day or so, going on to Toronto to complete his producing plans.

MAX EHRENREICH, United Artists' chief South American representative, arrived in New York Wednesday, December 29, on the "S. S. Voltaire." He will confer with Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and treasurer of United Artists in complete charge of foreign sales, regarding the seven new pictures which United Artists is now selling.

ED SMITH, general sales manager of Tiffany Productions, left last Friday for the Middle West, where he will open several new Tiffany exchanges which have heretofore been handled by Tiffany franchise holders. He will open an exchange in Kansas City and then proceed to St. Louis for the opening of another Tiffany exchange.

CRESSON E. SMITH, United Artists general sales manager, Mid West division, left New York Sunday, January 2, for a fortnight's trip to the Middle West, where he will visit Detroit, Cleveland, Indianapolis and other central cities. He will return to New York about January 15.

I. E. CHADWICK, president of Chadwick Pictures, and Jesse J. Goldberg, supervising director-general of Chadwick Pictures, have both finished their trips having to do with production. The former has arrived in New York for a short stay at the company's home office. The latter has returned to Los Angeles, where he will personally supervise the production of several features to be started at once

OTTO B. MANTELL, general manager of United Artists' Cristobal office, arrived in New York on Monday, January 3, from the Panama Canal Zone for conferences with Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president and treasurer of United Artists, in charge of foreign distribution. Mr. Mantell remains in New York for about a week.

HARRY REICHENBACH, publicist, left New York Tuesday, January 4, for a ten-day trip to Hollywood to consult with producers, stars and directors whom he represents in the East. The journey westward will be Reichenbach's first in more than six years.

BEN BLUMENTHAL, president of Export and Import, left New York this week on a trip to Hollywood, accompanied by his wife and daughter. This is Mr. Blumenthal's first visit to the production center.

Movie Ban Hurts Trade, Say Merchants of Iowa Town

A petition has been presented to the city council of Eagle Grove, Ia., asking that the ordinance passed two years ago and closing theatres on Sunday be repealed. One hundred citizens, including a majority of business men, have signed the petition, as they claim that trade is being injured. People go to the neighboring towns to see pictures and do their shopping while there.

Church groups are organizing to fight any attempt to change the law. E. E. Morriss, the manager of the Princess Theatre, is maintaining a neutral standard and says he is willing to abide by the demands of the majority.

Edwin Silverman

Edwin Silverman of Warners Receives Promotion

Edwin Silverman has been made a sales manager of the Warner Brothers organization, with headquarters in the New York office, according to an announcement from Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution. Mr. Silverman, in his new capacity, will spend the greater part of his time in the field, establishing contact with exhibitors and sales staff. The appointment of Mr. Silverman, who was division manager of the Chicago and Milwaukee branches of Warner Brothers, is a reward for meritorious service rendered his organization, it is said.

Joseph S. Hummel has been made manager of the home office contract department, while Earle Silverman will assume the management of the Chicago branch, the appointment to be effective immediately.

Joseph Klein Joins Columbia Pictures

COLUMBIA Pictures Corporation has appointed Joseph Klein to the post of field representative to establish contact between the executive offices and distributors of its product and to enable showmen to receive information from other exhibitors of the reception of Columbia pictures in different territories that they may apply this information to their own mutual advantage.

Joseph Klein

Mr. Klein has been in the motion picture industry for fourteen years as a sales executive, having served with Warner Brothers, World Film Corporation, Metro, First National and F.B.O. For the past two years he has devoted himself to the independent end of the business.

German Import Quota to Remain 1:1

Berlin Correspondent Reports Authorities Doubtful of Ability to Increase Production for 2:1 or 3:2 Kontingent

THE German correspondent of the NEWS, Heinrich Fraenkel, reports that the German authorities have, regarding the import situation, taken exactly the decision which has been foreshadowed by him in his recent contributions to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and will not alter the Kontingent.

It will be remembered that parts of the German trade had been clamoring for further restrictions of imports by tightening the 1:1 quota to 2:1. This would have meant that, in order to import a foreign feature, a renter would have had to handle the double amount of German footage, instead of the same amount, as provided by last year's regulations.

During the last few days, before the decision came, it seemed not quite unlikely that a 3:2 compromise would be reached. After all, however, the authorities were evidently convinced of the fact that the old 1:1 regulation suits best the demands and possibilities of the German market. For it seemed to be indeed rather doubtful if, under present circumstances, German production would find sufficient funds to provide for two-thirds of the market's demands, instead of one-half only.

Export Figures

Exports from Germany of sensitized but unexposed motion picture films during the first nine months of 1926 totaled 39,699,000 meters, valued at 8,981,000 rentenmarks, as compared with 56,747,300 meters, valued at 1,125,300 rentenmarks exported in the entire year 1925, according to advices from Berlin to the Motion Picture Section, Department of Commerce.

German exports of negative films in the first three-quarters of this year amounted to 316,000 meters, valued at 799,000 rentenmarks, as compared with exports of 93,000 meters valued at 13,000 marks in the entire year 1925. Exports of positive films totaled 10.449,900 meters, valued at 2.848,000 rentenmarks in the period under survey as compared with 4,215,200 meters valued at 1,071,000 marks in 1925.

Imports into Germany of sensitized, unexposed motion picture films in the January-September period of the current year totaled 2,012,400 meters, valued at 303,000 marks, as against 821,500 meters, valued at 157,000 marks in. Receipts of negative films totaled 413,900 meters, valued at 138,000 marks as compared with 134.200 meters, worth 41.000 marks in 1924. Imports of positive films amounted to 3,043.400 meters, valued at 1,049,000 marks, as compared with 1.132,700 meters, valued at 466,000 marks in 1925.

During the first nine months of 1926, 66,300 meters were imported for re-export and 61,300 meters were imported as returned general merchandise.

In 1925, 307,600 meters were imported from the United States and 137,800 meters from Great Britain. For the first nine months of 1925, 970,900 meters were imported from the United States, 887,200 meters from France and 257,900 meters from Great Britain.

Gov. Baker Reverts to His Admission Tax Plan

FOLLOWING the wave of protest from exhibitors, members of the Associated Industries of Missouri, State senators and other sources, Governor Baker of Missouri, in an announcement Tuesday, indicated that he would abolish his plan for a $10 tax on each motion picture film entering Missouri and, instead, revert back to his original idea of levying an admission tax of 10 per cent on all theatres. The revenue derived from the tax would be used to bolster up the State educational fund.

Thus the issue is put squarely up to the exhibitor again. The Governor has been looking with much favor towards a State tax on tobacco, also, but such strong opposition is indicated; in that direction that it is probable that the motion picture houses and other theatres may be the last resort.

"It simply is a case of defend ourselves or suffer the consequences," President R. R. Biechele, of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, said Tuesday. "To an unprepared organization or individual always comes the unexpected attack. The M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri has strength aplenty to oppose any objectionable measures. We must stand shoulder to shoulder and fight for our rights."

An analysis of the raw film figures reveals that the total for this year will more than double the 1925 import total, which in turn was almost two and one-half times the total for the previous year, when it amounted to 337,700 meters. Great Britain was the chief supplier of this commodity during the 1926 months in question.

Raw Film Totals

On the raw film export side, since the available figures for the first nine months of 1926 show monthly average of 4,377,660 meters, it can be estimated that German exports probably will decline by more than 4,000,000 takings of the United States, its biggest market by far. Russia, the next important purchaser, will, it is believed, increase its imports from Germany, as will also Japan, Austria and France. China probably will more than double its takings. According to the estimate losses will be sustained in the direction of Italy, Netherlands, East Poland, Spain, Hungary and the Argentine. Czechoslovakia will increase its imports from Germany, it is thought.

By increasing its imports of negative film, from 134,200 meters in 1925 to an estimated total of about 377,000 meters (based on the monthly average of figures available for the first nine months of this year, minus returned German negatives) Germany probably will increase such imports by some 242,800 meters during 1926. By the same token it will increase its exports of negative film nearly five-fold by reaching figures of approximately 421,000 meters, as compared with 93,000 meters during 1926. France and the United States in this order have been the leading customers in 1926.

The situation as regards imports and exports of positives shows encouraging gains for Germany. Imports during 1926, less re-exports and returned German positives, should be more than two and one-half times the 1926 total and probably will approximate a figure of about 3,000,000 meters, with France closely following on the heels of the United States for first honors as the principal source, and Great Britain coming third. A large gain is reflected in German exports of positives during 1926 over the previous year, on the monthly average of the 1926 figures already in. It is thought likely that Germany should total more than 13,000,000 meters in positive exports during this year, and should thus increase its shipments abroad by 9,000,000 meters over the 1925 figure. Available figures show a considerable gain in shipments from Germany to its nearby markets (Germany's principal markets for motion pictures). L. Austria, its best customer, should, according to these figures, take four and one-half times as many positives during 1926 as it took during 1925, and should show a total of well over 3,000,000 meters. Latvia, undoubtedly for the Baltic markets and the adjacent Russian border, was the next best customer of these supplies, and, too, showed a very large increase over its 1925 figures. Other countries to register large advances are Czechoslovakia, Russia, East Poland, Switzerland and France. Spain appears in the list of substantial buyers for the year, whereas no record of any shipments to that country is recorded in 1925.

Bandit Robs Seattle Theatre Man of $1,200

As he was leaving Hamrick's Lakeside in Seattle, Wash., with Saturday's and Sunday's receipts, William Storey, auditor for the Hamrick Seattle chain, was robbed of $1,200 last week by an armed and masked bandit, who was seen to escape in a waiting automobile driven by a young woman. This is the second time within recent months that Mr. Hamrick has lost receipts of one of his houses to thieves, the safe of the Egyptian having been blown a short time ago by robbers who escaped with approximately $1,500. Insurance fully covers both losses.

Universal Controls Norfolk, Nebraska's Theatres

Universal will continue in control of Norfolk, Neb.'s theatres as a result of purchase of the New Koenigstein, now under construction by Jack Koenigstein. The company now operates the Auditorium, Lyric and Grand with the new house expected to open in March.

Warners Schedule New Product

With Half Year's Pictures Finished, Company Outlines Plans for Next

ACCORDING to Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros., the new year finds the company in the midst of its greatest production boom. Mr. Warner, in commenting on the progress made during the year passed, stated that the present line-up of product is the best in the history of the organization. He cited the pictures now playing extended engagements in the big cities throughout the country, "Don Juan" and "The Better 'Ole," and announced that the latest starring vehicle for John Barrymore, "When a Man Loves," would soon be given a Broadway showing at legitimate theatre prices.

The Warner executive also stated that plans are rapidly maturing for the filming of several big photoplays of the caliber of the three now showing. "Noah's Ark," directed by Michael Curtiz from a scenario by Bess Meredyth, is one; "Black Ivory," a story of New Orleans in the Creole days, is another. Due to the fact that the company was able to get away to an early production start last year, more time and concentration was allowed this year's product, says the Warner president, and, with the regular schedule held down to twenty-six pictures for the year, it is easy to see that proper care can be taken of all product released by the company.

Of the twenty-six Winners scheduled for release thirteen have been completed and stories, stars, directors, etc., have been chosen for practically all the remaining product. Those pictures now ready for production include "Matinee Ladies," with an all-star cast, directed by Paul L. Stein; "A Million Bid," with Dolores Costello, directed by Alan Crosland; "What Every Girl Should Know," with Patsy Ruth Miller, directed by Charles F. Reisner; "Tracked by the Police," with Rin-Tin-Tin; "The Brute," with Monte Blue, directed by Herman Raymaker; "Simple Sis," with Louise Fazenda, directed by Herman Raymaker; "Irish Hearts," with Dolores Costello, directed by Lloyd Bacon; "What Happened to Father," with Patsy Ruth Miller, directed by Howard Bretherton; "The Black Diamond Express," with Monte Blue, directed by Harry C. Hoyt; "The Climbers," with Irene Rich, directed by Paul L. Stein; "Dearie," with Louise Fazenda, directed by Charles F. Reisner; "The Heart of Maryland," with Dolores Costello, directed by Roy del Ruth.

Famous Starts Twelve Pictures

Nine Now in Production, with Three Scheduled for Filming Before Feb.

PRODUCTION on nine feature length pictures was started at the Famous Players West Coast studio on January 3 and three more are slated for filming before the end of the month. This constitutes the heaviest production schedule ever undertaken by the company in a single thirty-day period, state the Famous officials.

The pictures started January 3 are "Looie the Fourteenth," with Wallace Beery as the star and James Cruze as the director; "Fashions for Women," Esther Ralston's first starring vehicle and the first directorial effort of Dorothy Arzner; "Ritzy," Betty Bronson's first starring picture, to be directed by Richard Rosson; "Afraid to Love," with Florence Vidor as the star and E. H. Griffith the director; "Evening Clothes," Adolphe Menjou's next starring picture, with Luther Reed directing; "Special Delivery," Eddie Cantor's second starring comedy, William Goodrich directing; "Confession," Pola Negri's next vehicle, which Lothar Mendes is directing; a picture starring Raymond Griffith, with Erle C. Kenton directing, and "Too Many Crooks," the picture which will bring Mildred Davis back to the screen. Fred Newmeyer is directing.

Emil Jannings is to begin his first American production, "The Man Who Forgot God," next week under the direction of Mauritz Stiller, and Warner Baxter and Lois Wilson will begin work on "The Deer Drive," by Zane Grey. On January 17, Clara Bow will start her second starring vehicle, "Rough House Rosie," which Frank Strayer will direct.

With "Wings" continuing in production at San Antonio, Tex., and "The Rough Riders" and "Children of Divorce" carrying over into the new year at the Hollywood studio, the West Coast units of Paramount will have a total of fifteen productions in progress simultaneously.

"The Kiss in a Taxi," Bebe Daniels' current picture, and "The Mysterious Rider," a Zane Grey picture, with Jack Holt and Betty Jewel in the leading roles, will be finished shortly.

Five Chadwick Units Active

"Ladybird" in Work; "Life of Actress" "Shamrock and Rose" in Preparation

A NEW record is set for simultaneous production at the Chadwick studio in California, where five production units are now busily engaged in the making of features for the Chadwick 1926-27 program. Nine of these productions have either been completed or are in preliminary or working stages. James Young is now completing "Driven From Home," while Walter Lang has already launched production on "The Ladybird," the William Dudley Pelly story and the first of the Betty Compson productions for Chadwick. Malcolm McGregor, Ruth Stonehouse, Joseph Girard and Hank Mamm are some of the players in the cast.

Arthur Gregor, producer of "The Count of Luxembourg," a Chadwick picture of last season, is preparing the script of an original tale by himself which will serve as Miss Compson's second vehicle. Production will be started on this feature as soon as "The Ladybird" is completed.

Director Jack Nelson is casting "The Life of an Actress," which he will also direct. It is an adaptation by Harvey Gates of the play by Langdon McCormick. Jesse J. Goldburg, supervising director general of the Chadwick studio, is also in readiness to start production on "Shamrock and the Rose," an adaptation by Josephine Quirk of the play by Owen Davis, for which no director has been selected thus far.

Barnum Film Held Back for Additional Eight Months

Eight months more of preparation is planned for "The Greatest Show on Earth." Thus four years in all of research, planning and perfection of details will have been spent on the Paramount special when it goes into work next October instead of February as previously announced. Monta Bell, director, his staff, and Benjamin Glazer, scenarist, need an extra extension of time, it is claimed, to complete the great deal of preliminary work for the picture. Monte Katterjohn, author of the story, has already devoted more than three years to the preparation of the screen vehicle. It was advised by experts that seasonal weather conditions in various parts of the country where the sequences will be shot will have an important bearing, both photographically and as regards expenditures (incidentally it is claimed that more money has been proposed for this picture than for any other in Paramount history) and that therefore the months of October, November and December will be the best months for exteriors.

New De Mille Contract for Donald Crisp

The De Mille studio has signed Donald Crisp to a long term contract. This is one of the first steps in the preparation for the new season's program. Director Crisp has just finished Leatrice Joy's "Nobody's Widow," and his first picture under the new contract has not as yet been decided upon.

Title Changes in Two First National Productions

Milton Sills' next starring vehicle, formerly known under the working title of "The Runaway Enchantress," has been retitled "The Sea Tiger." Ray Rockett's next production for First National, known under several titles, has been finally titled "See You in Jail."

Einar Hanson Gets Long Term Famous Contract

Einar Hanson, at present playing in Frank Lloyd's Paramount production, "Children of Divorce," has been awarded a long term contract with that company.

Centennial Pictures Corp. Starts Production

Centennial Pictures Corporation, recently organized by John Raymond, Stewart B. Moss and George H. Wilcox, for the purpose of producing a series of two-reel historical films possessing entertaining as well as educational values, has started production on the first of the series entitled "The Boys in Blue," dealing with the early Indian period and from the pen of Arthur Hoerl.

Co-directing the series with Stewart B. Moss will be John Raymond. Grace Alyce Durkin, late from a current Broadway stage play, is under a long term contract with Centennial Pictures and will be featured in all of their stories. Jack McLean has been engaged as leading man for Miss Durkin. The supporting cast includes Rex Archer, F. C. Kupper, John Carlyle, George Williams, W. W. Jones, Phil Sanford, Billy Baker, "Chief," a canine actor, and "Silver Moon," an Indian chief who will enact his true-to-life role on the screen.

The production staff consists of C. W. Downs, cameraman, Carol Jean Brown in charge of historical research, while Joe Bannon and Larry Kane will assist the directors.

Sterling Releasing "Wolves of the Air" January 22

Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation plans its melodrama of airplane adventure, "Wolves of the Air," for national release on January 22. Francis Ford directed from the story by J. Francis O'Fearna. Johnnie Walker and Mildred Harris are the featured players. In principal roles are Lois Boyd, Gayne Whitman, Maurice Costello, Jay Junt and Edmund Cobb. "Tongues of Scandal," the first of the Roy Clements productions for Sterling Pictures, was released January 3. It features Mae Busch and William Desmond and Ray Hallor, Lloyd Carleton, James Gordon and Wulfred North are cast in leading roles.

Rowland V. Lee Given Long Term Paramount Contract

Rowland V. Lee this week affixed his signature to a long term contract as a Paramount director. He won the contract through his direction of "Barbed Wire," Pola Negri's most recent starring vehicle. Lee's first assignment under the new contract will be "Soundings," A. Hamilton Gibbs' best seller. The leading roles will be played by Lois Moran, James Hall and Douglas Gilmore. Production will begin February 1.

F. N. Buys "Help Yourself to Hay," Short Story

First National Pictures, through John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production, has announced the purchase of a short story by Dixie Wilson recently published in a national magazine.

This is the second Wilson narrative to be purchased by First National, since this company recently completed "An Affair of the Follies," based on the author's short story, "Here Y'Are Brother."

M-G-M Schedules New Product

Number of Special Attractions Are Started and Others Being Planned

WHAT Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer considers the most ambitious producing program planned since the inception of the organization was ushered in by the new year at the Culver City studios of the company. Practically a dozen pictures are at present in the cutting rooms and six productions are in filming.

In addition to these features the company is planning the early production of three super-features, "Old Heidelberg," "The Trail of '98" and King Vidor's latest effort, as yet untitled. These will be followed by regular offerings and together it is expected that every star, director and stock player will be kept busy for the next few months.

Some of the pictures soon to be filmed include "The Enemy," Channing Pollock's next play, in which Lillian Gish will be starred, and "The Wind," which also will have Miss Gish in the stellar role. Victor Seastrom will direct "The Enemy." Next to be produced is "Anna Karenina," Count Tolstoi's novel, which Dimitri Buchowetski will direct; he is now adapting the story. "Red, White and Blue" is another on the new schedule.

Some of the popular novels to be filmed are "The Callahans and the Murphys," a story by Kathleen Norris which George Hill will direct, and Kathleen Newlin Burt's story of the Swiss Alps, "The Branding Iron" with Reginald Barker directing. William Beaudine will handle the megaphone on "Frisco Sally Levy," an original by Al Cohn and Lew Lipton and Edward Sedgwick will direct "Red Pants," a story by Lipton.

"Captain Salvation" will be director George Robertson's next assignment; it is an adaptation of a story of the sea by Frederick William Wallace. Tod Browning has written another original for Lon Chaney which will be released as "Alonzo, the Armless"; Browning will direct.

Tiffany Releases Twenty Gems

Variety in Evidence in the Score of Productions Scheduled for Release

TWENTY Tiffany films, called "Tiffany Gems," will be distributed by Tiffany Productions during the 1926-27 season.

The first picture on the list of releases is "That Model From Paris," featuring Bert Lytell, Marceline Day and Eileen Percy and directed by Louis J. Gasnier. The picture was released August 15, 1926. Other films on the Tiffany schedule are "Lost at Sea," also a Gasnier production, suggested by "Mainspring," a story by Louis Joseph Vance. Heading the cast are Huntley Gordon, Eva Novak and Lowell Sherman; "Fools of Fashion," directed by James C. McKay with Marceline Day, Theodore Von Eltz and Mae Busch in the cast; "Josselyn's Wife," starring Pauline Frederick and directed by Richard Thorpe.

Continuing the list are "Sin Cargo," a Gasnier directed vehicle which stars Shirley Mason and Robert Frazer; "Redheads Preferred," directed by Allan Dale and featuring Marceline Day, Theodore Von Eltz and Raymond Hitchcock; "One Hour of Love," with Robert Frazer and Jacqueline Logan and directed by Robert Florey; "The First Night," with Bert Lytell, Dorothy Devore and Harry Meyers, directed by Richard Thorpe; "The Tiger," directed by Oscar Apfel and starring Pat O'Malley, Helen Ferguson and George Hackathorne.

"The Husband Hunters" with Mae Busch and Walter Heirs; "The Enchanted Island," suggested by a Gouverneur Morris story; "Lightning," a story by Zane Grey; "Wild Geese," Martha Ostenso's best seller; "The Broken Gate," written by Emerson Hough; A. P. Younger's "Squads Right;" "Tale of a Vanishing People," by Rex Beach. "Flaming Timber," "Song of Steel" and "Snowbound" conclude the list.

P.D.C. Producing in Germany

Vogel Tells of Company Formed in Berlin; Speaks on Theatre Conditions

WILLIAM M. VOGEL, general manager of Producers International Corporation (foreign division of Producers Distributing Corporation), now in New York after a two months' trip throughout Europe, issued a statement this week concerning P.D.C.'s producing company in Berlin, Germany. Mr. Vogel says, in part:

"In order to develop greater local interest in P.D.C. pictures in the markets of Central Europe, we have formed a producing company in Berlin to produce pictures for our organization. The company is registered as Deutsches P.D.C. Filmfabrikation G.m. bH., and will be under the direction of our Berlin Manager, H. E. J. Spearman.

"The building of the sets started in the National Studio December 20, and actual camera work will begin today, December 27. National Film will co-operate in the production of the first group.

"The new organization plans to make a series of productions and arrangements have been completed whereby the first group will be released in Germany through National Film Aktiengesellschaft, Berlin, and in other markets of the world where these pictures may prove suiable, through the various branches or affiliations of Producers International Corporation."

Northwest Film Board of Trade Elects Officers

Election of officers for the Seattle Northwest Film Board of Trade was held last week with the result that the leaders for 1927 are as follows: George Ballentine, Fox manager, president; Charles W. Harden, United Artists, vice-president, and Jack Bower, First National, secretary-treasurer.

Exchange members of the Arbitration Board for 1927 are Carl Stearn, Warner Brothers; Jack Bower, First National, and Arthur H. Huot, F. B. O. Jack Lannon of Greater Features and D. C. Millward of Western Film Corporation are alternates.

One of the first moves of the new Film Board was the institution of a campaign among exhibitors and projectionists of the Pacific Northwest States in an effort to aid the exchanges by reducing unnecessary mutilation of prints to a minimum.

Pearl Keating to Aid in Choosing Goldwyn Material

Stationing herself at the headquarters of the Goldwyn office in New York, Pearl Keating now fills the position of head of the Eastern editorial office of the Samuel Goldwyn affiliations. Mr. Goldwyn, prior to his departure for Los Angeles, announced the appointment of Mrs. Keating, who has just returned from Europe, where she spent a three months' vacation prior to assuming the responsibilities of her new post.

Pauline Forney, formerly chief of the Eastern office of Mr. Goldwyn, has been permanently transferred to the Goldwyn studio on the West Coast, where she is in charge of the Coast editorial office.

Neil Hamilton in Herbert Brenon's Next for Famous

Associate Paramount Producer William LeBaron this week chose Neil Hamilton to play the male lead in Herbert Brenon's next Paramount picture, as yet untitled, for which Elizabeth Meehan is preparing the script. Production is scheduled to begin early in January, at the studio in Long Island.

Karl Dane and G. K. Arthur in "Red, White and Blue"

Karl Dane and George K. Arthur, screen comedians, will be a comedy team in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's ''Red, White and Blue.'' Marceline Day will be featured in the leading feminine role.

Chadwick's Jan. Release, "Driven from Home"

SIMULTANEOUS first run showings in several key cities throughout the country will feature the release on January 18 of "Driven from Home," the fifth of the Chadwick First Division pictures of the 1926-27 program. In the film, which was directed by James Young, are Virginia Lee Corbin, Ray Hallor, Anna May Wong, Sojin, Sheldon Lewis, Virginia Pearson, Eric Mayne, Fred Warren and Melbourne McDowell.

Lya de Putti Signed by De Mille-Metropolitan

A CONTRACT with De Mille-Metropolitan Pictures has just been signed by Lya de Putti. She will be featured opposite Joseph Schildkraut in "The Heart Thief," to be made at the Metropolitan studio. It is understood that other companies were anxious to secure Miss de Putti's services and that her signature was affixed to the De Mille-Metropolitan contract only after spirited bidding.

No decision has been reached at the Metropolitan studio as to who will direct "The Heart Thief."

"Notorious Lady" Nearing Completed Stage

''The Notorious Lady,'' Sam E. Rork's production with Barbara Bedford, Lewis Stone and Ann Rork, will be completed, it is estimated, about the middle of this month for release through First National early in the spring. First scenes, interiors at the Burbank studio, and the river sequences, were taken early in December; then the Rork unit moved to Balboa, near Laguna, Cal. After the Yuletide holidays the company removed the location twenty-eight miles to Needles, Ariz. Hundreds of negroes, men and women, are visualizing on the Colorado River a scene supposed to represent a native African village. Gerald Grove, a member of the British army and diplomatic service for fourteen years, is assisting Jack Okey, art and technical director, in preparing sets and location. Larry Ceballes has been engaged to rehearse and direct the several hundred negroes for native dances. Frank Lawrence is film editor, and Dan Thomas, Los Angeles newspaperman, has been engaged by the producer to write the titles.

Title of Constance Talmadge Film Is "Venus of Venice"

''Venus of Venice,'' is the title of the new comedy drama starring Constance Talmadge now in the process of filming at the United Artists' studio for First National release under Marshall Neilan's direction. The story was first called ''Carlotta,'' then ''The Vamp of Venice,'' but this latest title is promised as the last, according to John W. Considine, Jr., general manager for the Joseph M. Schenck organization. Supporting the star in the leading role is Antonio Moreno, and others in the cast include Edward Martindel, Julanne Johnston, Michael Vaviton, Arthur Thalasso, Andre Laney and others.

Sign Wallace to Direct "The Poor Nut"

Jess Smith Productions, Inc., has engaged Richard Wallace to direct the first Smith production for First National, ''The Poor Nut,'' which will be placed in work on the West Coast January 15 with Jack Mulhall enacting the title role and Gertrude Olmstead and Charlie Murray as additional featured players. Smith has also signed Paul Schofield to do the continuity on the picture and Henry Hobart to take care of the production's directorial supervision.

Gotham Washington Branch Merges With Columbia

Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas and Gotham, and Jack Cohn, representing Columbia, last week consummated an important consolidation whereby the Gotham exchange in Washington, D.C., was merged with the Columbia exchange in the same city. This merger affects the local distribution of Gotham and Columbia and makes for greater economy and efficiency. The Gotham Washington office will be closed and the physical distribution, booking and selling of Gotham and Lumas product will be handled through the Columbia office. W. G. Dutton of the Columbia exchange will be in charge of both sales and distribution for the two companies in the District of Columbia and Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

T. McCoy Gets New M-G-M Screen Contract

Tim McCoy, Western star of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, was recently presented with a new contract. McCoy, who has been under contract with the organization for several months, is being starred in historical Western features based on important incidents of the American frontier. Several of these productions are planned for the coming season; all of them will be radical departures from the cowboy and Indian pictures, it is said. The star has just completed ''Winners of the Wilderness,'' based on the struggle between the French and English during the French and Indian War.

Wallace Lupino Again With Brother in "Howdy, Duke"

Wallace Lupino, brother of Lupino Lane, again appears in one of the principal supporting roles in ''Howdy, Duke,'' the latest Educational-Lupino Lane comedy, which is released during Laugh Month. Kathryn McGuire is cast again as Lupino Lane's leading lady.

Darryl F. Zanuck Appointed Assistant to Jack Warner

Darryl Francis Zanuck, author of many Warner Bros. scenarios, has been appointed assistant to Jack Warner, production manager of the company. He will continue to write scenarios and will also supervise productions of his own and other stories.

Paramount to Launch 4 Comedies in January

DURING January, Paramount will release in the order named "The Kid Brother," Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, which has the mountains of the South as its locale; "Blonde or Brunette," a French comedy starring Adolphe Menjou; "Paradise for Two," a new Richard Dix vehicle, and "The Potters," W. C. Fields' third starring attraction and a story of American family life.

THE FAN SAYS:

"I go to the picture theatre for thrills, laughs, bang-up entertainment.

Big names mean nothing to me, if they don't deliver. I've often been stung on over-rated, over-exploited pictures.

I walked in on this picture cold. Didn't know anything about it. Was just hopeful, that's all.

Mister, that picture's a peach. It had me trembling, laughing, crying. On the one thing that really counts — solid, honest entertainment, just put it ahead of them all. If I could see a picture as good as that every show I went to, I'd go more often."

Fox Shorts Up to Schedule

Releases Include "O. Henrys," Urner Series, "Van Bibbers" and Varieties

FOX FILMS is making excellent headway on the schedule of short subjects. Many of the releases for the first quarter of the year are now in readiness for distribution.

"Roses and Romance," released February 13, and "A Man About Town," programmed for March 27, are two of the O. Henry series destined for the exhibitor. Leslie Fenton heads the cast of "Roses and Romance," while Carol Lincoln plays the chief feminine role. Marcella Daly and Ralph Sipperly are also listed. There will be three more of the O. Henry subjects during the season.

Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert head the casts of two Van Bibber comedies, "The Motor Boat Demon," released January 2, and "A Society Architect," ready February 13. Ralph Sipperly performs in "The Motor Boat Demon," of which a race over the water is one of the features. Three additional Van Bibbers are promised for the current season.

Fox Films will release five more of the Mabel Urner series, "The Married Life of Helen and Warren." Their titles will be announced soon. There are four more of the Fox Animal comedies in production, but the titles under which they will be released are still to be given them. There will be two Imperials in January, "The Bathing Suitor" on the 9th and "Hello, Lafayette" on the 23d. Barbara Luddy and George Harris head the cast of the first, while Ernie Shields, Jean Arthur and Harry Woods are prominent players in the other. There are eight more of these Imperials on the current schedule.

Release dates for seven Fox Varieties have been set. "My Lady's Stockings" is due on January 9th, and "Constantinople" on the 23d; on February 6th comes "The Sky Sentinel," on February 20, "Portugal Today." For March there are "Everybody's Servant," which comes on the 6th and "Rock Ribbed Maine," to be issued on the 20th. April 3d has been decided upon as the release date for "Below the Equator."

Pathe's Jan. 16 Short Reels

List Headed by Mack Sennett Two-Reel Comedy and "Our Gang" Film

FOR the third week of Laugh Month, starting January 16, Pathe offers a Mack Sennett and a Hal Roach two-reel comedy in addition to the regular issues of Sportlight, Topics of the Day, Pathe Review and News, etc.

"Pass the Dumplings," starring Alice Day, is the Mack Sennett offering and "Bring Home the Turkey" is Hal Roach's contribution, with the "Our Gang" kids featured. Danny O'Shea, Eddie Quillan and others support Alice Day in the comedy which was directed by Larry Semon. Director Robert McGowan is responsible for the "Our Gang" two-reeler, which finds the gang having a hard but funny time in an orphanage.

Also on the release schedule is the ninth chapter of "The House Without a Key," in which Allene Ray and Walter Miller are co-starred under the direction of Spencer Bennett. The title of the current chapter is "The Wrist Watch." It is an adaptation of the Earl Derr Biggers story published in the "Saturday Evening Post."

Topics of the Day No. 3 offers the latest wit and humor culled from the press of the world. Pathe Review No. 3 offers: "An Unique Hobby": The operation of a complete miniature railroad system by Hugh Newson of New York; "The Island of Jersey": Pathecolor study of the most important and largest island in the English Channel; "The Lost Empire of Africa": continuing the camera chronicle of the American excavations throughout French North Africa by the Count de Prorok—the vestige of a once glorious race visited in the desert.

"Chasing Rainbows" is the Aesop Film Fables cartoon comedy offered for the week, which program is brought to a conclusion by issues Nos. 8 and 9 of Pathe News last minute world events.

Educational's Exploitation for Laugh Month

IN order to help along the Laugh Month idea Educational, cooperating with a number of exhibitors, has arranged a number of tie-ups with toy dealers and musical instrument manufacturers wherein the manufacturers will supply their product to theatres to be given as prizes to children who work out puzzles created by Educational.

One of the tie-ups is with the Ted Taylor Toy Manufacturing Company and another with the Hohner Company, which makes harmonicas. Local newspapers are featuring these puzzles. There are also a number of tie-ups built around the "Felix the Cat" cartoons which Educational releases.

Hopper Will Direct Three More Prevost Films

Metropolitan Pictures has signed E. Mason Hopper to direct Marie Prevost in "The Night Bride," and two of her pictures on next season's program. The star and director are now filming "Getting Gertie's Garter" and upon its completion they will begin work on "The Night Bride," which will complete the Prevost series on the 1926-27 schedule of Metropolitan Pictures. Preliminary preparation for next season's pictures starring Miss Prevost is now under way.

Studio Briefs

Del Andrews, F.B.O. director, has finished the third episode of H. C. Witwer's "Wisecrackers" series, entitled "Love at First Sight." He starts on the fourth of the series immediately, the "Survival of the Fattest," which is due for release during March.

Formerly known as "The Day of Souls," John Gilbert's starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will henceforth be known as "The Show." Tod Browning directed this photoplay of show life in Budapest and in it Renee Adoree plays opposite Gilbert for the first time since "The Big Parade." The star recently returned from a vacation in New York and will soon begin work on "Twelve Miles Out," a story of hi-jacking on rum row, which Jack Conway will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Matinee Ladies," one of the Warner productions, has been started in the Warner Hollywood studio under the direction of Byron Haskins, cameraman, who recently won the directorial position. He will start photography as soon as the cast is assembled. Harry Dittmar is adapting "Matinee Ladies."

Under a special arrangement with Universal, Irving Thalberg has borrowed Jean Hersholt to enact the role of the German tutor in "Old Heidelberg," which Ernst Lubitsch is directing for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and in which Chester Conklin plays an important supporting part. The feminine lead opposite Ramon Novarro in this film is still to be selected. It is expected that an early date will be set to start the production.

James Hall spent his Christmas Eve on board a train en route to California where he is to play opposite Betty Bronson in "Ritzy," which Elinor Glyn wrote especially for Paramount. He recently completed one of the principal portrayals in "Love's Greatest Mistake," Edward Sutherland's Paramount picture.

The choice of director for "The Branding Iron," a forthcoming elaborate screen version by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, of the novel of the same name by Katherine Newlin Burt, has fallen upon Reginald Barker, director of stories dealing with adventure in the outdoors. Elliot Clawson, who scenarized "The Road to Mandalay" and other features in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, has been assigned the adaptation. The story was published several years ago and it is claimed that it has one of the largest circulations on record.

William Demarest, who appeared in "Finger Prints," and "The Gay Old Bird," both Warner Bros. productions, has been signed by that company to a long term contract.

The leading male role opposite Patsy Ruth Miller in that star's first stellar vehicle for Warner Bros.' "What Every Girl Should Know," will be played by Ian Keith, remembered for his roles in "Sunya" and more recently, in "The Prince of Tempters." Charles Reisner will direct Miss Miller in this film, which is based on a story of his own. Others in the cast include Carrill Nye and Mickey McBann.

Ralph Forbes plays the young Englishman, who by his betrayal of the mysterious mandarin's daughter, a role played by Renee Adoree, precipitates the strange Oriental plot of revenge in Lon Chaney's new Production, "Mr. Wu," a role portrayed on the stage by Walker Whiteside. William Nigh is directing this production.

Following "One Hour of Love" on the Tiffany program will be "The First Night," a farce comedy recently completed in which are featured Bert Lytell, Dorothy Devore, Walter Heirs, Harry Meyers, Frederick Ko Vert, Lila Leslie, James Mack, Hazel Keener, Joan Standing and Nellie Bly Baker. Richard Thorpe directed.

J. T. O'Donahue, scenarist and adaptor of "What Price Glory," is at present busily engaged with the continuity for "Cheating Cheaters," Max Marcin's stage play. Edward Laemmle, whose "Held by the Law" is to be released soon, will direct "Cheating Cheaters" and he and O'Donahue are collaborating on the story's treatment. Production is scheduled to start the earlier part of the month.

Berty Levy, for many years a vaudeville headliner and cartoon artist, has been added to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio scenario staff. Levy is also the author of several successful books. His first work under the new contract has not been assigned.

Bert Roach, screen comedian, is to remain with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a featured player. He has just signed a new contract whereby his services will be confined exclusively to M-G-M. At present he is playing in the new Marion Davies production, "Tillie, the Toiler," based on Russ Westover's comic strip of the same name.

Olive Borden, Earle Fox and Margaret Livingston are prepared to start immediate work on "The Secret Studio," a Hazel Livingston story which will be directed for Fox Films by Harry Beaumont. Randall H. Faye wrote the script.

Madge Bellamy and Lawrence Gray have just begun work in "Ankles Preferred," by James Hamilton. Others supporting these two are J. Farrell MacDonald, Barry Norton, Marjorie Beebe and Allan Forrest. It is being directed by J. G. Blystone.

Originally scheduled as a vehicle for Alberts Vaughn, "Nice and Wicked" will serve Viola Dana for her fourth starring film of the F.B.O. 1926-27 series, after the completion of "Salvation Jane." Phil Rosen will direct.

The lead in Charles R. Rogers' production for First National, tentatively titled "The Road to Romance," will be played by Jack Mulhall. The actor has just completed the role opposite Colleen Moore in her starring picture, "Orchids and Ermine."

"Roses and Romance," a two-reel O. Henry comedy, is now going into production at the West Coast studio of Fox Films. Carol Lincoln and Leslie Fenton have the leads under the direction of Jess Robbins.

Allan Durant, young German actor, plays the leading role opposite Virginia Valli in the Fox Films production, "The Wedding Ring." For the last five years Durant has been playing on the German stage, appearing in tragedies as well as leading roles in Ufa films.

The last of the F.B.O. series on the 1926-27 program starring Ranger, the dog, will be "The Outlaw." The continuity is being handled by Dick Pine, and J. P. McGowan will direct. "When a Dog Loves," next to the last one of this series, has just been completed.

"All Aboard," Johnny Hines' forthcoming First National picture, is coming along at top speed before the battery of cameras. With the completion of photography on the desert sequences, which were filmed in El Segunda, and the settings of the Algerian village, practically all of the exteriors have been completed. The Tec Art studio is now the scene of the filming of the exteriors. Animals aplenty are being pressed into service for this comedy, including parrots, goats, donkeys, camels, sheep, horses and snakes.

Buck Jones began work Monday of this week on "Whispering Sage," a new Fox Films drama of the desert by Harry St. Clair Drago and Joseph Noel.

A new contract with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company was recently given Gertrude Olmstead, who is appearing with Lon Chaney in "Mr. Wu." Six years ago Miss Olmstead won a beauty prize and a screen contract offered by the Elks in Chicago. In private life she is the wife of Robert Z. Leonard, director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Lucia Backus Seger is to be Richard Dix's mother in that star's forthcoming Paramount picture, "Knockout Reilly," scheduled to go into work this week at the Long Island studio. Additional members of the cast thus far chosen are Mary Brian and Jack Renault, a prominent pugilist.

William Harrigan, stage actor, will have an important role in "Cabaret," Gilda Gray's starring picture for Paramount. Robert Vignola, the director, expects to start camera work some time next week.

Rosa Rosanova has been added to the cast of Columbia's "Pleasure Before Business." Winfred Landis will have a supporting role in Priscilla Dean's forthcoming vehicle, "Birds of Prey," by George Bronson Howard.

Broadway Fans Respond to Komedy Karnival

B. S. Moss Theatre Features Program of Pathe Short Comedies on Popular Novelty Bill

THE B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, New York, presented its annual Keith Komedy Karnival during the week of December 20th, and thereby set a style which may be profitably emulated during the current Laugh Month campaign. The theatre offers a combination program of films and vaudeville, but while the vaudeville was retained on the Komedy Karnival bill, it was a group of Pathe short comedies which received all the advertising and ballyhoo which brought Broadway fans into the house for this popular event.

Much credit is due Manager Harrington for the expert manner in which he arranged an effective exploitation barrage for this Keith Komedy Karnival, and piloted the show to a huge success against the usual theatre depression witnessed the week before Christmas.

The weeks prior and during the presentation of the Keith Komedy Karnival the Broadway broke with advertisements in all the New York newspapers. A special screen trailer arranged for the Karnival and featuring Pathe's comedians, was run well in advance. Special Karnival posters found prominent space in the theatre lobby ahead of the actual show. A novel shadow box was placed in the single lobby and contained a cut-out with an advance Keith Komedy Karnival notice and heads of Chaplin, Lloyd and Langdon in big display. A catchy, colored circus program was also issued. A unique and effective ballyhoo was created for the Broadway in the form of a gigantic ''Maggie Murphy'' dummy of Steeplechase Coney Island fame.

A feature of the Broadway's exploitation was the theatre front marquee, and lobby, which was decorated with a flashy circus atmosphere. On top of the marquee a huge cutout appeared announcing the Karnival with large heads of the Pathe comedy stars. Directly underneath the marquee were three big clown heads, with circus lettering. Over the box-office running the full length of the theatre entrance was another gigantic display board with painted heads of Lloyd, Chaplin and Langdon, with eye-catching letters on the Keith Komedy Karnival.

New Features for Exploitation of Harmonica Contests

ONE of the most outstanding exploitation features of Educational's Laugh Month activities will be the improved form in which the Juvenile Comedies Harmonica Playing Contests will be presented. These contests have passed through a trial period of one year that has proved their money-making possibilities for the exhibitor. There have been more than five hundred theatres staging them successfully and the exhibitor of the Educational series will have more material for his contests.

There will be available for give-away purposes a special ''Big Boy'' harmonica, similar to those sold in novelty stores at twenty-five cents each. This attractive novelty measures one and one-eighth inches in length and has eight perfectly tuned reeds. Each instrument has a small ring to which a neck cord may be attached, and is capable of playing a number of simple tunes. The instruments will be allotted to theatres according to seating capacity, absolutely without cost. A theatre with five hundred seats can count on at least six dozen harmonicas. Larger quantities will be provided for bigger houses.

The producers of Juvenile Comedies have prepared a trailer, for showing in advance of the contests, the running time of which is about two minutes.

A new broadside, being prepared by Educational's Publicity Department, will soon be available at all exchanges. This will outline the entire plan and give a number of the most successful ideas.

Show for Store Workers is Basis of Tie-up Drive

A tie-up which netted big returns in the way of co-operative advertising for the showing of ''Take It From Me,'' at the Grand Theatre, in Marion, O., had as its main point a special invitation performance of the picture for the employees of a large department store in that city.

The showing resulted in a great amount of word-of-mouth publicity for the picture and as well some co-operative window displays. A drawing contest in conjunction with the ''Marion Star,'' which printed head photos of Reginald Denny and offered prizes for the best drawing of a body to the head, brought other window displays, some of the best drawings being shown in stores.

Canada Theatres Do Good Business Despite Cold

Blizzard weather played havoc with theatre patronage in some sections of Canada, but there were excellent crowds at most theatres when the gales died down, even though cold temperature continued. In other words, bright zero-weather does not seem to affect theatre attendance adversely but there is a difference when storm conditions are disagreeable.

The billing on the Randolph Theatre, Chicago, for the presentation of "The Slums of Berlin" (Imported Pictures Corporation) tied-in with the keynote of the campaign featuring the picture as an importation from the studios abroad

Don't Say Foreign Say Imported

A Review of the Most Successful Ideas Used to Sell Product from Abroad to American Audiences

JUDGING by all the signs of the film zodiac the Imported Motion Picture is here to stay. The recent spectacle of four European pictures running concurrently on Broadway is only one significant sign of the trend of the times. Nor is Broadway the only film thoroughfare to witness a foreign visitation. Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, San Francisco—just to mention a few of the first-run centers—have shown imported productions recently with marked success.

We have had imported pictures in American houses before, of course. But there has been practically no effort made to date to place any special advertising or exploitation effort behind them. In fact, we are strongly of the opinion that most exhibitors, while ordinarily appreciative of the value of publicity in winning box-office patrons, were inclined to adopt "hush methods" when it came to showing foreign-made pictures on their screens. The mediocre quality of some of the product was sufficient to explain the soft-pedal tactics in some of the instances; but in other cases this explanation did not apply, as the pictures were good entertainment. We felt, on the whole, that this secretive method of presenting imported pictures was a questionable one. If somebody with the spirit of a pioneer would only come along and tackle the problem in a radically different way—somebody with guts enough to throw precedent and tradition to the winds and try selling the foreign-made picture just for what it was—IMPORTED!

And then recently we met the man and the picture we had been looking for. The man is Walter W. Kofeldt, President and General Manager of Imported Pictures Corporation, a company devoted exclusively to the distribution of imported pictures in America. The picture is "Slums of Berlin," the first release on the program of Imported Pictures.

We will tell you first some of Mr. Kofeldt's ideas as to the proper methods of exploiting the imported production. Please remember that his contentions are not empty vaporings but conclusions based on practical tests and definite results at the box-office. His first formula is: Tell them that it is imported! Tell it in the theatre ads, in the advance and current publicity, in the posters, in the marquee lights. Never let a single opportunity go by without telling the world that this picture is an IMPORTED one.

And he backs this contention with these reasons: He says, first of all, you put your audiences in the proper receptive state of mind. They know in advance that they are going to see a foreign-made motion picture, with different faces, different story angles, different atmosphere and settings. Put the imported picture on the screen after making your audience think that they are going to see a domestic picture with American actors and American production technique and the chances are that your audiences will feel that they have been deceived, that they have had something "put over" on them—and the picture, irrespective of its merit, suffers accordingly.

Moreover, tell them that it is "imported" because the idea "Imported" has a strong appeal in itself, says Mr. Kofeldt. Mr. and Mrs. Average Citizen are rather proud of their imported possessions—of their British woolens, their Parisian gowns, their Italian laces, their French perfumes. The public pays gladly—in many cases, enthusiastically—for imported things of every kind—works of art, musicians, opera singers, dancers, artists, lecturers. Right in the film industry the acclaim given Negri, Lubitsch, Jannings, Murnau, Lya de Putti, Seastrom and a score of others show the hold importations have on the public imagination. Why then conceal or obscure the strongest selling point you can offer to your public—it's imported? Rather shout this message as often, as long and as loudly as you can—is the Kofeldt policy.

But the exhibitor must be careful to call his picture an imported,—not a foreign production. There seems to be a stigma that attaches itself to the word "foreign" that the showman should make careful note of. It smacks of the alien, of the incomprehensible and unsympathetic. Therefore, describe your picture as being "imported" not "foreign": that is the second formula in Mr. Kofeldt's code of presenting imported pictures on the screen.

Another formula, one that showmen as a class seem to have overlooked up to date, is: Use the foreign-language press. Usually their co-operation is easier to obtain than that of the regular dailies and weeklies. And among their reader-clienteles their prestige and influence are invariably very strong. A general public acceptance can be built up for a particular piece of imported product through making the foreign-language readers in a community your initial point of

This growing use of imported pictures on the screens of American theatres has impressed MOTION PICTURE NEWS with the need for presenting to its readers a few salient points on the proper methods of advertising and exploiting imported product. We have heard much within the past few years of the invasion of American exploitation methods abroad. Some of our ablest exploiteers have been sent to foreign countries to teach foreign film men in the art of "putting over" pictures. Almost invariably the American production has been the subject of the demonstration. Now we enter upon a new phase. A fresh chapter in the history of American Exploitation is being written. This time it is the Imported Picture in the American theatre that commands attention.

Chicago Campaign Reveals New Showmanship Angles

approach. Of course, the appeal to pride of nationality is one of the most powerful at the disposal of the showman. If you are about to present a picture made, we'll say for sake of example, in France with French actors and French settings you are bound to get a tremendous response from editors and readers of French origin or sympathies. Hence, for the effective presentation of imported product on your screen go after your foreign-language press. Appeal to their patriotism, to their love of the old country, its institutions, its industries and traditions.

The entire advance and current campaign of the Randolph Theatre was conducted in strict accordance with the principles just stated. "It's Imported!" was the keynote of the entire campaign and was sounded over and over again in the advertising and publicity released by the theatre management. Additional impetus was given the announcement of the imported character of the attraction by carrying the German title, "Die Verrufenen" directly after the English title wherever used. Even the marquee lights were no exception to this rule, as can be noted from the accompanying photographs. "Slums of Berlin—Die Verrufenen" blazed from the marquees, both over the front and side entrances to the theatres. And the Randolph's newspaper advertising re-echoed the message in the same form and language.

In addition to the liberal spread of advertising in the regular Chicago dailies a campaign was also used in the foreign-language press; notably in the German daily, "Abendpost" and the German Sunday paper "Sontagspost."

Billing Stresses "Imported"

Another feature of the Randolph campaign for "Slums of Berlin" was the unique lobby display put out by the Imported Pictures Corporation. The 11 by 14's made available on this picture instead of being the conventional scene-stills are in reality impressionistic, crayon line-drawings based on the famous story-sketches of Professor Heinrich Zille. These cartoons of Professor Zille's were sketched from actual scenes in the slum life of Berlin and form the basis of the story unfolded in the motion picture. Zille's cartoons created a furore in Germany when they were first published because of their realistic disclosures of slum conditions. The details of the 11 by 14's origin are explained here because we believe here is a truly novel lobby display with a genuine showmanship angle and an underlying story that every alert exhibitor can make use of.

As we stated above, the principles of exploitation just laid down for the proper presentation of imported pictures are radically different from the "hush methods" that have been too often applied heretofore. We also said that these principles were tried and found sound; our proof, briefly, is this: "Slums of Berlin" was originally booked by the Randolph for a week; its run was extended to three weeks.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Short-Subjects and Serials

Universal's Short Reel Plans

Will Spend More Than $5,000,000 on Production of Comedies, Serials, etc.

UNIVERSAL is planning the expenditure of more money than ever before on the short subject productions it will release this year; the company has announced a short reel budget of $5,000,000 which, say company officials, is nearly fifty percent more than has ever been spent on that type of product in the history of the Universal organization in any one year.

New series of established comedy brands will be offered in addition to some newly acquired properties; five new serials will be made, a number of one-reel pictures are scheduled and, as usual, 104 issues of the International News Reel will be released.

Among the innovations on the new schedule will be a series of two-reel comedies based on stories written by Octavus Roy Cohen for Charles Puffy and a series of negro comedy stories, also written by Cohen and which have been published in the ''Saturday Evening Post,'' will be produced as two-reelers. Stern Brothers, Universal producers, have acquired the screen rights to ''Mike and Ike, They Look Alike,'' the cartoon strip by Rube Goldberg, and ''Keeping Up With The Joneses,'' another cartoon strip from the pen of Arthur (Pop) Momand.

The Sterns will also produce another series of twelve comedies based on ''The Newlyweds and Their Baby,'' which will be released as Universal Junior Jewels; likewise another series built around the ''Let George Do It'' stories. Universal will make a follow-up series of ''The Collegians'' stories and I. Von Ronkel is slated to continue with the ''Gumps'' comedies.

The serials to be filmed include ''Keith of Scotland Yard,'' by George Bronson Howard; ''The Trail of the Tiger,'' a Short Story magazine novel by Courtney Riley Cooper; ''The Vanishing Rider,'' an original by William Lord Wright; ''The Scarlet Rider,'' an original by Frank H. Clark, and ''The Phantom Rider,'' adapted from Frank R. Adams' story, ''Pleasure Island.'' The last two titles will probably be changed.

The line-up of two-reel Western productions include 13 Northwest Mounted Police dramas, 13 Texas Ranger dramas, 13 stunt Westerns and 13 variety dramas featuring a boy, an Indian and a dog. In addition to 26 Bluebird one-reel comedies there also will be a series of 13 one-reel comedy cartoons and a series of 13 one-reel novelties of which more will be announced later.

"The Crimson Tide" Next Pathe Serial

"THE CRIMSON TIDE," a mystery story, has been acquired by Pathe as the story basis of the next serial to be produced in the East. The author of "The Crimson Tide" is George Gray, newspaperman and writer formerly connected with "The Plain Dealer" in Cleveland, the "New York World," the "Dramatic Mirror" and other publications. Gray did the stories of the two-reel series of true detective stories released by Pathe and also wrote the novelized version of "Leatherstocking," another of the Pathe serials. He also edited the Pathe "Sun" for five years.

Casting is now in progress on the new serial to which a director will be assigned in a few days.

Banks' Feature Comedy to Be Released January 30

Pathe will release ''Play Safe,'' Monty Banks' second starring feature-length comedy, on January 30. Banks himself is responsible for the story which Charles Horan and Harry Sweet scenarized. Virginia Lee Corbin is leading lady and the support includes Syd Crossley, Bud Jamison, Max Ascher, Fatty Alexander, Charles Girard, Charles Mailes and Rosa Gore. ''Play Safe'' was directed by Joseph Henabery and photographed by Blake Wagner.

The comedian has already completed studio work on ''Horse Shoes,'' his third Pathe feature and it is now in the hands of the editors and title writers and will follow ''Play Safe'' on the Pathe release schedule.

"Laddie Be Good," Cody's First Pathe Western

Bill Cody and J. E. Story, assistant general manager of Pathe, in charge of production in the West, have chosen ''Laddie Be Good'' as the title best fitted for the first of the new series of feature-length comedy-dramas of the Western type in which Cody will star. Production was started at the Fine Arts studio in Hollywood on December 27. Ben Cohn is directing, Ben Westland is production manager of the unit and Joseph Murphy is assistant director. Art Reve and Dave Smith are at the cameras.

Coast Revue in Educational's "Break Away"

The chorus from a well-known Pacific Coast revue was imported intact for the several theatrical episodes in ''Break Away,'' the new Educational-Christie comedy featuring Neal Burns. The beauties were trained and costumed especially for screen work. Many of the ''exterior'' settings used in this comedy were built inside the Christie studio in order to be free from curious crowds.

Cranfield & Clarke Take Over "Gems" Series

The motion picture firm of Cranfield & Clarke has made known, through W. F. Clarke, its acquisition of the "Gems of the Screen" series, which until recently were distributed by Red Seal Pictures Corporation. Cranfield & Clarke intend to push these subjects in the United States and Canada, due to the fact that they have only been partly released. These releases had first run showings on Broadway, either at the Capitol or Rivoli theatres.

Laugh Month Spurs Nation's Interest

Newspapers and Radio Broadcasting Stations Throughout the Country Helping Sell Idea of Mirth; Many Theatres Lined Up

ENTERING the second week of January, reports from every section of the country tell of remarkably widespread interest and participation in the Laugh Month idea. Exhibitors everywhere are cashing in at their box offices on the idea of plugging Laugh Month in general and short subjects in particular.

Almost every key city through the chairman of its local Laugh Month Committee reports the majority of the theatres in its locality participating.

New York is being inundated by radio waves carrying Laugh Month comedy propaganda. Among the big radio stations putting Laugh Month material on the air are WOR, WBCA, WRNY, WHN and WPCH. The dailies are devoting considerable space to Laugh Month. Among the theatres participating in the New York territory are the Loew houses, B. S. Moss Theatres, and in New Jersey the Haring & Blumenthal chain, the Branford, Newark, and many other houses throughout the State. Upstate New York is solidly in line, with Buffalo, Albany, Rochester, Syracuse and several other big cities in the van.

Omaha states that that city is being split wide open by the idea. A proclamation designating January Laugh Month has been signed by Mayor James C. Dohlman; the Omaha Daily News is devoting big space every day to Laugh Month; the A. H. Blank enterprises, controlling about 200 theatres in the district, are solidly behind the idea, and the powerful radio station, WOW, controlled by Woodmen of the World, is broadcasting special Laugh Month programs and conducting contests.

Hilarity reigns in these shots from "Bringing Home the Turkey," another adventure in the lives of the members of "Our Gang," whose vehicles are released by Pathe

Scenes from "Battling Kangaroos," a Fox Films comedy of two reels

In California they are especially enthusiastic on the idea, the entire West Coast Theatres chain, the Golden State circuit and many others taking active part.

Reports of definite participation by large numbers of theatres already have been received by the National Laugh Month Committee from Albany, Atlanta, Boston, Buffalo, Charlotte, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Detroit, Indianapolis, New Haven, Kansas City, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Pittsburgh, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Seattle and Washington, D.C.

Splendid Results

In a national way, the efforts of the Laugh Month Committee are bearing much fruit. Every known medium of publicity is spreading the gospel of Laugh Month to the four corners of the earth. Newspapers everywhere are running special Laugh Month editorials, feature stories, news stories and illustrations. Scores of clippings are pouring into the office of the National Committee every day. Radio stations, fan publications, humorous periodicals are plugging the idea.

On top of all of this come many entries in the Laugh Month exploitation contest. No complete campaigns have as yet been submitted, but already there are scores of entry blanks on file.

Summed up, indications point to the belief that this year's Laugh Month will set a success record that will be hard to beat.

Strong Cast Supports Dooley in New Educational Comedy

An unusually strong cast will appear in the forthcoming Educational-Billy Dooley comedy, which is now in production. Headed by Billy Dooley, the cast includes Vera Steadman, as leading lady; Max Asher, Eddie Baker, Bill Blaisdell, George Towne Hall and George Burton. Asher only recently finished a role in "We're in the Navy Now," in which he impersonated "Admiral Puckerlip."

Nathanson Announces New Series of Two-Reelers

Nat Nathanson, president of Hi-Mark productions, has announced that his company will distribute a new series of two-reel subjects in story form to be known as the "Collegiate" series. The title of the first release is "The Sophomore," featuring George O'Neil, George Chapman, Steve Carruthers, Churchill Ross, Lucille Graydon, Pauline Crowley and Eddie Biggins. Sherwood MacDonald directed.

Duncan in "Dear Season," Educational Cameo

Bud Duncan, who made his debut in the comedy field with Lloyd Hamilton in the old-time team of "Ham and Bud," has the featured role in "Dear Season," a one-reel Cameo comedy which is nearing completion at the Educational studio.

Opinions on Current Productions

"The Tennis Wizard"

(Fox-Van Bibber Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE sort of tennis which Van Bibber plays would be the despair not only of the late Richard Harding Davis, his creator, but of Tilden and Richards, those two tennis stalwarts of the court today. His troubles commence on top of a bus when he drops a locket intended for Florence Gilbert down the back of Marcella Daly. This arouses the jealousy of the latter's husband, William Davidson, who makes Van Bibber's (Earle Fox) life unhappy from that time on. The real trouble starts when Earle Fox boasts of his tennis prowess and receives a challenge from Sherman Ross, the Fox moving picture champion. With the aid of various things including springs in his shoes which make it possible for him to reach the highest balls, Van Bibber triumphs.

It is an amusing, slap-stick comedy rather far removed, as they all are, from the Davis original. They doubtless have to be any way for moving picture purposes. In selecting tennis it has the merit, at least, of a new field, and that helps a bit.

Released November 21, 1926.

Artistic Skies—Sweets and Fashions

(Pathe Review No. 2—One Reel)

FIRST in the January 9th Pathe Review is a series of mighty effective photographic shots of skies under varying conditions. They represent the sort of thing that must have made a great hit with the cameraman when he was shooting them because of their beauty. The spectator can share that enthusiasm.

"Growing sugar cane on the Island of French Martinique" in the West Indies is done in Pathecolor and they are beautiful pictures. Here is a section of a reel that is not only instructive but also eye-satisfying. Curiously the bucolic or primitive seems always to lend itself to color photography much more successfully than urban scenes do. The cameraman has done justice to his subject.

Fashions of 1927 will score with women because Irene Castle is the mannequin who shows the frocks and gowns. Several are characterized by their novelty and originality. For the man with a limited pocketbook it would be just as well for him to stay away from the theatre with his wife during the showing of these particular pictures. Either that or approach them in the same spirit that a man with a Ford pocketbook enters a Hispano-Suizza salesroom to look but not to buy.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Courage of Collins"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

"COLLINS," otherwise known as Edmund Cobb of the Universal, belonged to the Northwest Mounted; also, of course, he had courage. In this particular instance it was more or less up to him to protect two kids, Helen Foster and her brother, from land squatters. To get the goods on the latter he doffed his uniform so that neither the crooks nor the two youngsters knew that he was what he was. He even incurred the enmity of the girl because she thought he was unfair to the villian who was a real villain because while he was trying to do the girl and her brother he posed as their friend. The boy knew better and for once the woman intuition was not working. However in the end she learned better when she saw the villains being led away by Cobb's associates and discovered that he too belonged to that picturesque body, the Mounted Police.

Before all this came about there had to be several hand-to-hand battles and lots of typical Mustang hard riding before the final fadeout could be thrown on the screen.

It is all exciting and interesting and shows how justified Cobb is in having the followers that he has. There is no reason why some day he will not be found with the Tom Mix, Buck Jones and Fred Thomsons of the longer length pictures.

Ray Taylor directed this particular Mustang, which will be released February 5, 1927.

"The Newlyweds Build"

(Universal-Stern Bros—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE reason the newlyweds get the building bug is because they can do nothing else after Snookum's hell-raising has resulted in their practical eviction. A billboard with its siren-like question of "Why not own your own home?" proves their undoing. They start to build one of those collapsible bungalows with the accent on the collapsible. The trials and tribulations that they and the builder go through in getting the house up are many and varied. Whenever things seem to be going along fairly well the youngster gets busy and throws a monkey-wrench into the machinery. The house finally completed, the family takes refuge therein to escape a thunder shower, but, as might be expected, the shelter afforded is non-existant. Then comes the sun again but there is no rainbow for them because the house has shrunk and looks like one of those buildings in Dr. Caligari's Cabinet. Or, if you did not see that, imagine a drawing by Marcel DuChamps, Picasso, Gleize, Picabia or any other favorite futuristic impressionistic art'st

It is one of the best of the Newlywed releases and reflects credit on whoever wrote it, Gus Meins, the director, and Ethlyne Clair and Sid Taylor as the young married couple with the George McManus kid for offspring.

Released February 2.

"Up Against It"

(Universal-Gump—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

"ANDY" through vanity gets into his usual amount of trouble. He overhears "Min" telling her mother "No, Andy couldn't possibly paper the spare room; he is too dumb." This has the desired effect. Of course he insists upon doing the papering and does, but how? Anyone at all familiar with the Sidney Smith cartoon strip will know that he balls things all up. In this instance he papers the entire room, leaving no egress. With characteristic Gump initiative he spends the night in the room because he is too dumb to find a way out. A monkey that hides behind pictures and under coverings creates in the moronic Gump mind the idea that there are ghosts or spirits in the room. Finally his release comes when he stumbles against the section of wall paper pasted over the doorway. That is about all there is to it. So between carpet-beating and paper-hanging the much anticipated fishing trip that Andy had looked forward to becomes more or less of a bloomer. But "Andy" is accustomed to the frustration of his plans by now as "Min" is that type of wife and always tries to see that, like the typical American husband, he shall be kept in his proper position.

Joe Murphy, Fay Tincher and Jackie Morgan still impersonate the Gump family with Francis Corby directing. January 24th is the release date for this picture.

"Wild and Woozy"

(Educational-Christie Jimmy Adams Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

JIMMY ADAMS' moving picture father-in-law wants to add a sacred monkey to his collection or that of the zoo in which he is professionally interested. This bird can be found on a cannibal island. With the weirdest looking plane made to resemble some bird unknown to ornithology they make the trip. Once on the island the trio, Jimmy, Vera Steadman and her father, Billy Engle, are regarded as heaven-sent food by George Towne Hall, the cannibal chief. Then ensues one grand rough house. The cannibals try to get their prospective meal into the pot; the visitors trying to escape. Jimmy at one stage of the game puts the cannibal chief down and out and assumes his regalia and role. Finally they manage to escape for the return journey to so-called civilization.

The mystifying part of the whole thing is the aforementioned weird-looking plane. By ingenious, skillful photography the machine seems to actually rise and fly. For the island scene a number of extras are employed and they successfully create atmosphere. It is a rough and tumble burlesque and will doubtless be productive of the expected and requiste number of laughs.

Harold Beaudine directed.

"Rollin' Along"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

DICE, for some unknown reason, are not included in this Grantland Rice Sportlight. Practically everything else that rolls, on wheels at least, is included. Evidently the author discovered in Terra Haute a cache of bicycles of all ages and vintages, for the earliest type is shown leading down to the most modern motorcycle skimming a modern velodrome bowl. Conscientiously and appropriately the owner-exhibitor of the old bicycles puts on the costumes of the period which makes the pictures even more effective. It is a series which should delight those reminiscent writers, Thomas Beer with his "Mauve Decade" and Mark Sullivan with "The Turn of the Century," for it is before, through and after those periods that Rice deals with in this release.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Chasing Rainbows"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

IF community of interest counts for anything, this one of Aesop's Fables should score, for are we not all chasing rainbows from the cradle to the grave? Farmer Al, Tom the cat and Milton the mouse are surely no exceptions. Following a storm in which the unholy trinity take refuge in the house, Al tells the oft-told tale of the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. The three set out to locate the same. They dig so deep at different locations that they reach the excavation of each other. A rope which they think will pull the pot of gold to the surface only lands Al, who is at the other end of the same. Shattered is their dream of wealth, but twice shattered when they all awake to discover the whole is but a dream and they are still in the room where they took refuge from the thunder storm. Al vents his spite and unhappiness at the unfortunate awakening by chasing the cat and mouse over the hill and far away.

There must be some moral other than the facetious one credited to Aesop. I think possibly it is that "it is better to dream of wealth even though you have to wake up than not to dream at all."

Anyway it is an interesting and amusing one of the series.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Diversified Castle Offering
(Music Legend, Novelty and Six Shorts)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

RELEASED by Castle Films December 17th, were two interesting pictures. The first of these is a music legend explaining how the Bridal Veil Falls in the Yosemite were named. The story is of the Indian maiden who fell in love with the Evil warrior spirit whose face she saw in the stream. In reaching for an embrace she lost her balance and was swept over the falls. The sighing sound made by the wind in the trees adjacent to the falls naturally became her lamentations over her ill-starred fate. The falls formed a mist resembling a bridal veil. Hence their name. With a proper Indian musical accompaniment this should be quite effective.

The second December 17th release is a Rainbow novelty. It is on the Santa Fe trail and shows the life of the cliff dwellers. The photographer used good judgment in his selection of subjects. The result is that there is a succession of interesting shots despite the fact that he is traveling ground that has been much crossed by other cameramen. The finale of an Indian brave standing making obeisance to the setting sun is most effective.

The third of the program really forms its own division, being released one week later than the two preceding, December 24th. This is the famous short subjects, six in number. They include a "nut" who roller-skates on the edge of a Los Angeles skyscraper, another who puts burning objects in his mouth, and kids and their pets. For a program lacking in novelty or variety these will fit in quite satisfactorily.

"Bring Home the Turkey"
(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANYTHING that "Our Gang" does is worth while; that is axiomatic. Consequently it is one of the biggest assets that Pathe and Hal Roach can boast of because it brings smiles not only to the movie public but, possibly more important, to the countenances of exhibitors. Possibly with this title, "Bring Home the Turkey," and the theme, it might have been more appropriate to have scheduled the release last Thanksgiving. But—show me the boy or girl to whom a turkey is not timely in January or any other month in the year. For the purposes of this particular chronicle of the gang's activities they are quartered by Director Robert McGowan in an orphanage, not exactly a Charles Dickens type but bad enough as it is. Farina, Mango and Pleurisy have been borrowed by Uncle Tom (not Harriet Beecher Stowe's) who lives in a shack. His philosophy is characteristically negro, "The Lord helps those who help themselves." Despite his light-fingered theories, like many people called by the world immoral, he is infinitely more kind and charitable than the representatives of law and society. For this reason, when the orphanage authorities try to get the three children back for labor on the farm they humanly object and protest. The climax comes with a pitched battle with the representatives of the law.

Need I add that there are laughs galore and justification for a furtive tear now and then? These kid pictures are about the most human short subjects in the moving picture world of make-believe.

Railroads, A Famous Isle and Africa
(Pathe-Review, No. Three—One Reel)

ALMOST every boy loves a railroad and "boy" means from five to fifty or older. I remember that Gelett Burgess, the famous creator of the Goops, had a complete railroad system in which he sold shares to Will Irwin and other friends and which they operated on the floor of his rooms (this was before his marriage) with great profit and pleasure. So with Hugh Newsom, of New York City. He has a complete system which he operates and which Pathe has photographed. It cannot fail to wake a responsive chord in the breast of every boy—age regardless—in the theatres where shown.

The second in the Pathe January 16th Review release is the Island of Jersey off the English coast. Many will remember it as the birthplace of beautiful Lily Langtry, known for years as the "Jersey Lily." The largest and most important island in the English channel, it lends itself to beautiful Pathecolor shots.

Another section of Count de Prorok's African discoveries is shown. His departure, bidding farewell to wife and child at the expedition base, precedes the journey across the desert. Often photographed, but never failing in interest, are these glimpses into the native life of French North Africa. Moreover, they are educational without seeming to be, and that is a decided asset and recommendation.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Mister Chump"
(Educational-Cameo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

PHIL DUNHAM is married to Aileen Lopez, Clem Beauchamp having performed the moving picture marriage ceremony for Cameo comedy purposes. Phil is extremely jealous of his wife and when he finds a note intended for the maid, he husbandly mistakes it for Aileen. Then he starts for the park, where the rendezvous is. Sailors, policemen and others in turn are suspected of being the note writer and assaulted by the irate Phil. When he causes the involuntary plunge of several cops into the lake there naturally ensues a typical moving picture pursuit race. This leads the suspicious Benedict to join a group of Nature dancers celebrating the birth of Spring or some such auspicious event. He makes a somewhat graceful dancer but is compelled once more to flee. Finally he reaches his home to be rescued from the mob of pursuers by his faithful wife. Man-like he forgives her for the suspicions he had, and she, like a poor sap, agrees to forgive and forget. Such is the homely little tale of this Cameo comedy.

It is a bit rough but jazzed up so that probably the majority of theatre-goers who like that sort of thing will like this particular offering. The title is justified and if the hero is a true representative of most husbands I can understand why many wives leave home.

"Felix Collars the Button"
(Educational-Animated Cartoon—One Reel)

FELIX plays first-aid to the injured and does so in order that he may get some much-wanted, whether needed or not, sleep. He can not sleep with the husband and wife quarreling because the husband, in dressing for the theatre, has lost his collar button. This means the theatre party is off and the husband is given a tongue-lashing and a physical dressing down that interfere with Felix's slumbers. For this reason he sets out in search of the errant collar button and not because he gives a hang about the people themselves. His chase leads to the bakers. Felix finally locates the button lost in the dough, through the aid of a magnet. The rest is easy. "Mr. and Mrs." depart for the playhouse and Pat Sullivan's animated cat goes to sleep.

In this instance you will be rewarded by the return in laughs you secure. — PAUL THOMPSON.

"Love on a Weak Stomach"
(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

SURELY no better cure for a hypochondriac could be devised than for the patient to inherit valuable property. That is what happens to Neely Edwards in this Bluebird Comedy. He is delighted, not because it affects his condition, but because it makes it possible for him to have a nurse and really indulge in his fancied maladies. His ex-employer tries to gyp him out of the property but a telegraphic order for ten times the amount offered for the inherited real estate arrives just in time to save Neely and the situation.

It is an innocuous little trifle that is mildly amusing. If all the people who think they are ill support the one-reeler there will be no question about its financial success. January 31st is the release date.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Relay"
(Universal-No. 7 "The Collegians"—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AND still George Lewis and his Freshmen classmates continue to triumph over the Sophomores. This time it is an en masse victory rather than individual accomplishment. Because the first-year girls win the inter-class relay race the Sophomores pay the penalty by being compelled to don masquerade costumes and do the bidding of the lower classmen. That is, they do until at a dance they kidnap through the agency of fake policemen the entire body of Freshmen. The latter return, however, to engage in a battle royal in the dance hall. This is a glorious, titanic struggle that surges back and forth all over the dance floor, into the fountain, on chandeliers and elsewhere. Clothes are torn and eyes blackened until victory finally comes to the once dinner-coated Freshmen and it is all over.

It is one of the best moving picture college fights I have ever seen. The chapter or episode is one of the best in "The Collegians" series and helps to maintain a really excellent average. Instead of seeking Ponce de Leon's mythical youth-giving spring in Florida, or visiting either Doctor Steinach in Vienna or Voronoff in Paris, I recommend these Carl Laemmle, Jr. co-ed college two-reelers for youth-restoring qualities.

George Lewis and Dorothy Gulliver, she of the blondness, are featured. Wesley Ruggles directs. Released January 31st, 1927.

"The Spotted Menace"
(Pathe-Serial—Chaper 8)

THE solution of the Earl Derr Biggers Saturday Evening Post story of murder and mystery, "The House Without a Key," which Frank Leon Smith adapted and Spencer Bennet directed comes on apace. Only a short time and we will all know who murdered Dan Winterslip. In the meantime you must expect to get your weekly quota of thrills and suspense for that is the way of a serial. No sooner do hero Walter Miller and heroine Allene Ray get out of one scrape than they find themselves in another. There is no limit to the ingenuity and devilishness of villains on the screen. The native who unquestionably is responsible for the original murder has tactfully suggested that the Miller-Ray team swim ashore, knowing full well their chances of getting away from the sharks that infest the waters are slight. Or he would know, did he not stop to think they must be alive and triumphant when the end comes two chapters hence.

Quite a galaxy of well-known players support the two stars. They number among others Frank Lackteen, Harry Semels (two of the villains), John Webb Dillion, Natalie Warfield and William Norton.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Nic-Nax"
(Educational-Curiosities—One Reel)

A WILD WEST barbershop whose proprietor shoes horses or bobs hair with equal facility. This is in Montana and it really is true and not a movie camera's optical illusion. This starts the Movie Side Show. Then follows the Polyps, the freak of the ocean, which has a Japanese fan effect. It snares the shrimps that get too near. A dog which hunts turtles and a white heron battling with the turtle provides several feet of film.

In Elberfeld, Germany, is a monorail, the trains being suspended. Thus they go through the streets of the city and the suburbs. In contrast with the suspended "L" trains, because they travel on the ground, are shown wild porcupines with a snow background.

For a finale, possums with their young, a pony of Cognac (not a drink, but a young horse), and old-fashioned Chinese junks. Like its predecessors, this issue of Curiosities is characterized by its diversity. — PAUL THOMPSON.

One Increasing Purpose

Hutchinson's Best Seller Becomes a Picture

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AND still the screen version of popular novels and plays continues. This time it is the work of the English author of "If Winter Comes," A. S. M. Hutchinson. The novel which has had a pronounced vogue is "One Increasing Purpose." William Fox sent Edmund Lowe, the featured player, and several of the others to England, the locale of the story, for the taking of the various photographic shots. Whether it will satisfy the readers of the novel I have no way of knowing, not being among that group. I imagine not. But that is not a reflection on the picturization.

The story is of a younger brother returning from the war to discover with his new outlook on life the universal selfishness of most of mankind, especially in his own family. His the task of spreading the gospel of unselfishness. At the end, with his wife, he is caravaning through the British Isles preaching this new religion, or, if not actually new, one but seldom practised.

It is moderately good drama. Beaumont has done quite a satisfactory bit of directing, being fortunate in uniformly good performances by Lowe and the supporting cast. It is the type of picture which will create no furore but should interest the novel's many readers and others.

THEME: Attempting spiritual regeneration of characters in the drama.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Effective English rural scenes. Lowe's straightforward performance. Retention (as far as can be discovered) of spirit of novel.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Novel's popularity. Interesting, human drama with moral lesson.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 7,677 feet. Released January 2, 1927.
Produced and distributed by William Fox.

The Third Degree

Charles Klein's Famous Melo "Goes Movie"

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MORE and more do the theatrical ghosts of the past rise in the inhabitants of screen clothing. The latest is the famous melodrama excoriating the third degree methods of modern police departments to wrest confessions true or otherwise from suspects. It served a decade ago to make famous the name of Charles Klein. Now it is used by Warner Brothers as a starring vehicle for Dolores Costello, she who won fame as leading woman for Jack Barrymore in "The Sea Beast." It is melodrama of the melo-est with a circus background that adds greatly to its appeal. Possibly the outstanding feature is the use made by the director,

The tale is of a girl born of circus parents. The mother runs away from the brutality of her death-daring motorcycle-riding husband and leaves her child behind. The latter becomes a famous wire-act artist. She meets and marries the son of a millionaire who in turn has married the mother of the girl. The millionaire opposes his son's marriage because of the difference in social positions. His emissary to break up the marriage is killed by the wife, but the guilt is fastened on the boy.

Dolores Costello, Louise Dresser, David Torrence, as the boy's father, Tom Santchi, father of the girl, and Jason Robards, as the boy, give satisfactory performances.

THEME: Police third degree methods with a circus and society background.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Circus scenes; third degree episode, camera angles of the "Variety" kind. Dolores Costello's performance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up origin of picture, Charles Klein, great melodrama author. Circus phase of story. Dolores Costello's stardom. Good supporting cast. Well photographed.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

Length, 7,647 feet. Released December 25, 1926.
Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.

A Little Journey

Neat Little Number, Slight But Enjoyable

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THOROUGHLY enjoyable because it is treated with tender humanities tempered with a good play of humor, this picture succeeds in capturing the attention from the first scene and holding it all the way. It might be called a slender tid-bit of romance that keeps from evaporating through the clever handling of the scenes.

Starting off by showing a flirtatious youth determined to win a charming girl who passes him in the railroad station it takes them both on a transcontinental trip to Frisco. The girl boards the train after rebuffing the calloused but eager young bounder. And he leaps after her and comes to the rescue when she loses her ticket. Which of course precipitates a series of 'give and take' ideas on the subject of romance. The youth will not be licked.

The gentle comedy is balanced with some scenes of pathos—with most of the action taking place on the sleepers and drawing-rooms of the train. William Haines gives a corking performance as the irrepressible and impressionable youth, showing considerable skill in the lost art of flirting. Claire Windsor is sufficiently poised and careful to add spice to the romance, while Harry Carey, out of his chaps, makes a very human character.

The Cast: Claire Windsor, William Haines, Harry Carey, Claire McDowell, Lawford Davidson. Director, Robert Z. Leonard.

THEME: Comedy-romance of tempestuous youth who sweeps girl off her feet with the ardor of his attentions.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The flirtation. The ticket episode. The scenes in the drawing room and smoking car. The clever acting by Haines. The titles. The realistic atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title and play up the action taking place on train. Bill Haines in big style and mention others. Handle in light comedy vein.

DRAWING POWER: Sure to please all the romantic people. Haines should draw them. For any type of house.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
Length, six reels. Released January, 1927.

The Lady in Ermine

Well Mounted, But Not Much To It

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SOMETIMES an adaptation of a musical comedy or operetta turns out to be an enjoyable affair on the screen. Here is one instance where it isn't so good, principally because of story weakness. In order to cover up its flaws most of the good points are centered in the production. Insofar as lighting, photography, sets and costumes are concerned, the film succeeds in being interesting.

The plot, however, never gets under way with any success. It goes back to 1810 during the Austrian invasion of Italy, braving an excursion into romance which fails to arouse much interest. The central figure is a countess whose castle is invaded by the Austrians. The gate-crashing general orders her to appear for dinner and starts to win her away from her husband if possible. The film takes one back to a previous generation when the heroine's great grandmother suffers the same disgrace. Which accounts for the title. The general has a vivid dream of conquering the countess just as her ancestor was conquered.

It ends with a particularly weak climax. There are few worthy episodes, but on the whole it lacks the punch to appeal. Corinne Griffith gives a satisfactory performance. At least she decorates it with her beauty.

The Cast: Corinne Griffith, Einar Hansen, Ward Crane, Francis X. Bushman, Jane Keckley. Director, James Flood.

THEME: Romantic drama of countess who suffers humiliations from invading troops, but who is resourceful enough to triumph over them.

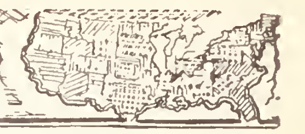
PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The backgrounds and lighting. The scene between introduction of countess to general. The dream sequence. The close-ups.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the star's beauty and run stills of her lobby display. Tie up with fur stores. Bill as film version of successful operetta.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw where star is popular. Satisfactory for average trade, especially neighborhood houses.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
Length six reels. Released December, 1926.

Regional News from Correspondents



Cleveland

THE year starts with a good crop of rumors. One is that Charlie Schwerin has resigned as Columbia exchange manager in Pittsburgh to become central division manager for United Artists. Following that is the rumor that Sam A. Gerson, who recently joined the Universal sales force in Pittsburgh, succeeds Charlie Schwerin as Columbia exchange manager. And still another: Lew Thompson, prominent in local film circles, has been appointed manager of the United Artists exchange in Minneapolis. Because all of these men are well known, these reports are of interest to local readers.

Jack Hays. Remember him? He used to be with Paramount. For the past two years he has been Universal's representative in Mexico. Jack's present address is Hotel Geneve, Calle de Liverpool, Mexico City, D.F. He is anxious to hear from the boys. Not long since Hays underwent an operation. He wrote up to friends that his Thanksgiving dinner consisted of opiates. But he has recovered from that and says, in a letter to Jack Lawrence of the Cleveland Standard Film exchange, that he'll be 100 per cent well if he gets some news from his friends in the States. Now you have his address, boys, don't forget to sit down and write Jack a letter.

Irving Meisel has been added to the local United Artists sales staff by Manager William Rosenthal. Meisel was formerly with Fox.

By the way, it has never been recorded that William Rosenthal has been officially appointed resident exchange manager here for United Artists. When William Shallitt was transferred from the Cleveland office to an eastern office, Rosenthal was made acting manager. Seeing as how he was a good "actor," he has been given the job without qualifications.

Frank Paskert, for the past seven years one of the Universal family, is now with United Artists as travelling auditor. In that capacity he has been spending the week in Cleveland.

Chick Taylor has resigned from the Washington Circuit organization. For the past three and a half years he has been manager of the Shaw-Hayden. Last week, M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit, sold the Shaw-Hayden to the Silverman Brothers. Chick will take a vacation before tieing himself up to a new contract.

E. E. Oliver, of the Oliver Motion Picture Supply Company, is showing signs of improvement. He has just moved into larger rooms on the second floor of the Film Exchange Bldg. Oliver distributed Superior Projection machines as well as other theatre equipment.

William F. Barrett, sales manager for Lee Bradford state rights productions, spent a few days in Cleveland last week calling on the independents.

Billy Exton has resigned as manager of the Temple Theatre, Toledo. Exton has been managing the house for E. Mandelbaum for the past year. He severed his connection there this week to become genral manager of the Smith Enterprises. The Smith Enterprises consist of picture houses in Alliance, Waren and Huntington, W. Va., with LeMotto Smith as president.

Cleveland will have another new neighborhood photoplay house after January 15th, the date set for the opening of the Broadvue Theatre. This is a 2,000-seat picture house built by Messrs. B. Z. Levine and Ernest Schwartz. It is located at West 25th Street at Broadview Avenue. Levine operates the Erie Theatre, and Schwartz has other theatre interests.

Max Marcus, affectionately known in these parts as "Daddy" Marcus who owns and operates the U. S. Theatre, Woodland Avenue, Cleveland, is recovering from an illness which has confined him in a local hospital for the past few weeks.

Paul Mueller, of the McKinley Theatre, Canton, and the Grand Theatre, Massillon, spent the Christmas holidays with friends in Cleveland.

Jack Soglovitz has resigned as manager of the Pittsburgh exchange of Standard Film Service Company, to go into business for himself. Jack has opened a poster rental department. It's called the Theatre Poster Rental and is located in the new United Artists building on East 21st Street. Happy New Year, Jack, and good luck in the new enterprise.

Pete Morrison, who covered part of the Ohio territory for Pathe, is now touring for Tiffany. Mark Goldman is the local Tiffany manager.

Anne Gaton, who left here several weeks ago to become private secretary to H. A. Bandy, general manager of First National's foreign department, spent Christmas at home and returned to New York immediately after the holidays.

The Strand Theatre at Newton Falls, O., is reported closed on account of an epidemic.

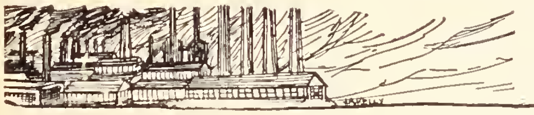
Kenneth Reid, manager of Loew's Doan Theatre, is so versatile that he acts equally well on both sides of the stage. Last week, in addition to managerial duties, he used the burned cork and acted as interlocutor for a musical minstrel show, which he put on as a special Christmas week stunt.

Gertrude Donnely, cashier at Loew's Cameo Theatre, has joined the first rank of local baseball rooters. There's a reason. She has just announced her engagement to Homer Summa, fielder of the Cleveland Indians.

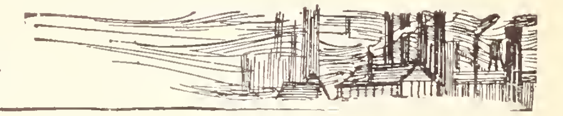
Lester Huff is now commander-in-chief of the organ at the Allen Theatre. He succeeds Clara Giese, who resigned recently.

Here's one on Nick Carter, projectionist at the Allen. The other day he found a pink slip parked in the windshield of his car. He wasn't a bit worried. He played it for one of the fake arrest notices distributed recently during the engagement of Gilda Grey at the State. Only this time, he made a mistake. The pink slip happened to be one of the real kind, and now Nick is busy explaining.

The holidays saw many out-of-town exhibitors come and go through the Filx Exchange Bldg. Among those noted in the Film Register were Mr. and Mrs. A. Cohn of the Grand, Liberty and New theatres, East Liverpool; James Velas, Capitol, Bellaire, Family, Bridgeport and another house in Wheeling; Nat Charnas, movie magnate of Toledo; Mrs. L. B. Yoerns, Bedford Theatre, Bedford; Gus Lambrigger, Grand, Orville; P. M. Tracy, American, Leetonia; H. J. Geiselman, Opera House, Loudonville; Dan Robins, Robins' Theatre, Youngstown; J. W. Trunk, the sheik of Youngstown, and manager of the Mahoning, Victory and Uptown theatres; M. Moran, Lincoln, Youngstown; Albert Stalder, Spicer Theatre, Akron; Max Federhar, Regent and Rialto, Akron; Joe Schagrin, Park, Youngstown, and Selma Zigiob, who has succeeded her brother George as manager of the Dreamland, Paris and Cozy theatres in Lorain.



Central Penn



TWO performances on New Year's Eve marked the formal opening of the new Lion Theatre, in Red Lion, York County, Pa. This is a modern photoplay theatre with a seating capacity of almost 1,200, and the owner is Walter J. Rothensies, lessee of the Red Lion Opera House.

The theatre includes among its equipment a splendid Wurlitzer pipe organ on which a recital was given by John DePlama, organist at the Strand Theatre, York, who was obtained through the courtesy of the Nathan Appell Amusement Enterprises, of York. The house was filled to capacity at both the opening performances.

R. A. Robillard has been promoted from the position of manager of the Roosevelt Theatre, in the Green Ridge suburb of Scranton, to manager of the large State Theatre, in the central part of the city. Both theatres belong to the Comerford Amusement Company chain.

Among the property destroyed in the fire which recently wrecked the Forrest Theatre, Bristol, Pa., was one of the first motion picture projection machines ever made. It was the property of Ed Lynn, manager of the theatre and one of the pioneer exhibitors of Bristol.

A new $100,000 picture theatre is to be built in Conshohocken, Pa., for Nicholas Falone, of that city. The plans are being prepared in Lancaster by Architect M. S. Bean. A site for the theatre has been obtained at Fayette Street and First Avenue.

Two hundred employees of the six Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg were entertained by their employers, headed by C. Floyd Hopkins, divisional manager for the company in Harrisburg and Reading, at a Christmas party in the Penn-Harris Hotel on the night of December 23rd, just after the night performances in the theatres closed. Headliners at the State Theatre for the week provided much of the entertainment while the theatre employes "sat back" and enjoyed it.

The performers were assisted by local talent headed by Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, head of the Community Service Bureau maintained by Wilbur & Vincent in Harrisburg; Miss Mae Shope, Elmer Ley and a number of the girls from Mrs. Ley's school of fancy dancing. There was dancing to music by the State Theatre Orchestra.

Robert S. Steele, manager of the Strand Theatre, Carlisle, was guest of honor at an after-theatre party given by his employees on the night of December 23rd. He was presented with a gold watch as a Christmas gift in appreciation of his kindness to his workers during the year.

Those of his employees or former employees who were present, in addition to Mr. Steele, are: Mr. and Mrs. A. Karl Kramer, Miss Elmina Thompson, Miss Alice Barrick, Miss Thelma Deitch, Marshall Kline, John Meck, Arthur Herr, Richard Wistotskey, John Day and Miss Martha Reickenbaugh, of Harrisburg, formerly of Carlisle.

Use of the Capitol Theatre, Hazleton, was tendered by the management for the afternoon of Sunday, December 19th, to the Drama Club of the Hazleton High School, for the presentation of a Christmas play.

Buffalo

THE RIVERA, a new theatre in Webster Street, North Tonawanda, was formally opened Thursday evening, December 30. Henry S. Henschel, president of the Main-Go Realty Corporation, and James J. Kelly, manager, are financially interested in the house. The theatre has been under construction for a year and was completed at a cost of $300,000. It has a seating capacity of 1,300 and can rank in beauty with any other theatre its size in New York State. It was built under the State code and it contains all the modern improvements and facilities to be seen in the modern showhouse. A feature is the $30,000 Wurlitzer organ, with ivory console. It is one of three organs in the country with such a console, it is said, and was designed to improve spotlight effects. The spacious lobby with its rich draperies, chandeliers and frescoes exceeds anything that ever had been attempted in the Tonawandas. Mayors of both Tonawandas were present at the opening. The programs will be changed three times a week. Nearly a thousand lights are used on the theatre's Webster Street exterior.

It is understood that the Schine Theatrical Corporation has leased the new theatre which the Hager-Askey Company is building at Main Street and West Northrup in Buffalo. It is expected that the house will open this spring.

Elmer C. Winegar, veteran Buffalo showman, is managing the new Riverside Community Theatre, which the Schine Theatrical Corporation recently opened in the Black Rock district of Buffalo. Elmer has been engaged for several years in making industrial film and prior to that was manager of several local theatres.

Robert T. Murphy is the manager of the new Shea Kensington which was opened to the public on Christmas Day. This beautiful 1,500-seat community house, at Bailey and Kensington avenues, is the second neighborhood theatre in the Shea-Publix chain in Buffalo. Bob Demming, formerly organist at the Palace in Lockport, is presiding at the console of the Kensington Wurlitzer. Mr. Murphy formerly was manager at the North Park, where George Walker, formerly at the Shea Court Street, now is manager.

The first New Year's Eve show held in the magnificent Shea's Buffalo was a great success. The entire house was sold out and there were hundreds of standees. The program consisted of the combined attractions of the Buffalo and Hippodrome as well as an augmented orchestra, under the direction of Herbert Straub. Luncheon was served back stage for the performers and house staffs during the show.

The Genesee Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., have announced the company has taken over the management of the Allen Theatre in Medina. Several other projects are planned. The Allen was managed for many years by Sid Allen.

The holding of Sunday motion picture shows in Andover has been temporarily held up despite the fact that a petition signed by a large number of villagers was recently circulated. A study of the law shows that the village board must give its consent before the shows can be held. It is possible that the village board will refuse to grant the necessary permission and the only other course there is, is to hold a special election. Those promoting the Sunday shows say they will ask for such an election if the board refuses to act. There is a strong sentiment for Sunday pictures in the town, but certain members of the board are known to be opposed.

The Film Board of Trade of Buffalo has published a very complete and handy list of all the local exchanges, managers, bookers and telephone numbers.

Arthur L. Skinner, former manager of the Victoria, has leased the Savoy Theatre, an east side community house, which is making a popular center of entertainment.

A new motion picture theatre with 2,500 main-floor capacity, is planned for the corner of Genesee and Bailey, according to an announcement by the Stanley Mark-Strand Corporation of New York. Frontage on Bailey Avenue will be 230 feet and the depth on Genesee 275 feet. There will be 12 to 14 stores on the Bailey Avenue frontage. Henry L. Spann is the architect.

Basil Brothers, associated with Barney Vohwinkel, have completed arrangements to erect a large theatre and office building at Genesee and Nevada streets. The property occupies almost the entire block, with a frontage of 170 feet on Genesee Street and a depth of 200 feet. The plans are being prepared for eight stores, offices and a 2,200-seat theatre. The cost of the building will be $500,000. Mr. Vohwinkel is one of Buffalo's pioneer exhibitors, his present 400-seat theatre being one of the first built in the city. Basil Brothers are owners and operators of the Clinton-Strand and the Central Park, which they are leasing.

The Central Theatre in Lackawanna is now under the management of Frank Babuinski. The theatre has been thoroughly renovated and redecorated throughout, and a new heating system installed.

Minneapolis

THE Finance Advisory Board of the Northwest M.P.T.O. held its first meeting recently and gave the time to organizing this special committee and to a review of the past year. Otto Raths of St. Paul, and Theodore Hays of Minneapolis, were chosen chairman and vice-chairman of the committee, respectively.

O. H. Lambert has been appointed office manager of the Minneapolis branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, according to W. H. Workman, manager. Mr. Lambert was formerly special representative at the Kansas City branch.

The Gem Theatre, at Midland, S.D., has been sold by B. F. Schimke to J. F. Willoughby.

John Basche has sold the Alexandria Theatre, Alexandria, S.D., to F. W. Kutil.

Miss Olive Hough, of the Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer Exchange, Minneapolis, is considering leaving for Hollywood soon. Miss Hough won first honors in a beauty contest recently conducted in North Minneapolis.

J. J. Keaton has sold the Lyric Theatre, Presho, S.D., to Charles Blanke. Mr. Keaton had operated the house for four years.

William Hausmann has announced that he will discontinue showing pictures at Churches Ferry, N.D., until spring. He has closed the house because of lack of patronage.

The motion picture theatre in W. O. W. Hall, Gonvick, Minn., which was recently closed by John Brummund will be re-opened by D. B. Green.

The Crystal Theatre, Muscatine, Ia., is to be remodeled and redecorated. A new pipe organ has already been installed.

George Meisner is building a new theatre at Greenfield, Ia., and has decided to name it the New Grand.

The Liberty Theatre, Republican City, Neb., is to be closed, owing to lack of patronage, according to its manager, Mr. Bash.

The motion picture theatre at Hamilton, N.D., has as its projectionist, Curtis Paxman, a thirteen-year-old high school boy. It is believed that he is the youngest person in the State to operate a motion picture machine.

Mrs. T. A. Decker, sister of Morris Abrams, well-known Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exploiteer, died this week in Chicago after an attack of pneumonia. Abrams has had two other sisters die since last February.

The theatre at Merna, Neh., has been remodeled and reopened by S. E. Rodman, of Dunning, Neh.

George W. Johnson, manager of the theatre at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium at Red Wing, Minn., has made a Christmas benefit matinee an annual affair. This year was one of the most successful ever held. A special performance for children is given and they are admitted free if they bring something in the way of food or clothing, which is later distributed to the poor. Mr. Johnson says this feature at the theatre results in much good will and much food for the poor.

W. H. Workman, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch office in Minneapolis, was host to the M.-G.-M. employes at a Christmas banquet given at the Hotel Radisson. L. H. Coen was toastmaster and was a member of the entertainment committee, together with Mr. Workman and Morris Abrams, Exploiteer. There were forty guests present at the dinner, which was followed by a dance.

A new theatre was opened in Minneapolis Christmas Day by the Porter Amusement Company. It is a suburban house, located at Twenty-third Avenue and Twenty-eighth Street. The theatre was the fifth suburban house to be opened in Minneapolis this year, a record for the city. Other theatres which opened their doors in Minneapolis during 1926 are the New Heights, the Rex, the New Logan and the Rohhinsdale.

The Minneapolis branch of Universal received a visit from W. E. Troug, district manager, recently.

ECHOES of the Sunday amusement disturbance that succeeded in getting the city of Irvington front page publicity reached several other New Jersey communities recently when further evidence of hostility between theatre interests and those who are supporting the old New Jersey blue laws came to light this week.

George W. Hosford, proprietor of the Dunellen; his wife, Mrs. Maizia Hosford, cashier, and Carl Knapp, projectionist, were arrested by Chief of Police Mohan shortly after an advertised Sunday performance. The show was stopped and over a hundred patrons had their admission fee returned to them. All three concerned with the operation of the theatre were hailed before the recorder, charged with violating the State Sunday law. A further hearing will be held on January 10.

Over in Red Bank, N.J., in order to get patrons past a couple of dozen constables, the Carlton Theatre management found it necessary to play Santa Claus to the extent of furnishing about two hundred prospective customers with a free motion picture show, thus evading an impending disturbance the sale of tickets would have caused.

Another phase of the Sunday situation occurred at Paterson, N. J., where, it had been announced several times last week, a Sunday performance would be given at one of the Fabian-Stanley theatres. This did not materialize, according to reports. It is said that Jacob Fabian, the Mayor of Paterson, and the chief of police held conference with the result that these men reached a decision not to push matters until the anti-blue law bill now before the State legislature was acted upon in some way.

The recent sale of the northwest corner of Jamaica Avenue and Merrick Road, Jamaica, L.I., for the reported sum of $850,000 to a syndicate of Jamaica business men and the additional purchase of an adjoining piece of property by the same group at a price said to be $110,000, will probably materialize in the erection of a three-thousand-seat theatre which may be leased to the Keith theatre interests, if reports be true. The combined plot has a frontage of 140 feet on Jamaica Avenue and 319 feet on the Merrick Road. Estimated theatre construction cost is $900,000.

The Newburgh Cinema Company, operators of the Park Theatre, Newburgh, N.Y., of which Charles S. Duryea is manager, and which concern practically built up that section of the city, have recently added to their estate holdings by the purchase of a Broadway site on which stands a three-story building.

Castleton Corners is the next community on Staten Island to have a motion picture theatre, according to plans filed for the structure with the Commissioner of the Building Bureau. The site is adjacent to Victory Boulevard. The operators are unnamed at present.

The Sunnyside Theatre, Sunnyside, L.I., the third of a chain of theatres built by Messrs. Grobe and Knobel on Long Island and said to be the finest constructed by this firm to date, held its opening night on December 28. The two other Long Island houses owned by Messrs. Grobe and Knobel are the Jackson and Boulevard. They also operate a New York City circuit.

It is reported that the Washington Theatre, Washington Street, Brooklyn, near Sands Street, has closed indefinitely. It is one of the smaller theatres.

The Terrace Theatre, Yonkers, N.Y., passes this week into the hands of a new owner.

Another local theatre scheduled to change hands in the near future, according to report, is the Gates Theatre, Gates and Reid avenues, Brooklyn.

A rumor circulating around the "Curb" to the effect that two large theatre circuits of New York's East Side were on the point of merging, has been emphatically denied by one who ought to know. "Make your own book."

The Chatham Square Theatre, 5 Chatham Square, New York City, will be closed for several days on account of a recent fire. Lou Goldman is the owner and also operates the Arch Theatre on Southern Boulevard, Bronx.

Herman Goldberg, manager of the Daytona Theatre, Bronx, New York City, reports that Proprietor Goldrich has bought himself a new automobile. We think he said a Chandler.

The boys who comb New Jersey territory for Charles Stombaugh, Pathe-Jersey branch manager, recently presented that genial executive with one of the season's finest bath robes.

Not that this has anything to do with non-theatrical product—but we hear that Andy or Al Sawtell will look over the next edition of Earl Carroll's Vanities when they open in the near future.

The Monroe Theatre, a new house located on Westchester Avenue and owned by Messrs. Geller and Hirsch, will open on Thursday of this week. The Monroe is said to seat around a thousand.

Denver

THE Opera House of Hanna, Wyo., was completely destroyed by fire Christmas Eve an hour after the last show of the evening, an elaborate Christmas entertainment. Tom Love, manager of the theatre, estimates the damage to be not in excess of $20,000.00. Mr. Love immediately came to Denver to make temporary arrangements to open another theatre until a new one could be erected. The Opera House was the only theatre of the town located in one of Wyoming's best producing oil fields. The origin of the fire is not known.

Two other theatre fires last week caused considerable damage chiefly to films. A fire in the Queen Theatre of Denver destroyed a feature film and damaged the interior of the building. A fire broke out in the booth of the Garden Theatre of Lusk, Wyo., destroying several hundred feet of film and damaging the projection equipment to the extent that the theatre will be closed for several days.

Homer Ellison has bought the bulk of the stock of the Federal Theatre Company, thereby coming into possession and the management of the Federal Theatre, large suburban house of North Denver. The new interests took possession January 1st, succeeding Gordon B. Ashworth, who has managed the theatre since its opening several years ago. Mr. Ashworth is chairman of the Denver Board of Arbitration and an active member of the local M.P.T.O.

The Princess Theatre of Meeker, Colo., has again reopened after being compelled to close the second time because of a smallpox epidemic.

H. W. Braly, Paramount manager, has returned to his desk after spending Christmas with his son in San-Diego, Cal. Young Mr. Braly is located in the naval station of the California city. Mr. Braly made the trip by motor.

Sam Cain, new Universal branch manager, spent most of the holidays visiting exhibitors in Wyoming.

Buddy Hooten, live wire manager of the America Theatre, continues to attract considerable attention with a basketball team which he organized and started going early in the season. The America Theatre team has a record of twelve won and two lost.

Chas. R. Gilmour, local Warner Bros. branch manager, is holding a sales meeting during most of the holiday period. All salesmen were called in and every day Mr. Gilmour conducted a conference with every sales representative of the local Warner Bros. office.

Hugh Rennie, new United Artists sales representative, left for his second trip into the territory since returning to Denver, this time to visit his old exhibitor friends in the New Mexico district. Mr. Rennie returned last week from a trip over the entire western slope of Colorado.

J. C. Lang, an attorney of Eads, Colo., has taken over the management of the La Cenima Theatre, formerly operated by Percy Devereaux.

Members of the Boston exchange of Educational were the guests of Branch Manager J. J. Scully at his home in Brookline, where a delightful Christmas party was held. Gifts were exchanged, there was a beautifully decorated Christmas tree and Mark King took the part of Santa Claus. A collation was served by the host and an entertainment was given in which the feature number was by Finn and Waldron, both members of the exchange staff.

Independent Films, Inc., held a party at its Boston exchange during the holiday week, where there was an exchange of gifts, and each member received in addition a gift of gold from the company.

W. F. Leonard, formerly of the Nantasket Theatre at Nantasket, Mass., has taken over the Rialto at Maynard, Mass.

N. J. Trahan, who operates theatres in Manville and Centreville, R.I., celebrated his birthday on Tuesday by paying a visit to Boston's Film Row. Friends learned of the occasion and showered him with gifts, both humorous and useful.

Joseph McConville, head of Independent Films, Inc., in Boston, bought many Christmas gifts on a shopping tour just prior to the holidays and left them in his car while attending a luncheon. Returning to the car he found that thieves had taken all of the gifts, together with some of the accessories of the car. After reporting the theft to the police, McConville made a second tour of the shopping district and renewed the stock of gifts. To date police have been unable to get any trace of the thief.

Pathe exchange in Boston held a Christmas party on Christmas Eve with William O'Brien, who covers Maine for the company, acting as Santa. Gifts of $10 gold pieces were distributed to each member of the staff and there was a grab bag with humorous gifts. A special feature which was greatly enjoyed was a special film made and donated by Jake Coolidge, Pathe News cameraman, showing the entire office force at work. There were vocal numbers by Agnes Crowley and Gerald Swaebe of the force, followed by group singing and dancing and refreshments were served. A beautifully decorated Christmas tree was the central figure of the decorative scheme.

Walter Young of the Strand Theatre at Farmington, Me., was a visitor to Boston's Film Row this week.

The new laboratory of the Pathe News at 36 Melrose Street, Boston, which takes the place of the old quarters on Tremont Street which were badly damaged by fire, are now open. The move by Pathe to bring the laboratory into the Film district is meeting with hearty approval by the exhibitors.

William Bosse of the La Serana Theatre, Providence, R.I., was a visitor to Boston exchanges during the week.

David Grover, cashier of the Pathe exchange at Boston, supplied the fragrant Havanas during the week as the result of the arrival of the second girl at the Grover home.

Christmas Eve was celebrated at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange with a party at which gifts were exchanged, a catered lunch was served and a program of entertainment provided by members of the exchange and an orchestra. M. N. Wolf, branch manager, acted as Santa, but this time the tables were turned and it was Santa who was surprised when the staff presented him with a beautiful Morris chair.

The American Feature Film exchange, Boston, had a Christmas party with decorated tree, exchange of gifts and an entertainment of high order, several numbers of which were given by members of the staff.

First National exchange, Boston, had its annual Christmas exercises Christmas Eve with a beautifully decorated tree and a grab box from which all received gifts. Staff members supplied the entertainment. The staff presented Branch Manager Thomas Spry with a set of platinum studs and cuff links.

South East

THE Christmas spirit pervades Film Row. Innumerable parties and a good time in general is being enjoyed by the Film Fraternity. All companies have held their salesmen in during Christmas and New Year's as it has proven in the past to be very unsatisfactory having salesmen travel through that period, as the returns did not warrant the expenditure.

E. W. Street, who was formerly manager of the Princess Theatre, and connected with the Publix Theatres in Birmingham, Ala., is now manager of the Almo Theatre in Greensboro, N.C. This theatre is owned by the Piedmont Theatres, Inc., of which H. F. Kincey is general manager.

H. B. Wells, manager of the Opera House at Newberry, N. C., was a visitor on Film Row the early part of last week.

Joe Wheeler, owner of the Capitol Theatre in Montgomery, Ala., was recently seen on Film Row.

"Bob" Kelly is receiving congratulations from his friends on his appointment to the managership of the New Orleans office of Enterprise Film Corporation.

J. H. Sapp, head of the Charlotte office of National Theatre Supply Company, stopped over in Atlanta the other day on his way to his home in Birmingham, Ala., to spend the holidays.

Harry G. Ballance, district manager for Paramount, with headquarters in Atlanta, is in Florida this week.

S. E. Mortimore has resigned from Enterprise Film Corporation at New Orleans.

W. W. Anderson, head of the Atlanta branch of Pathe, is on a trip to Chicago.

J. T. Monnier, general manager of the Si-Non Circuit of Demopolis, Ala., has invited a number of his friends to a dove hunt this coming week. South Alabama is something of a huntsman's paradise, with partridges, wild turkeys, ducks, and even black bear and deer aplenty.

All the uptown Birmingham theatres put on gala dress for the holidays. Marquees and lobbies were tastefully decorated with holly, spruce, and cedar with hundreds of colored lights illuminating the setting.

Manager Willis Grist of the Galax declares that what he needs most for New Year's is a set of "bigger and better adjectives" with which to sell pictures.

North and western Alabama theatres are seriously affected by the heavy rains and resulting floods in that section. In northern Alabama the roads are virtually impassable, one town, Huntsville, being completely isolated for the time being. Eleven days of heavy and continuous rainfall have created a serious situation in that section.

Lou B. Remy, Fox southern district manager, paid a flying visit to Birmingham this week where he spent most of the time in conference with Interstate managers.

W. S. Thornton is completing his new theatre at Carbon Hill.

Seattle

I. A. GAGE, manager of the local Educational Exchange, has had his hands full during recent weeks handling the many details entailed in his position of chairman of the Laugh Month Committee of the Pacific Northwest district. His success in staging the month, however, is apparent from the long list of comedy bookings announced by Washington and Oregon theatres for the month. Mr. Gage has had the assistance of L. A. Samuelson, Pathe manager; A. H. Huot, F.B.O. manager; and Mat Aparton, Universal manager, in putting on his campaign.

Manager Huot, of F.B.O., incidentally, returned last week from a visit to his Portland branch, where he spent several days in conference with Hal Moore, manager of the Oregon territory. Mr. Moore was a member of the Portland Laugh Month Committee, along with L. M. Cobbs of the Portland Pathe office and George Jackson of Universal.

Robert Anderson, owner and manager of the Olympic Theatre at Forks, Wash., spent a short time on Film Row last week. He announced that he is at present negotiating for the Grand Theatre at Burlington, now being operated by A. O. Jones.

Dave Bershon, district manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been in this city for the last few days conferring with Manager Ben Fish and Assistant Manager A. J. Sullivan, the latter having just returned from a three-week sales trip into Southern Alaska.

Sam Wineland, one of Seattle's favorite orchestra directors, left this city last week for the Liberty Theatre in Portland, where he will assume the leadership of the orchestra in that house. He was formerly connected with Manager Al C. Raleigh's Coliseum Theatre in this city. Both the Coliseum and Liberty are operated as Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., houses.

W. K. Bloom, sales representative for the Film Booking Offices exchange, blossomed out last week with a brand new Oakland car.

Advice received last week from Butte announced the reopening of the Temple Theatre in that city, under the direction of William Woolfall and John Gavan, well-known Montana exhibitors. The house, with a seating capacity of 1,500, has been entirely remodeled and operates a combined vaudeville and feature picture policy, using the Pantages circuit shows.

Several changes in the personnel and organization of Jack Lannon's Greater Features exchanges were announced last week by Percy Hurst, sales manager, to be effective January 1, 1927. On that date, the present offices at Portland and Butte will be operated as shipping offices only, with the accounting department for the Northwest being handled from the Seattle exchange. At Portland, Walt Millar has resigned as manager; Marvin Dryness will remain as booker and assistant manager at that office. In Butte, M. T. Denton, former booker, will join the sales force for the Montana territory. Ed Shafer will continue in charge of sales in Montana.

Manager J. Lloyd Dearth of Pantages Theatre last week entertained the 200 members of the Seattle Advertising Club at their weekly luncheon with a program of talent gleaned from his current week's program at the theatre.

Edwin Hitchcock, former manager of the Liberty and Rivoli theatres in Portland for Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., was expected to arrive in Seattle this week with the brand new Mrs. Hitchcock, a bride of a few weeks, to assume the management of the United Artists Theatre. The United Artists house, controlled jointly by Pacific Northwest and the United Artists Corporation, was scheduled to open on January 14 under Mr. Hitchcock's direction.

Jack Bower, First National manager, last week was receiving congratulations of his friends on winning the Lieber Month contest in the Western division and copping second place in the national standing, only a few hundredths of a percent behind Buffalo, the prize-winning exchange. The prizes range from $300 for Mr. Bower to a week's salary for the inspectors, and it is reported that they were quite welcome just at this time of year!

Chicago

SHOWS are now being held in the Grand Theatre at Carlinville, Ill., following destruction by fire of the Marvel Theatre of that city. It is probable that a new house will be erected to replace the Marvel.

William Maloney has purchased the Grand Theatre at Eldorado, Ill., from B. O. Lanham. Other theatre transfers reported from Southern Illinois are that of the Community Theatre, at Raymond, Ill., which A. R. McNeal has sold to the Farmers' Theatrical Company, and the Worden at Worden, transferred by Mrs. Frances Pert to Mr. Lanac.

Mrs. Frank Paul, owner of the Marvel Theatre at Carlinville, is scheduled to leave on January 7th for a ten weeks' trip to Miami, Fla.

Divisional Manager Cleve Adams of F.B.O. has had several additional territories put under his supervision and his title has been changed to mid-West sales manager. The exchanges now in his territory include Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Des Moines, Kansas City, Dallas and New Orleans. The change became effective on January 1st.

Jimmy Coston has moved his offices from 845 S. Wabash Avenue, where he has been located for the past two years, to the Standard Oil Building, corner of 9th and Michigan. He is now booking approximately fifty theatres, including many large houses, and his new offices are in keeping with the importance of the circuit he now controls—beautifully furnished and commodious.

C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays organization was a Chicago visitor this week and spent Monday and Tuesday conferring with President Jack Sampson and the other executives of the Chicago Film Board of Trade.

J. H. Goldberg, Booking Manager for West Coast Theatres in Los Angeles, was also visited by Pat Dowling on his Christie Comedy coast to coast tour

Harry C. Miller, a pioneer among Chicago theatre managers, is in charge at the Drake Theatre. This theatre was opened last week by the Ambassador Theatre Corporation, of which William P. McCarthy is president. Nate Leavitt, former musical director of the Ambassador, is now conducting at the Drake, and Gabe Wellner is presiding at the organ.

A movie· star who created a great deal of interest wherever he appeared on Film Row this week was Wolf, the highly educated German police dog, which is scheduled to make some personal appearances in this city. Wolf was chaperoned by his owner and trainer, Jere Evans, who is making his headquarters at the Morrison Hotel.

Ascher Brothers are observing their eighteenth year as Chicago showmen, and one of the important events of the anniversary celebration will be the opening of their new Sheridan Theatre.

James Kozak is the leader of the symphony orchestra and Leo Terry is presiding at the organ console of Clyde Elliott's new Varsity Theatre in Evanston.

B. J. Voght, formerly owner of the Paris Theatre, Paris, Ill., has purchased the Palace Theatre, Crown Point, from Bikas Brothers of Gary.

Christy Brothers of the Elmo Theatre, 2406 W. Van Buren Street, have broken ground for a new eighteen hundred-seat house opposite their present theatre and expect to have the new house ready for opening next Thanksgiving. An interesting feature of this contemplated theatre is that Christy Brothers plan to operate it under the same policy which has made the Elmo successful for the past sixteen years—ten cents admission and daily change of pictures. Upon completion of the new theatre, the Elmo will be closed and converted into a garage or some other business building.

The Crystal Theatre at Waterloo, Iowa, was destroyed by fire on the night of December 27th. Arthur Weld was the manager.

Abe Gumbiner has sold his Bryn Mawr Theatre, 1125 Bryn Mawr Avenue, to Joseph Pastor, owner of the Argmore, Lincoln-Webster and Mohawk theatres.

Manager McLaughlin is putting the finishing touches on his new Glen Theatre at Glen Ellyn and expects to open its doors to the public on the tenth of January.

Frank Cook, owner of the Strand Theatre at Plattsville, Wis., which was burned to the ground on December 13th, has decided to build a new theatre to replace the Strand.

W. J. Gable has closed the Grand Theatre at Lincoln, temporarily, on account of poor business.

Hulquist Brothers, who operate the Chicago on South State Street, and the Illinois in La Grange, have taken over the Rosette Theatre, 2150 W. 22nd Street.

Canada

J. CHRIS GEORGAS, proprietor of the Classic Theatre, Owen Sound, Ontario, was haled to court on a charge of overcrowding the theatre and expected to pay the usual fine for the offense.

When he faced the judge, he was handed a real surprise when the bench declared that he had been at the show on the night in question, had enjoyed it very much and expressed the opinion that it was not surprising that the house was crowded for such an excellent performance.

"I liked it so much that I will let you off this time," declared the judge.

The staffs of three prominent moving picture organizations at Toronto, Ontario, enjoyed a combined Christmas party at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, these being the employes of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Regal Films, Limited and Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited. There was dancing in the Pompeiian Room, a banquet and the presentation of handsome cigarette holders to the men and orders on local merchants for the ladies.

The happiest of New Year celebrations was that which was held back-stage at B. F. Keith's Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, with Manager J. M. Franklin as host-extraordinary. Following the regular evening performance there was a cabaret and amateur show and after this again there was dancing and eats until dawn. Many friends of Mr. Franklin, as well as all employes of the theatre, representatives of other theatres, vaudeville artists, orchestras to the number of two or three, civic officials and yet others enjoyed the function. There were no speeches—just fun.

The Capital Theatre, a downtown house of Ottawa, Ontario, owned for many years by the late Harry Prouse has again passed it to new control. Harry C. Lewis of New York has now taken over the direction of the theatre, which had been under the management of James T. Moxley, manager of the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, since last summer.

The Town Council of Aylmer, Quebec has approved the application for a permit for the construction of a new moving picture theatre in Aylmer to replace the Family Theatre, which was destroyed by fire of unknown origin recently. The new house will be of fireproof construction, the materials to be brick and stucco. The frontage is thirty feet and the depth one hundred feet. The application was made by E. and U. Lavigne, sons of Mrs. Lavigne who owned the previous theatre. Building operations are to start immediately.

The largest Christmas tree on display in Ottawa during Christmas and New Year's weeks was the monster fir, some thirty feet high, which stood at the foot of the grand staircase in the foyer of B. F. Keith's Theatre.

W. H. Golding, manager of the Imperial Theatre, St. John, N.B., and Mrs. Golding have celebrated the [illegible]5th anniversary of their marriage, the occasion being marked by the presentation of a silver tray from the employes of the theatre. The Imperial is owned by E. F. Albee of New York, and Walter Golding has been the manager for years.

The Lyric Theatre, one of the older picture theatres of Hamilton, Ontario, has been sold under the order of the mortgagee, the house being disposed of by auction. It has a capacity of 1,800.

The Weston Theatre Company, Limited, Weston, Ontario, has decided to erect a new neighborhood theatre, with a capacity of 1,000 in Mount Dennis, Ontario, a suburb, the site being at the corner of Bartonville Avenue and Weston Road. J. A. Morrison is president and general manager of the Weston Theatre Company, which erected a new cinema in Weston about one year ago.

J. B. Barron, managing director of the Palace Theatre, Calgary, Alberta, issued very unique holiday greetings in behalf of himself and the staff of the theatre at the holiday season in the form of a display card which bore the special messages from various officials of the Palace.

The card started off with a wish for a prosperous New Year from Mr. Barron and this was followed by greetings from William Palmer, V.C., doorman; Mrs. Bessie Russell and Miss Gertie Smith, cashiers; Alfredo Meunier, musical director, and Leon Asper, assistant director; Charles Anderson and Bert Foster projectionists; James Bird and William Lacey, scenic artists; Thomas D. Cook, stage manager; Clarence L. Dowsley, house manager, and others of the staff.

Albany

THE Universal exchange in this city certainly set the pace for its contemporaries in the way of Christmas observance. It was the only exchange along the Row to be decorated and the only one to hold a Christmas party, with grab bag and dancing and other forms of entertainment. Of course C. R. Halligan was master of ceremonies and it was only natural that Mr. Halligan was presented with a cigar lighter, while H. C. Bissell, the manager, received a smoking set.

Snowy roads are causing some of the exhibitors to take the trains these days, bringing John Mattice and his brother, of the Novelty, in Middleburg, to town. Last week's visitors also included Matt Moran, of Coxsackie, who is making as much off his dances on odd nights as he is from his theatre. Lewis Fischer, of Fort Edward, was also in Albany.

Alex Herman, manager for Pro-Dis-Co, and his brother, Leon, journeyed down to Hartford for over Christmas, spending a day or two with their mother.

The theatres in Cairo and in Paris, the latter being Paris, N.Y., have closed for the winter, a bit discouraged from the extreme cold weather and heavy snows of the last two or three weeks.

Earl Leonard, in charge of the Albany branch of the State Motion Picture Commission, was along the Row last week.

Edward Hayes had a delightful surprise the day before Christmas, when he found a twenty-dollar gold piece on his desk at the Pathe Office. The gift came from his employes and what could be more natural than that Mr. Hayes should return the compliment with candy for the young ladies. Oh, yes, one thing more. One young lady in the Pathe exchange, who exacted a promise that her name would not be revealed, received a diamond ring in her stocking.

About everyone along Albany's Film Row was over in Schenectady on Monday night, December 27, attending the opening of Proctor's new million-dollar theatre, which will be managed by Ackerman Gill. Jake Golden, manager of the Griswold in Troy, handled the publicity in connection with the opening and did an excellent job.

The regular meeting of the Albany Film Board of Trade was held last week, but no business of importance was transacted. Many of the managers were out of town.

J. H. MacIntyre, who resigned several months ago as local manager for Famous Players, finds Detroit much to his liking, according to letters that have reached here. Mr. MacIntyre is connected with the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in the automobile city.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Meigs, the former connected with the Pathe exchange in this city, spent Christmas Day in New York City. Mr. and Mrs. John Bulwinkel, John being manager for First National here, also spent the day in the big town. Before Mr. Bulwinkel departed, he tucked away a pen and pencil and likewise a cigar lighter that had been presented to him by his employees. Mr. Bulwinkel gave the young women in the office candy, while the salesmen drew down ties that made every other man along Film Row green with envy.

There is a possibility that Schenectady may have still another theatre. Feldman and Son, who appear to have been doing very well with the Lincoln since they acquired it, are now talking of erecting another theatre.

William Murray, who is doing the booking for Odd Fellows Hall in Willsboro, has been in bed for the past six weeks, but is now reported as being on the road to recovery.

George Robidoux, who runs the theatre in Peru, is mourning the loss of his wife, who died two or three weeks ago, following a brief illness.

P. B. Gordon, owner of the Photoplay Theatre in Keeseville, is certainly an optimist. It is nothing uncommon these days for the mercury around Keeseville to drop to twenty below. Despite this fact, Mr. Gordon believes that summer will come, just as it did a year ago, and in fact for quite a few years, and so he is building a number of small cottages that will be used by campers next summer.

S. E. Feld and C. N. Johnston, salesmen for Pro-Dis-Co out of Albany, are telling a thrilling tale these days of having been stuck in the snowbanks of northern New York with the mercury at thirty below, and then being forced to summon aid, their car being eventually pulled from a drift by a team of horses.

It is natural for a woman to shop. This may explain why Margaret Sullivan, who books for the San Souci in Watervliet, takes her time and as a result always shows a bang up good program.

Pat Quinlan, owner of the Ideal in Chateaugay, plans to leave soon for the West Coast, where he will spend three months, during which time he hopes to visit a number of the studios.

Harry Hellman, owner of the Royal in Albany, N.Y., blossomed forth last week with all the appearance of a college boy in a coonskin overcoat presented him for Christmas by his wife. Mrs. Hellman also presented her son with a similar coat.

Dave Seymour, who recently resigned as manager of the Pontiac Theatre in Saranac Lake, is a lucky sort of a fellow, for within the next few days he will leave for West Palm Beach, to remain for the rest of the winter.

George Dwore, associated with his father in the Capitol and Cameo theares in Schenectady, has been confined to his home for the past two or three weeks on account of illness. He is once more back on the job.

There is a report along Film Row to the effect that Harry Seed, manager for Warner Brothers here, is no longer receiving collect telegrams. The explanation is entirely up to Mr. Seed.

Harry Lazarus, of Kingston, never waits until the last minute to do anything. When he heard that there was a possibility of a small structure being erected next door to the big handsome theatre he is building, he hurried to Albany and blocked the proposition.

L. N. Sanschagrin, of Saranac Lake, who runs a house with about 450 seats, is now talking of enlarging the same so that it will have a seating capacity of about 1,000 persons.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, received only two neckties this past Christmas, which may acount for the pleasant smile Mr. Roberts is wearing these days. House employees presented him with a mantle clock and a fountain pen.

Mrs. William Rose, wife of the manager of Gardner Hall in Troy, died last week after a brief illness. Burial was made in Watertown. Mr. and Mrs. Rose were married only last February. Harry Rose, a brother, who is manager of the King Theatre in Troy, accompanied William on the sad trip to Watertown.

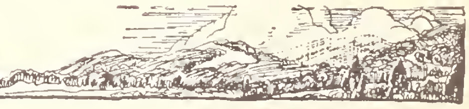
Mrs. Walter Roberts, of Troy, has been entertaining her father, Simon Oppenheimer, of New York City.

When the employees of the Lincoln Theatre in Troy heard Ben Stern, the manager, say that he had lost the fountain pen which they gave him last year, they lost no time in presenting him with a new one this Christmas, Al Lemay making the little spech as the pen was handed over.

Jake Rosenthal, owner of the Rose in Troy, was very much pleased last week when the Salvation Army informed him that the collections at his house to aid the city's poor, had exceeded the amounts taken in at the kettles.

Jacob Rosenthal, proprietor of the Rose Theatre, Troy, N.Y., was presented with a fine traveling bag as a Christmas gift from his employes. Proud as a peacock, Jake set out for New York, where he spent a week with his daughter Celia.

Cincinnati



THE new Clinton Theatre, one of the houses in the Wm. James' chain at Columbus, was formally dedicated on New Year's Day. The new house is located on North High Street, between Brighton Road and North Broadway, has a seating capacity of 1500, is of Adam design, with an exterior of gray pressed brick and light gray terra cotta trim, and thoroughly modern in every detail. Robert Glick, who has been manager of the James' Vernon Theatre the Fred S. Meyer, formerly managpast year, will manage the new Clinton. Another James house, the Eastern, is nearing completion, and will open shortly. It is located at East Main Street and Berkely Road, and is likewise a 1500 seat house. John T. McCormick, who has been associated with the James' ing director of the Palace Theatre, interest for some time, will be manager. The total cost of the two houses is reported as $600,000. This gives the Wm. James circuit a total of eight houses in Columbus.

Word has been received from Hamilton, Ohio, that he has been made managing director of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee.

Joe H. Mayer, publicity and exploitation director of the Palace Theatre, Hamilton, spent a part of his Christmas vacation in bed as the result of a severe attack of throat trouble.

The Imperial Theatre Company has been incorporated at Zanesville, Ohio, by Sam. E. Lind, Robert T. Irvine, Albert C. White and others.

A new house will be erected at Woodmont Street and Montgomery Road, Cincinnati, by the Montgomery Amusement Co., at an estimated cost of $75,000.

DEVELOPING AND PRINTING MOTION PICTURE FILM

Salt Lake City

THE new fire alarm system connecting the film exchanges direct with fire headquarters has just been installed, according to the report of Branch Manager L. J. McGinley of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange, who returned last week from a trip to Logan, Utah. Frank J. Murphy of the Butte Paramount office, with Mrs. Murphy, spent the holiday week in this city.

A number of the local exchanges held Christmas celebrations December 24th here, with several of the offices having Christmas trees and even Santa Claus.

L. T. Fidler, manager here for Columbia Pictures, is leaving for the Idaho branch immediately after the first of the year.

Mell Stringham, operating the Colonial Theatre at Ogden, Utah, is spending a few days in this city this week conferring with exchange managers.

It is announced that Mr. Littlejohn has purchased both the Lyric and the Star theatres of Price, Utah, within the past week. The Lyric formerly was owned by Nick Salevurakis; the Star having been owned by the Georgeites Brothers.

George A. Homrig of Midvale, Utah, has purchased the Iris Theatre at Murray, which house they expect to open on New Year's Eve. Homrig is also the owner of the Hub Theatre at Midvale.

Walter S. Rand, exchange manager here for United Artists, spent the holidays in San Francisco.

E. Rowel, Special Home Office Representative for United Artists, left the local exchange after having spent about three weeks here.

H. A. Dunklee, Warner Brothers sales representative, came in a few days ago from the Idaho country, and Ed. C. Mix returned from Southern Utah.

Jesse Soloman, formerly manager of the Goldwyn Salt Lake office, is returning to this city to cover Montana for Warner Brothers. Dunklee will henceforth make the Utah section, and Mix has been assigned to the Idaho branch.

Paul Burger, assistant to General Manager Fiest for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is to arrive in this city this week for a stay of four or five days.

Russell Egner, special home office representative for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is in Salt Lake for a few days.

James Allen Epperson, exchange manager here for Pathe, was presented with a beautiful gold fountain pen and an eversharp pencil as a Xmas gift from the employes of this exchange. All of the employes here have been presented with a ten dollar gold piece at Christmas time.

Walter Mendenhall, owner of the Poise Theatre Company, at Boise, Idaho, was recently in this city on a buying trip.

Vete Stewart, who has been in the First National office for a few days, will leave after the first of the year for his territory in Montana. Claude Hawkes has left for Idaho.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures exchange of this city, is also leaving for Idaho.

W. J. Heineman, Universal manager here, returned recently from a trip as far as Richfield, Utah. Heineman was hit by an automobile while driving in his own car here a few days ago, and narrowly escaped serious injury. At the Christmas party held here this week, Cashier C. W. Peck, Jr., acted as Santa Claus, and a wonderful time is said to have been had by all.

Kansas City

"THE most successful Christmas" was the manner in which Kansas City newspapers summed up the activities of Kansas City motion picture theatres in contributing towards Christmas relief for needy families and children.

At the Newman Theatre a total of 1,000 toys were turned over to the Mayor's Christmas Tree Association for children, that theatre, through Bruce Fowler, manager, having charged toys for admission on three successive Monday afternoons. More than 1,000 children were guests of the Liberty Theatre, through Samuel Carver, manager, Christmas morning, while Bebe Daniels telegraphed from New York to adopt one of the Kansas City Star's Christmas families, paying the bill for a Christmas dinner.

Under the supervision of the West States Amusement Company, the Garden Theatre of Kansas City, a large and comparatively new house which has been dark for some time, opened Saturday afternoon as a first-run motion picture and vaudeville house. The company is operated by Dan McCoy and J. F. Lynch. The company plans to operate a chain of theatres which will reach from Kansas City to the West Coast.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: J. R. Burford, Arkansas City, Kans.; Frank Whittan, Bonner Springs, Kans.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; C. A. Rehm, Baxter Springs, Kans.; L. Brueninger, Topeka, Kans.; S. E. Wilhoit, Grand, Springfield, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kans.

Some black eyes are due on Kansas City's movie row ere long. The Film Inn has installed a punching bag and a set of boxing gloves for "tired business men" and several exhibitors already are looking for certain film salesmen.

S. E. Wilhoit, veteran exhibitor of southwest Missouri, has taken over the management of the Grand Theatre, Springfield, Mo. Mr. Wilhoit formerly was connected with the Jefferson Theatre of Springfield.

The Orpheum and Main Street theatres, Kansas City, gave a supper dance Saturday night for performers, persons attached to the theatres and their friends.

William Powell paused long enough in his work as a film bad man to come from New York to Kansas City to eat Christmas dinner with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Powell of Kansas City. He departed Monday morning for New York.

Max Stahl, special Educational home office representative, visited the Kansas City exchange this week.

A. S. Feinberg, sales manager for Nu-Air, also paid the Kansas City office of that company a visit.

Miss A. L. Menagh, secretary of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, departed for Des Moines, Iowa, for a visit with her parents.

J. E. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was a Kansas City visitor.

J. A. Masters, F.B.O. office manager, went to Des Moines, Iowa, last week, where he installed a new office system.

Jack Auslet, film veteran, has returned to work for the Pathe exchange, covering northern Kansas on the all-comedy program.

D. Sidney, manager for First National Screen Service, left for Chicago, to be gone over the holidays.

Joe Silverman, president of the Independent Film Corporation, made a Christmas prediction that 1927 would surpass 1926 in film business.

John Nolan, Fox branch manager, left for New York, his home, to spend the holidays.

Oklahoma

CREIGHTON and Williams of Cherokee have sold their Majestic Theatre to Tom Lewis, according to reports.

Bob Montgomery of Perry has sold his interest in the Lyric Theatre to his partner, J. D. McCollum. The Lyric has recently been enlarged by extending the building back twenty feet, adding a stage and 150 seats extra. New scenery has been installed so that the Lyric now is ready to show road attractions along with pictures. Mr. Montgomery will devote all his time to his new theatre that is being installed at Ponca City.

Claude Leachman, manager of the Aggie Theatre at Stillwater, was host at a Christmas supper given the Aggie's employees and visiting actors. Preceding the supper the guests gathered around the big Christmas tree and received gifts from its heavy boughs.

Charles Brent, superintendent of the schools at Clayton, Okla., has purchased the Liberty Theatre at Bennington from Mrs. C. H. White.

E. E. Lutz, who owns a theatre in Borger and Holliday, Tex., was in town Tuesday making purchases for his several theatres in the neighbor State.

Roy Wellman is enlarging his Victory Theatre at Shawnee to take care of increased business. Mr. Wellman is extending the Victory back twenty feet or so in order to get extra seating capacity.

The Empress Theatre at Mangum was sold to Edward Kadane of Frederick, Okla., on December 18th. Mr. Kadane purchased the Empress from Messrs. Slayton and Summers.

Charlie Milton, well known in film circles in Oklahoma, was here for the holidays. Mr. Milton now has several road shows in the State of Idaho.

The National Theatre Equipment Company has moved into its new offices at 516 West Grand Avenue, Oklahoma City. This company will hold a formal opening of its new home on January 25th.

New Year's night the four companies that have moved into the new film building at 700 West Grand Avenue held an open house which included an informal banquet and dancing. Every one connected with the film exchanges, as well as all the exhibitors in this territory, were invited and the new building was crowded on that night. Griffith Brothers Amusement Company, Anderson Theatre Supply Co., Educational Film Exchange and Liberty-Specialty were the hosts.

Juvenile Movie Matinees at Height of Season

Community Enterprise Fosters Goodwill Toward Cinemas-- Movement Gains Influence

THE season of children's Saturday morning matinees is now in full swing at the cinemas of the country, and the number of houses which have instituted these special performances assumes a greater number than any previous year. The Saturday morning matinee movement, launched on its present extensive scale by the Hays organization, unquestionably has become the most potent community enterprise for the extension of the goodwill and prestige of motion pictures and the exhibitors of the country.

The majority of the leading theatres offering these special Saturday morning shows have the assistance and co-operation of some civic or social organization in the preparation of programs. In most instances committees appointed by these co-operating bodies take over the responsibility of approving the programs—a responsibility of great import to the theatre man, who though in many cases blameless, is not infrequently made the target of attacks by those cranks from which, unfortunately, no community either large or small is entirely free.

The excellent results in the way of increased goodwill and a more active community interest on the part of prominent groups which exhibitors have obtained through their special morning matinees for children, makes it entirely worth while for showmen to introduce these programs, provided, of course, his local situation is conducive to its success financially and socially. There is but one real pitfall, that being the selection of pictures suitable to the occasion—and the occasion in this sense is not entirely restricted to the tastes and opinions of the youngsters for whom the entertainments are designed. The show must also be free from anything that the most sensitive soul could consider "improper" for children. Caution on this score will prove a safeguard to the exhibitor.

Selecting Pictures

To illustrate the "kick-back" that may result from showing pictures not selected with the greatest of care, there is at hand a newspaper clipping from a leading journal in a Middle West city. The photoplay editor takes to task a theatre manager who gave a special children's matinee. The editor retails the complaint of a parent who took his boy to the show, at which a picture featuring a well-known canine actor was the leading attraction. Instead of a film devoted to wholesome adventure, the picture, the parent declared, was full of thrills designed for unwholesome appetites. The editor's remarks severely criticize the theatre, and there is no telling how harmful to the theatre this unfortunate occurrence proved. On the face of it the exhibitor probably was as surprised at the unwholesome incidents of the picture—if there really were any—as the irate parent, for in booking a film starring an animal actor he no doubt felt that he had succeeded in getting just the sort of entertainment for the youth of his community.

The Goodwill Harvest

There's the dark side of the picture. Now turn to a more pleasant view of the matter, and a view which illustrates the important place which the theatre can take in a community through the medium of special morning matinees for children.

Recently there was announced a series of Saturday morning matinees for children at the Lyric Theatre in Birmingham, Ala. The matinees are to be given under the auspices of the Newcomb Alumnae Association of that city. In a strong editorial commending the movement, "The Birmingham News" pays high tribute to pictures and appeals to parents for their co-operation.

"Whatever contributes to the growth of imagination in the minds of children develops the inner life of childhood and should be patronized by the parents of this generation," the editorial declares. And further on is this fine tribute to the pictures, conveying a thought which not only induces a high regard for the special children's showings, but places the motion picture, the entertainment which the exhibitor relies upon to make his enterprise a profitable one, on a basis of ethical as well as entertainment value for the adult as well as the child: "Whatever is done that is calculated to lift the minds of children out of this sordid and materialistic age and carry them, even for little whiles, into Wonderland, where elves and pixies dwell, is giving them gifts whose value cannot be reckoned in terms of shining pennies and silver money, or in paper or gold."

Equipment

Air Conditioning

By P. M. ABBOTT

ACCORDING to refrigerating equipment manufacturers and air conditioning engineers, theatres are going to turn the tables on hot weather this year. Instead of a dull business season from June until October, the cool, refreshing auditoriums of a fairly representattive portion of our better houses will prove the most comfortable places in cities, and with this attraction, no need to predict box-office results.

The few companies that are specialinzing in theatre cooling and air conditioning, report a big increase in the number of new installations that will start operations this summer over those initiated last season. These manufacturers and engineers find, from their studies, that every section of the country is going in for cooled theatres. Further, that the more theatres there are in any given locality that employ refrigeration, the easier it is to sell new installations.

Our prediction is that within the next five years practically all first-class theatres will be equipped with cooling systems. Also, many of the better smaller houses will enjoy this improved equipment. When, and if, our forecast becomes a fact, then the picture industry will have received one of the biggest boosts of its career.

In further regard for the prospects of theatres with capacities ranging from nine to twelve hundred seats, developments now give promise of the early perfection of equipment and systems that will perform efficiently and be within price range of these theatres. In fact, a few one-thousand-seat houses are today proving that cooling is a sound investment.

Another point, those exhibitors who have in mind installing theatre cooling to be in operation this coming summer must act immediately, for the installation of air conditioning equipment takes considerable time.

We wish to congratulate those who have made such plans, as they are, so to speak, getting the jump on the field.

Publix Shows Open in Houston

Metropolitan Theatre Joins Presentation Circuit

The new Metropolitan Theatre in Houston joined the circuit of Publix de luxe theatres presenting programs combining pictures, music features and stage numbers, on Christmas Day with an elaborate inaugural bill. The screen feature was "Stranded in Paris."

Surrounding features of the bill were a stage presentation titled, "The Inaugural Banquet," first of the Publix unit shows which will play the house regularly. The Metropolitan has an orchestra of twenty musicians, under the direction of Alexander Keese, for a long time conductor of the orchestra at the Palace in Dallas and later at the Newman Theatre, in Kansas City.

That a new element of competition among Houston cinemas has been introduced with the launching of the Publix house is made plain by the new policy inaugurated last week by the management of the Isis Theatre, which presented the first of a series of unit shows which Fred Cannata, manager of the house, will offer each week in conjunction with feature photoplays. The Isis recently introduced a "new idea" orchestra, under the direction of Pedro Avelar. The unit show at the Isis last week was the "Frivolity Girls," a vaudeville flash act. "The Blonde Saint" was the screen attraction.

Stage Acts Gaining Favor in Albany and Troy

Presentation acts appear to be finding favor with the theatre owners in Albany and Troy, although not being featured to any great extent as yet. At the Mark Strand in Albany, during the past week, Phil Romano's orchestra was used along with the regular picture program. There were special performances at the Mark Strand as well as at the Mark Ritz on New Year's Day.

At the Griswold Theatre in Troy, it was found that a recent "Black Bottom" contest for cash prizes had panned out so well that it is now proposed to stage a "Black Bottom vs. Charleston" contest to run for at least six weeks.

Demand for Center Seats Or Money Back

A new annoyance to theatre managers in Albany is assuming epidemic proportions among the flappers of the city, many of whom are now demanding that they be given seats in the center of the house or their money back. The young women do not seem to recognize the fact that with seats it is a case of first come, first served. At one of the theatres, the manager is now cheerfully refunding the price of admission to the flappers rather than argue matters with them, and also in the hopes of doing away with what appears to be the latest fad.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

RAY M. HENDRY of Salt Lake has succeeded Emmett Sorg as manager of the Paramount Theatre in Ogden, Utah. Hendry is 21 years old and one of the youngest men holding a manager's post. Sorg resigned as manager of the Paramount to take a position in the studios in Hollywood.

JACK H. ROTH, for thirteen years connected with the theatrical business in Kansas City, has taken over his new duties as manager of Loew's theatre in Nashville, succeeding Howard Price Kingsmore, who is now managing Loew's State in St. Louis.

MARVIN C. PARK is now manager of the Beverly Theatre, Beverly Hills, Calif. He succeeded E. S. Kuykendall, recently appointed manager of Loew's State in Los Angeles.

RICHARD A. MITCHELL, until recently in charge of the western tours of "Ben-Hur," is now manager of the Forum Theatre in Los Angeles, succeeding John P. Goring. The Forum is now operating under a policy of showing super pictures on the two-a-day basis.

Circle Theatre, Portland, Celebrates 14th Birthday

The Circle Theatre in Portland, Ore., celebrated its fourteenth birthday during the week of December 1. G. T. Woodlaw has owned and operated the playhouse for the past thirteen years. Previously, Woodlaw operated several neighborhood houses. F. M. Mamburger is manager and W. A. Whitten is house manager.

The Circle is perhaps the only motion picture theatre on the coast in which the employees share part of the profits. It was the first house to play midnight shows. It now runs until 4 a.m.

Fred Miller, whose latest achievement in showmanship is the attractive and flourishing Carthay Circle Theatre in Los Angeles, was one of the "welcome home" committee which greeted Pat Dowling when the latter completed his cross-continental motor tour in the interests of Educational releases

Crandall Employee Fund Benefit

Elaborate Program Planned for Performance at Earle

A giant benefit performance is being planned by Harry M. Crandall, of the Stanley-Crandall Company, of Washington, to be given in the Earle Theatre, beginning at 11:30 P.M. on Friday night, January 21st. The purpose of this benefit will be to supply an emergency fund for local use by the Stanley-Crandall Company's employee beneficial association.

The program to be presented is under the supervision of John J. Payette, supervisor of theatres for the Stanley-Crandall theatres. One price of admission will prevail, with all tickets selling for $1.00. It is planned to enlist a majority of the principal players appearing in Washington the week in which the benefit is held, as well as to import from nearby cities others interested in the cause for which the benefit is to be given.

Annual Xmas Stage Feature Staged at Newman

The Newman Theatre last week presented "Toyland Phantasy," staged by Marie Kelly and performed by pupils of her dancing school, as one of the features of the bill presented for Christmas week at the Kansas City house, now operated by Publix. The Phantasy has come to be an annual feature at the Newman, and it was produced this year despite the fact that the program also had a Publix unit show, "Barnyard Follies," booked as the stage presentation. The local production drew its usual quota of enthusiasts.

The Newman's program was headed by "Stranded in Paris," the photoplay attraction. Sigmund Boguslawski was the guest conductor of the orchestra which recently was presided over by Alexander Keese, who is now at the new Metropolitan in Houston.

Cold Spell Deals Blow to Theatres in Northwest

The coldest weather for early December which the Northwest has experienced for many years dealt a severe blow to the theatre business. Few of the Minneapolis theatres escaped a deficit for one week, one house reported taking in only $1.05. In the smaller towns many theatres have closed for the winter, and Minneapolis and St. Paul have an unusual number of dark houses.

Malden Theatre Announces Change of Policy

The Orpheum Theatre, Malden, Mass., one of the Ramsdell Brothers' houses, last week announced a change of policy under which the former two weekly changes of programs would be supplanted by three weekly changes. New programs will begin Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. A reduction in prices also was announced, both for matinee and evening shows.

2 B'way Cinemas Repeat Stage Shows

Strand and Capitol Presentations Held Over for 2nd Week

STAGE presentations at leading Broadway cinemas reached a new distinction this week with the repetition, owing to popular response, at the Strand and Capitol theatres of their Christmas Week stage numbers. The hold-over engagement is not rare in cases where the entire bill is repeated, but it seldom occurs that an entire presentation is given a second week when the feature picture is changed.

The great enthusiasm which greeted "The Toy Maker," a ballet designed by Chester Hale, at the Capitol and the response accorded The Yuletide Frolic at the Strand decided Major Bowes to retain the Capitol number as his leading divertissement on the current program, headed by "A Little Journey" as the screen attraction, and Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand, to hold over the Frolic, with a few substitutions in the specialties included in it as the presentation for "The Lady in Ermine," this week's film feature at the Strand.

The Strand has added Bernardo De Pace, "wizard of the mandolin," Fay Adler and Ted Bradford, the famous Trado Twins, to the personnel of the stage performers appearing in the Yuletide Frolic. The Capitol's current bill offers, in addition to "The Toy Maker," an Italian cycle, featuring Tchaikowsky's "Capriccio Italien," by the orchestra, and a group of Folk Songs by Carlo Ferretti, baritone, and the Capitol Quartet.

Sword Duel Climax of Stage Act for "Bardelys"

There was an unusual punch to the atmospheric prologue which Director John Arthur presented during the week of December 13 at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, for "Bardelys the Magnificent." Following the staging of a court scene the climax came in a sword duel in costume similar to that in the picture, between Prince Volkonsky and Jaap Mees, the latter the champion fencer of Holland.

Van and Schenck at Metropolitan

Van and Schenck are appearing as the main stage attraction this week at the Metropolitan Theatre in Washington, D.C. The famous team are making three appearances daily.

"Snow White" Pantomime at Eastman Theatre

The Eastman Theatre, in Rochester, provided a presentation of special appeal to children during Christmas week. This was a ballet pantomime based on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." The ballet was arranged by Ronny Johansson, with music by Benjamin Machan. Principals who appeared in the presentation were Thelma Biracree, Marion Tefft and Harold Kolb.

"Twinkletoes," the Colleen Moore vehicle, was the screen attraction. "Southern Rhapsody" was the overture by the Eastman Theatre Orchestra. A topical reel and Hy Mayer's screen novelty, "Tripping the Town," completed the bill.

Stage Presentations Prove Draw in Salt Lake City

The Paramount Empress Theatre, in Salt Lake City, is featuring its orchestra each week in connection with presentation acts, the musicians appearing on the stage. A noticeable improvement in business has followed the introduction of these stage features.

The Victory Theatre has also introduced the practice of having the orchestra play from the stage. Last week the Victory offered Smith and Crockett, dancers, as a special attraction in conjunction with showings of "Stranded in Paris."

"Pompadour's Fan" Current Paramount Presentation

John Murray Anderson is the producer of "Pompadour's Fan," a fantasy staged in the period costumes of Louis XV, the leading stage presentation on the current bill at the Paramount Theatre, New York. The screen feature is "Hotel Imperial," in which Pola Negri is starred.

The presentation features selections of Chopin's compositions and as its most spectacular effect a mammoth fan on which the specialty entertainers appear. Ray Alvino and banjo boys are an added stage number of the program. The balance of the program is made up of a Pathe hand-colored scenic entitled, "All the World's A Garden," a topical reel, Jesse Crawford's organ solo, and an overture by the Paramount Orchestra, which plays Liszt's "Second Hungarian Rhapsody."

Albany Theatre Organists Switch to New Houses

There certainly appears to be an epidemic of changes among the organists in Albany, N.Y. Chester Dana, of the Eagle Theatre, has now gone with the Mark Ritz, succeeding Stephen Boisclair, who has gone with Proctor's new house in Schenectady. Edward Fitzgerald, from the Clinton Square, who was slated to succeed James Gilmore at the Leland, has gone with Proctor's Grand, and Carl Kraft, who was relief organist, is now presiding at Clinton Square.

18,000 Children Guests of Crandall Theatres

An estimate by officials of the Stanley-Crandall Company, operating a chain of theatres in Washington, places the number of children entertained as guests of the organization during the Christmas holidays at 18,000. Christmas celebrations were held in all of the company's neighborhood theatres on Christmas morning and during the week between Christmas and New Year's. Four tons of candy and thousands of toys were distributed free to boys and girls at these performances.

Cleveland Cinemas Report Good Holiday Business

Holiday business at the Cleveland movie theatres was good on the average. All of the towntown houses reported capacity business for matinees. But the evening business was no so good. This was due to the big snow storm that hit the city Christmas night.

St. Petersburg Opening a Gala Event

Premiere of E. J. Spark's Alcazar Turns Out to be a Regular Christmas Party

CHILDREN from every section of the city joined in the dedication which marked the opening of the Alcazar Theatre, the newest E. J. Sparks enterprise, at 10 o'clock Christmas morning. In accordance with the custom that has obtained in the various theatre enterprises of E. J. Sparks, the occasion was turned into a Christmas tree party for the less fortunate children of the community. Not only were those children the invited guests of the management, but their transportation to and from the theatre was arranged by a group of business men who joined with Mr. Sparks in making the affair a real Christmas celebration.

A gorgeously laden and brilliantly lighted Christmas tree, arranged by Mrs. Sparks for the delectation of the youngsters, bore gifts for every child attending the performance. The party closed with the distribution of these gifts by Santa Claus himself.

Located on Central Avenue, near Ninth Street, the Alcazar is approached through a broad aisle of attractive shops in the theatre arcade. The theatre is built on a lot 250 feet deep and has a seating capacity of 800, all on one floor. In planning the theatre the architect made provision for a balcony that will add 400 seats to the present capacity and it is expected that this balcony will be swung within the next year or two. The building is of concrete and absolutely fire-proof.

The interior decoration is in Spanish effect, with wall base of tile in brilliant colors, blue and red predominating. The upper walls are in dull bronze.

The projection room is equipped with Power's projectors with Peerless reflector arc lamps; the handsome stage draperies are from the Lee Lash Studios; American blower fans provide for ventilation. The latest model nine-spring upholstered chairs from the Steel Furniture Company are installed in the auditorium. The equipment throughout was purchased from National Theatre Supply Company, through that company's southern division offices in Atlanta.

Mr. Sparks and B. B. Garner, of Lakeland, who is interested with Mr. Sparks in the Alcazar Theatre, were in St. Petersburg for the opening.

M. F. Estes is resident manager of the Alcazar. He came to Florida in 1921 from Atlanta, where he was associated with Southern Enterprises, Inc., for several years. Since coming to Florida with the E. J. Sparks Enterprises Mr. Estes has managed theatres in Gainesville, St. Augustine, Fort Pierce, and Arcadia, and was associated with H. B. Vincent in the five Orlando theatres which Mr. Sparks subsequently sold to Universal.

Mr. Sparks came to Florida 18 years ago and became associated with S. A. Lynch, first as manager, and later as director and stockholder. Four years ago he severed his connection with Mr. Lynch and went into business for himself. He developed one of the finest circuits of theatres in Florida and a few years later sold seventeen of the group to Universal.

Retaining a few of his holdings which formed the nucleus of a new circuit he renewed his activity in expansion and development and has acquired several of the most attractive theatres in the State for this new group. Mr. Sparks makes his home in Jacksonville, where executive headquarters of the E. J. Sparks Enterprises are maintained in the Palmer Building.

Hornbrook to Supervise U. A. Construction

FURTHER activity in the construction of the United Artists chain of theatres was indicated recently when Lou Anger, vice-president and general manager, announced the appointment of Ralph D. Hornbrook, chief engineer of West Coast Theatres, Inc., as consulting engineer to supervise construction of theatres in the chain, the next to be a large house located at Ninth and Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. Hornbrook has been chief engineer for West Coast Theatres, Inc., for the past three and one-half years and it is understood that his resignation from that company took place during December, 1926. Construction activities will be directed from his office in Los Angeles.

Buys Equip't for Grand at Greenfield, Iowa

George Misner, of the new Grand Theatre at Greenfield, Ia., has bought a cooling system, one hundred light fixtures and small equipment amounting to $600 from the National Theatre Supply Co. for his house, which will open on January 14. Mr. Misner will be in opposition to the Lyric Theatre at Greenfield, a small house on a second floor. The new theatre on which Mr. Misner has announced that he will spend close to $40,000 is to be one of the prettiest houses in southern Iowa. The theatre will seat 450 and is a brick construction, with a small but effective lobby. The stage will be constructed so that it can be used for small stage presentations.

F. C. Leavitt Announces New Rochester Theatre

Frank C. Leavitt, of Rochester, N.Y., owner of Leavitt's Theatre and several other houses, has announced that he will build a 1400-seat playhouse on the Wallace estate, Rochester. The location is on the main highway and special consideration will be given to space for the parking of automobiles. Work is expected to start April 1st.

Rogers and McFarling to Build at Cairo, Ill.

Rogers and McFarling, who own and operate a chain of theatres in southern Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas, have let contracts for the erection of a new house at Cairo, Ill. The seating capacity will run around 1,500 and the estimated cost of construction is reported to be $150,000. Jameson and Nelson of Paducah, Ky., are the architects.

Let Contract on Texas House

Contract has been let for the erection of the Jefferson Amusement Company's new theatre at Beaumont, Tex., estimated to involve an expenditure for site, building and equipment of $800,000.

Favorable Reaction

The constantly increasing use of Eastman Panchromatic Negative Film by producers means more and more pictures with blues, reds, yellows and greens in their true black and white relationship.

Effects unobtainable with ordinary negative are usual with "Pan". And the difference—the superiority—of prints on Eastman Positive from "Pan" negatives is readily apparent on the screen.

Such an obvious—and important—improvement in the art cannot fail to have favorable box office reaction.

Signs Two-Year Contract

B. F. Shearer to Direct for National Supply in 11 Pacific Coast States

B. F. SHEARER, for the last several years head of the B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle and Portland, who sold out his business recently to the National Theatre Supply Company, announced last week that he has entered into a two-year contract with the National Company, effective January 1, 1927. Under the new contract, Mr. Shearer will maintain his own organization and will personally retain the title of Director of Interior Decorating Department for the National Theatre Supply Company in eleven Pacific Coast and Northwest States, including Washington, Oregon, California, Montana, Idaho, New Mexico, Arizona, Wyoming, Nevada, Utah and Colorado.

Mr. Shearer will retain his former associates in the present organization. H. H. Randall will remain in the Northwest territory, C. Frank Harris will assist Mr. Shearer throughout the entire eleven States, and A. M. Larsen will remain as assistant manager in charge of decorating. In addition, Mr. Shearer is adding to his staff Mr. Charles E. Feldman, former branch manager for First National in Seattle, who will assume the management of the Denver and Salt Lake City territory. General offices and headquarters will be maintained in Seattle, and a new building is now under construction near Film Row in the Northwest metropolis to house all the branches of the National Company's service, now spread out into four separate locations in Seattle.

Felt Brothers Will Erect 2,000 Seat Theatre in Phila.

A NEW photoplay theatre to be known as the Levering is to be erected at the southeast corner of Leverington and Ridge avenues, Roxborough, Philadelphia, for Felt Bros., owners and operators, in accordance with drawings and specifications prepared by The Ballinger Company, architects and engineers, Philadelphia and New York. This new theatre will have ultimate seating capacity of over two thousand persons. All photoplays will be booked exclusively through The Stanley Company of America.

Located in the central business district of Roxborough, the theatre is the last word in modern appointments, including ventilating and air cooling systems, special electrical effects, etc., and numerous other features for the comfort and convenience of its patrons.

The Spanish Renaissance style of architecture, modified to suit modern usage, has been adopted for the exterior of the building as well as for the interior of the theatre. On the street facades the ornamentation consists of modelled terra-cotta of Spanish design combined with brick, the former a cream color to harmonize with the warm buff gray of the latter.

The decorative effects of the interior are noticeable on account of their joyous Spanish character, enriched somewhat by the introduction of color; all applied to a tinted and surfaced background which has been used as a foil. The wall surfaces, generally very plain and having a wainscot of inlaid colored faience tile, depend entirely upon their color and surface treatment for effectiveness. The inlaid colored tile drinking fountains, and Spanish balconies with wrought iron railings, are features of very unusual interest.

Special attention has been given to the accommodations for men and women patrons, including retiring and smoking rooms in which the same general style of decoration has been carried out.

In addition to the theatre building, the project will include eight modern stores, each having a frontage of 17 feet on Ridge Avenue with an average depth of 64 feet. Located above the stores are modern offices which in size, abundance of daylight and appointments are ideal for commercial and professional purposes.

Mastbaum Bros. & Fleisher have been appointed exclusive renting agents for the stores and for the offices.

The ground upon which the building is to be erected has a frontage of 153 feet 7 inches on Ridge Avenue, extending that width along Leverington Avenue, upon which it has a frontage of 185 feet 5½ inches. The exterior walls of the new building will be of rough texture brick laid to form panels and patterns.

Transverter Co.'s Eng. Dept. Solves Many Inquiries

An important service instituted at the factory of the Hertner Electric Company, manufacturer of Hertner Tranverters, is the solving of certain projection problems of theatre owners and managers. Their engineering department answers many inquiries daily and the Hertner Company wants every user to feel that any question asked, simple or involved, will have their immediate attention.

Recent transverter sales reported by the Hertner Electric Company include Reade's Long Branch Theatre, Long Branch, N.J.; the Capitol Theatre, Dunkirk, N.Y.; the Capitol Theatre, Montreal, Que.; Chrisedge Enterprises, New York City; the New Atlantic Theatre, East Rockaway, L.I., and Shea's Kensington Theatre, Buffalo, N.Y.

Southern Houses Install New Equipment

New equipment is being installed by several theatres in this section, the following orders having been placed through the Atlanta office of National Theatre Supply Company.

L. W. Kester, of Pompano, Fla., two Simplex projectors equipped with Peerless reflector arcs; motor and generator, screen and 500 opera chairs, made by the Steel Furniture Company.

G. M. Lee, of the Lee Amusement Company, of Cuthbert, Ga., two Mazda equipped Simplx projectors.

F. Wood, of Vienna, Ga., two Simplex projectors.

Ensley, Ala., May Have New 800-Seat Theatre

It is reported that a theatre will be built in Ensley for R. B. Wilby and R. M. Kennedy. According to the tentative plans the house will be of Spanish design and will have a seating capacity of about 850. It is understood that a balcony will be provided for negroes.

Mr. Kennedy is interested with Mr. Wilby in both the Rialto and the Princess, of Birmingham. Mr. Wilby has several other theatre enterprises in Alabama and Georgia and has lately begun developing important holdings in North Carolina where with several associates he organized Piedmont Theatres, Inc.

New House at Lancaster, Cal.

A new theatre, seating 500, has been opened by Manager Clayman at Lancaster, Cal. A dance attended the first performance on Christmas night and all the first-nighters praised the handsome appointments not usually found in theatres of this size.

Combine to Build at Hazleton, Pa.

1,200 Seat Theatre Planned by M. H. Goodman and Others

A new motion picture theatre, to seat 1,200 persons, is to be erected in Hazleton, Pa., by a combination of theatrical men, headed by M. H. Goodman, formerly of that city and now associated with the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, which operates a big chain of picture and other theatres in the hard-coal regions of Pennsylvania and elsewhere. It is to be a three-story building and the site will be at 23-25-27 East Broad Street, a plot, 46 by 150 feet, on which there are several buildings that will be removed. They are the former Silverman properties that were sold to the theatrical interests through Henry K. Markman.

The plans for the new structure are about complete and call for apartments on the upper floor. The theatre will occupy two stories, with store-rooms on part of the first floor and several offices on the second floor. The basement will be occupied by a cafeteria which will be part of an out-of-town chain.

First-run pictures will be offered in the theatre and part of the equipment will be a modern pipe organ. It is expected to have the building completed in time for opening on June 15, 1927.

State Charter Obtained by Williamsport Men

A PENNSYLVANIA State charter was obtained at the capitol in Harrisburg, late in December, for the Keystone Theatre Company, Inc., of Williamsport, organized for the purpose of "owning, buying, constructing and managing theatre or theatres." The corporation is capitalized at $150,000, the par value of the shares being $100. The incorporators are: Carl W. Herdic, 151 West Fourth Street, Williamsport, treasurer, who owns one share; Valentine C. Luppert, of South Williamsport, owner of 751 shares, and Norman R. Hill, Williamsport, 748 shares.

East Atlanta to have Its First M. P. Theatre

East Atlanta is soon to have its first motion picture theatre. Final plans for the enterprise were concluded early last week when a building permit was secured, contracts let, and work was started on breaking ground.

The new house, which will be called the Universal, will be located in the very heart of the thriving suburb, at 551 Flat Shoals Avenue, near the intersection of Glenwood Avenue.

H. H. Fitzgerald, a citizen of East Atlanta for the past thirty years, is owner and will be manager of the new house. It will be Mr. Fitzgerald's first venture in the motion picture theatre business. He expects to open in March.

Syncroverter Head Tours Southeast

Confers With District Managers of National Supply Company

While on his semi-annual trip through the South, M. R. White, head of the Liberty Electric Corporation of Stamford, Conn., makers of the Liberty Syncroverter, recently spent several days in Atlanta, where he met P. C. Parrish, purchasing agent of the National Theatre Supply Company, and other officials of that organization.

Mr. White came here from Charlotte, where he attended the exhibitors' convention, and will visit Memphis, New Orleans and Dallas.

The Syncroverter, which is distributed by the National Theatre Supply Company and enjoys an excellent sale in the Southeast, is a patented appliance, designed as part of the equipment for projection booths.

It is a rectifier for producing direct current to the arcs at the proper operating voltage. It enables the projector to give a steady light on the screen, being designed to automatically furnish the additional current required by second arc, so that there is no flicker on change-over, it is claimed.

The transformer of the Syncroverter, with the motor element idle, acts as a compensare and will furnish alternating current to the lamps in case of accident. This feature, it is claimed, dispenses with the necessity of an extra emergency set. Another claim for it is that it operates at a saving of at least 25 per cent. over a motor generator set.

How Vallen Quiet Curtain Control Increases Business

Think over the difference between unusually successful theatres and the "grubbing along" kind. You will see that it is the refinement of detail that counts.

Add a scrim curtain to your screen, put in other curtains and have them quietly pulled open and closed by unseen forces. The proven effect on your audiences is remarkable and also upon your box office.

Effect of Aperture Size on Screen Illumination

Part II

IN general, the illuminating engineering fraternity is responsible for the prevailing impression that light can be slopped about as if it were so much paint.

It has been religiously taught that light can be scooped up from a source, poured into a lens, and then deposited onto a motion picture screen in thick layers, or thin, depending upon whether a high intensity or a low intensity of illumination is desired.

The thickness of the layer connotes the intensity of illumination obtained from any particular bucket of light deposited over a given area.

The Lumen Rating

The light efficiency of picture projectors is rated in total lumen output and the figure so given is supposed to be a constant for fixed conditions as regards the elements of the optic system.

As examples, we are told that the 900 Watt incandescent lamp, when used with the prismatic condenser and a half-size projection lens of 5½ in. E. F., gives some 850 lumens and these 850 lumens will produce a certain intensity of illumination, depending upon the size of the motion picture screen onto which they are projected.

Ergo! the only thing to know, then, with this outfit, is the size of illuminated picture, and the intensity of illumination naturally follows.

If the prismatic condenser is replaced with a corrected one, such as the parabolic set, this output is raised to some 1,200 lumens and it should be clear to all that the intensity will be increased by 50% for all conditions.

The manufacturers of arc outfits, not to be outdone in a field which initially had been theirs exclusively, were quick to seize upon the same method of rating, so that now we see the reflector arc rated variously from 1,500 to 2,500 lumens, depending upon the current used. And it is assumed in each case that this lumen output, distributed over a given screen area, will result in a certain intensity of illumination without considering any other factors.

In this manner has the entire field of projection been given over to the lumen rating so that everyone automatically thinks in terms of lumens and subconsciously divides the lumens by the screen area in order to arrive at the intensity.

Aperture Area and Screen Intensity

It is not strange, therefore, that the size of the aperture in a motion picture projector has come to possess such a high degree of importance that it is named as one of the principal factors in determining what screen illumination can be obtained with any given projector.

It is stated unequivocally that after the projection lens and light source have been pushed to the limit, no further increase in screen illumination can be expected unless the aperture be enlarged to permit the passage of more light. An idea based, no doubt, on the adage that "the bigger the plate, the more the soup."

In support of this attitude towards the aperture by the field in general, let us quote from a well-known "handbook" of projection, page 399, wherein the author, in describing what happens when the size of the light source is increased, has the following to say—"Beyond 120 amperes D. C. the increased amperage gives no appreciable increase in screen brilliancy, nor is it possible with a projector aperture of the present size, to change this condition." (The italics are mine—Ed.)

This statement was originally made by, presumably, an authority on projection, and was relayed to projectionists.

What a fine kettle of fish we would have if that statement were true. It is extremely unfortunate that it is not, since if it were there would be no limit to which the screen intensity could be raised. And in the matter of spotlights, beam candlepowers of hundreds of millions, instead of a paltry few millions, could be easily obtained. Alack and alas, however, no such thing is possible.

Why?

If the statement is true, then why did not those projectors using extremely wide films—such as the Widescope—show greatly increased intensities of illumination? We have heard no claims for greater screen intensities with such devices and so are forced to the conclusion that the results in this respect are quite ordinary.

Furthermore, with stereopticon forms of spotlights—which really employ the motion picture form of optic system—there are no indications that higher beam candlepowers are obtained when the iris is opened to increase the size of the "spot."

We can only say, therefore, that the principal function of the aperture plate in a projector is to serve as a sort of picture frame to mask out extraneous light and so prevent imaging frame lines, sprocket holes and portions of adjoining picture frames. In other words, the aperture serves only to fix the boundaries of the projected picture and as far as exercising any influence on the screen intensity, the aperture is entirely "out of the picture," so to speak.

The Important Factors

Granted that this is so, then we can immediately say that the principal factors governing the intensity of illumination on the screen are as follows:

1. Brightness of source.
2. Free diameter of Projection lens.
3. Projection distance.

These three factors, in the final analysis, determine what the screen intensity shall be with any given set of conditions.

Increasing, or decreasing, the size of the aperture will only result in changing the size of the projected picture. The screen intensity will not be changed; and this holds true even if the aperture be reduced to 1/16 in. diameter. Photometric tests confirm this statement.

It is true that such items as the correction for spherical aberration in the condenser system, the transmission factor of the entire system, imperfect mechanism design of the projector, etc., are important, but they have to do, primarily, with imperfect conditions in the system and the elimination of these natural faults results only in obtaining the same screen intensity with less electrical energy than would be required were these faults not removed or reduced to a reasonable minimum. Limiting illumination, however, is determined by the three factors mentioned above.

No projectionist can possibly hope to have a clear understanding of picture projection unless he thoroughly recognizes their importance and grasps the significance of the influence each one exerts over the system.

And it is well to remember that the importance of the much-vaunted lumen should not be extolled at the sacrifice of the modest, little understood, and badly abused, foot-candle.

No. Birmingham, "Joe" Steed's Latest House

BIRMINGHAM'S latest acquisition in the amusement line is the handsome new North Birmingham Theatre, which had its formal opening on Monday Evening, January 3rd. The North Birmingham is operated by the Joe Steed Amusement Company and will be under the management of Jack Marshall, formerly of the Grand and Jefferson theatres in Huntsville, Ala.

The North Birmingham, located at 2625 30th Avenue in North Birmingham, sent out handsome invitations this week to friends and many future patrons in Birmingham and its environs.

Mr. Marshall has an enviable record for showmanship in the State of Alabama, and the choice of him to direct the destinies of the new North Birmingham happily adds another capable theatre manager to Birmingham's already lengthy list.

J. H. Hallberg Opens Service Department

Prepared to Advise Exhibitors on Hallberg Product

J. H. Hallberg, one of the pioneer inventors in the motion picture industry and who has lately introduced a new reflector arc to the trade, has inaugurated a service department at his offices at Chickering Hall, 29 West Fifty-seventh Street, New York City, for the benefit of the users of the Hallberg product.

This will be welcome news for those exhibitors who have been under the mistaken impression that with the dicontinuance of the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, the repair parts for Hallberg apparatus were unattainable.

Many of the Hallberg Motor Generators now in use are so designed and constructed that they may be used advantageously for the operation of Low Intensity Reflector Arc Projector Lamps.

Owners of Hallberg Generators, who will communicate with Mr. Hallberg, stating the serial number and specifications of their generator and the make of reflector arc to be used in connection with same, will be advised regarding the method to adopt in adapting the generators to this usage.

It is possible, Mr. Hallberg states, to rewind the generator portion of the Hallberg motor generators quite economically for adaption to reflector arc use and when so rewound, they will be found quite efficient, although not as efficient as the latest type Hallberg motor generator, which has been specially designed for reflector arcs.

Such rewound Hallberg motor generators will be found to constitute an effective and economical piece of emergency apparatus.

Mr. Hallberg carries in stock such repair parts as ball bearings, brushes, field rheostats, starting boxes and instruments for any of his old-type generators, irrespective of date or type of model.

Plans Complete for New Kansas City House

Plans for the construction of the largest suburban theatre in Kansas City, to be at 3517-29 Troost Avenue, virtually have been completed, it was announced this week by Mrs. Amy H. Priestly, owner and developer of the property. The management of the theatre, which will be of 1,800 seats, and be in conjunction with a large hotel, has not yet been decided. The project will involve more than $500,000. Dodd & Finney, architects, are in charge of the plans.

Bailey to Build at Oakdale, Cal.

Oakdale, Cal., is to have a new theatre, according to a recent announcement of Clarence Bailey, formerly of Knight's Ferry. The Geiger Building, which he will remodel, will house the theatre equipment. Bailey plans to open about March 1.

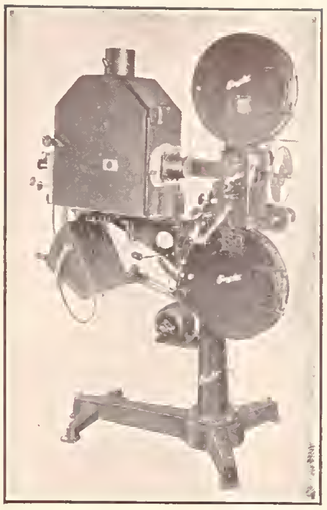
HAROLD E. HART

Strand Theatre, Owossa, Michigan, writes that in two and a half years of service nothing has occurred to interrupt the continuous performance of his two Simplex projectors.



Simplex Type S Projector

Let Owners Advise You

The advice of owners is the most valuable information you can get on the relative merits of any projector. It is based on actual experience and is absolutely unprejudiced. So, we refer you as a prospective buyer of a projector to any Simplex owner or projectionist. Let him tell you the story of his experience. You will hear an account of long, economical, unfaltering performance; of weeks and months of trouble-free service; of confidence never disappointed.

You will appreciate more fully then the significance and value of good projection and why so many owners and projectionists think of good projection and Simplex service as one and the same thing. You will understand why so many of the most expert projectionists will not be satisfied with anything less than Simplex performance.

So before you buy ask a Simplex owner about his projection experience. Then ask your nearest Simplex distributor for a demonstration of the particular type of Simplex that meets your requirements. Your own experience will confirm all you have been told.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, JANUARY 21, 1927 No. 3

Bigger Than Publicity

ON Christmas night, the Associated Press sent out a thousand-word wire story from Los Angeles on how the picture stars observed the holiday.

A few days later, the most conservative of newspapers—The New York Times—included in its authoritative financial forecast for 1927 the opinion of a film leader—Adolph Zukor. Mr. Zukor's views were printed alongside Judge Gary's and others of equal prominence.

The Times, as H. M. Newman, publisher of The Fourth Estate, pointed out in his excellent address to the A. M. P. A., is exceedingly careful about what goes into its columns and scrutinizes very closely every word.

* * *

Now, the A. P. and The Times occurrences are not accidental. They are recognition at the top in the newspaper world of the outstanding importance of the screen in the interest and affection of the public.

They mean, unmistakably, that motion pictures are news. And why? Simply because the public says so. The daily press could not leave out picture news if it wanted to—which it does not. Good publishing demands news of this business in all its ramifications—personalities and as an industry.

In the same way—and just as importantly—the motion picture needs the newspaper to carry its advertising message. In no other medium can entertainment be so effectively sold to the millions who ask: "Where shall we go tonight?"

The two are very closely allied. There is a natural kinship, because the screen is publishing entertainment to the multitude.

This, it seems to us, is the dignified basis upon which to approach the problem of the commercial rate for picture theatre advertising.

The Times, by its publication of Mr. Zukor's forecast, acknowledges that the motion picture is on a level with the other great industries. The Associated Press devotes thousand-word wire stories only to topics of vital public interest.

The Times and the A. P. are pointing the way to the newspaper world. If the motion picture is gilt-edged news, there can be no question that its advertising is also of the first importance to the public. And if that is true, why should the picture theatre be discriminated against in advertising rates?

* * *

The old-fashioned argument that the rate must be kept higher because a certain amount of publicity is carried, falls to the ground. The newspapers themselves, by printing picture news—and make no mistake about it, it is news—acknowledge the falsity of the argument. What is news in one column is no less news because it is printed in another column. Anything else is an artificial distinction without merit.

We believe that the newspapers, if they will thoroughly analyze their own attitude, ought to agree that the run-of-paper rate for picture theatres is sound. The whole question is bigger than publicity—far bigger.

The picture theatre is a show in itself. As such, it needs big space for its advertising. Institutions—and the picture theatre is an institution—are not adequately represented by directory space, which is an inheritance from the old-style legitimate road-show.

The motion picture is not asking for anything to which it is not entitled. But it must insist that justice be done; and that it be given, in advertising rates, the recognition which the newspapers have already accorded it in every other respect.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

JUST as this issue is going to press, unofficial word has gotten out to the effect that Famous Players is negotiating for the film rights to "Abie's Irish Rose," and may close for them at any time. No statement has been sent out, but it was admitted that such a deal was pending. The consideration and conditions involved are said to be rather intricate, however, and the final ironing out of all these details may take time.

Many offers have been made for the screen rights to the Anne Nichols piece, which has smashed every box-office tradition of the theatre, and bids of as high as one million dollars have been claimed. Lately it has been rumored that the authoress was asking two million dollars and a share of the gross. At any rate the price will probably be higher than has ever before been paid for film rights with the possible exception of "Ben-Hur."

* * *

IN connection with the adaptation of stage plays to the screen, we ran onto an interesting reaction the other morning. A film play based on one of the greatest successes of the American stage was previewed before a receptive audience. Those who had never seen the stage play thought the picture was immense; those who were familiar with the play were frankly disappointed. Yet the play had been bought not so much as a story as for the fact that it would supposedly bring in these tens of thousands who had witnessed the play—and apparently these persons will be least satisfied of all those who see the picture. There is a thought in this.

* * *

CONSIDERING the general let-down which comes the second week following the Holidays, business along Broadway was generally very good up to the time of writing this. The Capitol, with "Flesh and the Devil," looks good for $75,000 on the week. The absence of a holiday and the length of the picture makes a new house record unlikely, but the results are tremendously satisfactory. Curiously enough, this picture seems to strike highbrows and lowbrows alike as both good entertainment and good art. It has that elusive something that we can only call "sincerity" which gives it a touch of greatness. The Strand is doing good average business with "The Poor Sap" and the Paramount will be around its usual figure on "Blonde or Brunette." The long run pictures are all a little off from the figures they set last week, but doing well on the whole.

* * *

WILLARD B. COOK, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, has pointed out that a statement in one of the recent John Grierson articles concerning the absence of a Cinematic Society and of encouragement of the formulation of ideas or the pushing of investigation and research as these affect the cinema, might be taken by some persons as a reflection upon the engineers. In this connection Mr. Grierson says:

"The Cinematic Society I talked of was one which would not only promote research in the adaptation of new technical devices to the work of practical direction but one which would articulate efforts in other directions as well. As is well known, the S.M.P.E. confines itself to investigations regarding the tools of the trade (film, camera, theatre equipment, etc.) and along its own specialized technical lines its work has contributed immensely to the advance of the industry. But it does not and does not attempt to function as a know-all for the benefit of directors; the cast of its eye is primarily on the production and betterment of cinema tools, not on the production and betterment of films. The difference is one of function and purpose.

"In the circumstances, there could of course be no thought in my mind of slighting the S.M.P.E., and I would have this made clear. The Cinematic Society I mourned the absence of, was another pigeon altogether."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Who would suppose that this sedate colonial gentleman was none other than Col. Tim McCoy, dressed for his role in "Winners of the Wilderness" (M.G.M)

Gladys McConnell, chosen as one of the Wampas Baby Stars this year, has richly earned this rating by her work for Fox Films in "The Wedding Ring"

We concur heartily with the Wampas in its selection of Sally Rand, a beauteous blonde under contract to De Mille, as a Wampas Baby Star for the coming year

Those Marquee Signs

THE Los Angeles exchange of Educational reports a marquee sign on a theatre in a little California town reading: "God Gave Me Twenty Cents and Lloyd Hamilton."

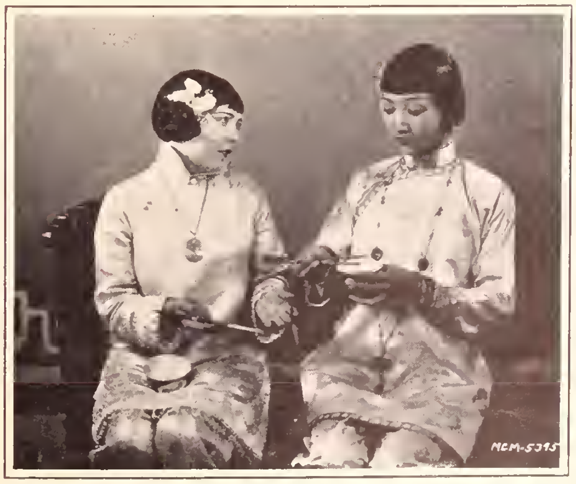
A Comedian Arrives

CHESTER CONKLIN, whose years of comedy training are standing him in good stead as a subtler comic figure in features, arrived in New York on Tuesday from the Coast, accompanied by his wife and Mrs. Sig Schlager. Conklin will add humorous moments to "Cabaret," the next Gilda Gray vehicle for Famous Players.

Fell into a Job

ONE drop too much has proved the downfall of many a man, but to Clem Beauchamp it proved the opening up of a new field. During the war he was a naval aviator, specializing in parachute jumps. Later he set up as a movie stunt man, doing plane changes and other hazardous tricks. Finally, flying over Santa Monica Canyon, a wilderness of brush, gullies and rock, his engine stalled and he made a forced landing on rough ground.

When the engine was hoisted off his chest he was found to have a broken arm and nose, a fracture of the skull and a half-dozen ribs caved in. He gave up flying, and Stephen Roberts, Educational comedy director and former pilot, made him an assistant. Then he had a chance to don the grease and showed an unsuspected talent for comedy miming. Today he is coming along fast as one of the most promising young comics in the field.



The technique of chop-stick juggling is explained by Anna May Wong to Renee Adoree, who is featured in an oriental role in "Mr. Wu" at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Adoree's make-up has been widely commented on

Another of the Wampas selections for 1927 who will bear watching is Frances Lee, who has been leading lady in recent Bobby Vernon-Christie comedies

Sally Phipps, named as one of the Baby Stars of 1927 by the Wampas, has just been awarded the feminine lead in "Love Makes 'Em Wild" (Fox Films)

Lupino Lane, as he appears in Educational's "Naughty Boy," and Al St. John, Mermaid star, clown a bit to keep in the spirit of good old Laugh Month

Radio Laugh Month Party

STATION WMCA of the Hotel McAlpin, New York, which was one of the first institutions operating a radio station to broadcast a Laugh Month program, was the scene of a highly successful Laff Nite, Thursday evening, January 6, when motion picture stars, officials and prominent cartoonists gathered in the grill room to take part in a specially prepared program. The presence of Milt Gross, creator of "Nize Baby"; Billy DeBeck, creator of "Barney Google"; Cullen Landis, Pathe serial star; Don Hancock, editor of Topics of the Day; Borrah Minnevitch, harmonica player, who is the hit of "Betsy," new Ziegfeld musical comedy, and Jack Burdette, Pathe player, not only added to the highly entertaining program which was broadcast starting at midnight, but also attracted a large crowd to the grill room.

Shortly after the regular entertainment for the evening had been started, Hancock was introduced and contributed "The Art of Jokesmithing" as his part of the Laff Nite. Cullen Landis appeared before the "Mike" and spoke briefly on the Laugh Month idea. Burdette played the uke and maintained the fast pace set by Hancock with several humorous stories. Gross and DeBeck, introduced as two of America's foremost cartoonists and artists, presented a clever dialogue.

Minnevitch literally stopped the show with his playing of "The Rhapsody in Blue" on the harmonica. The audience insisted on an encore and he played "Black Bottom" on one of the tiny harmonicas which had been distributed among the guests.

Lois Wilson Leaves Famous

LOIS WILSON and Famous Players came to an amicable parting of the ways last week after an association which had lasted for seven years.

During these years, Miss Wilson has given splendid performances in such well-known pictures as "Miss Lulu Bett," "The Vanishing American," "The Covered Wagon," "The Great Gatsby" and many others.

For some time Miss Wilson has been trying valiantly to get away from Western roles, and it is understood that the severance of her and Famous Players' relations finally came about because of their desire to have her play another Western role in "The Deer Drive."

H. Aiger Please Note

IT was just 12 years ago that Hal Roach, a former Seattle truck driver, movie cowboy, actor, director and writer, started in business with a cash capital of $3,750. Recently the Hal Roach studios were reincorporated for one and a half million dollars. Even that figure does not represent the total valuation of the establishment, since he was offered a million dollars for a half interest not so long ago. And the genial Mr. Roach is just 34 years of age. Not all the real film romances are on the screen.

The Age of Wonders

ADOLPH ZUKOR, one of the first to recognize and develop the potentialities of the motion picture, last week participated in the inaugural of another great scientific development which, like the screen, is destined to bring the nations of the world into closer relationship.

At 10:50 last Friday morning the telephone in his office rang and Mr. Zukor was in telephonic communication with John Cecil Graham, managing director of the Paramount interests in Great Britain. The president of Famous Players-Lasky was one of the first to use the radio telephone service which had just been inaugurated between the two countries. This event of international importance occurred on Mr. Zukor's fifty-fourth birthday.

The conversation between the two lasted eight minutes, and as Mr. Zukor talked photographs were taken for immediate transmission by cable to London. These were received in England within a few hours after Mr. Zukor had hung up the receiver.

Pathe Club Festivities

MEMBERS of the up-and-coming Pathe Club have a lively meeting scheduled for this Thursday evening at the Hotel Roosevelt in New York City, with a strong program of entertainment. Robey Lyle of "The Desert Song" company will sing; Daisy Rainsford, formerly with Pat Rooney, will sing and dance; and Dot "Mike" Bodee of the Black and White revue will offer the latest Black Bottom. Meanwhile, plans go on apace for the big Pathe Club annual ball, to be held in February.

Miss Blythe Departs

BETTY BLYTHE, accompanied by her husband, Paul Scardon, the director, left New York last week for Hollywood. Miss Blythe has been offered several parts in forthcoming productions, and will no doubt make announcement as to her plans shortly after her arrival on the Coast. Scardon, it has been announced, will direct a picture to be made by Harry Aitken, formerly of Triangle, from an original by Thomas Dixon. He will return after a short stay.

London to Hollywood

SHORTLY after the opening of telephonic communication between New York and London, M-G-M went the others one better by having Major Edward M. Bowes in New York connected at the same time with John Gilbert in Hollywood and Castleton Knight of the Capitol Theatre in London, relaying a message from Gilbert to Knight. The total distance which the message traveled was 7,000 miles.

Mark Engagement

THE engagement of Miss Winifred Mark, younger daughter of Mrs. Mitchel H. Mark of New York City, to Victor Aubrey Lownes, Jr., has been announced. Lownes is assistant manager of the Victoria Theatre at Buffalo, while Miss Mark is a daughter of the late Mitchel H. Mark, founder of the chain of theatres which bear his name.

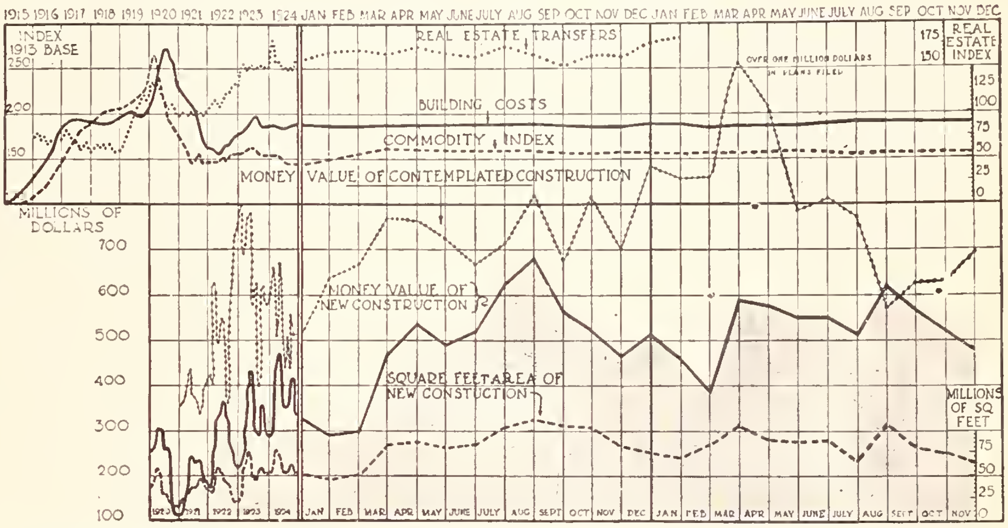
Mrs. Seger in Another

MRS. LUCIA BACKUS SEGER has started work in another important role, this time in "Knockout Reilly," a Richard Dix starring vehicle in work at the Paramount Long Island studio. She is playing the role of Mrs. Reilly, mother to the character played by the doughty Dix.

Building to Surpass All Records

Analysis Made by Survey of 2,000 Architects Indicates Theatre Increase 25% Over 1926

BUILDING ACTIVITY IN THE UNITED STATES SINCE 1915



©The Architectural Forum

Chart shows variations in Building Costs for years 1915-26. also Commodity Index; Money Value of contemplated construction, and Real Estate Transfers for all building in country. This is an important chart for studying the trend of building

[Editor's Note: Data and analysis given in the following article are taken from the 1927 building forecast as published by "The Architectural Forum"]

It is difficult to conceive that the year 1927 will record as great a theatre building investment as that of 1926. All indications point to the fact that 1927 will probably prove to be the greatest year in theatre building history. Its total investment in new building construction will be approximately 25 per cent. more than in 1926. In other words, the forecast of "The Architectural Forum," based on an extensive survey as explained in following paragraphs, indicates for 1927 a total of about two hundred million dollars as opposed to the one hundred and sixty-five million dollar record of 1926. (These figures are for actual construction and do not include cost of sites, etc.)

Forum Carries Surveys

For several years past, "The Architectural Forum" has carried out a comprehensive survey among architects, obtaining over 2,000 confidential reports of work actually on the boards or seriously contemplated to reach the contract stage the following year. Having those actual figures in hand, it has been found possible to apply a series of ratios which have resulted each year in a fairly close approximation of actual figures ultimately recorded. Primarily, of course, this forecast deals with work carried out through architects' offices. While the bulk of the building of this country is controlled by architects, to the figure established by new work must, of course, be added an estimate covering remodeling and alterations.

In order that some detailed measure may be had of anticipated building activity during the year 1927, the architects' reports received by "The Architectural Forum" have been correlated and weighted for presentation in the accompanying data, which show the expected activity in theatre building, allocated to six divisions of the country.

No Danger of Overbuilding

In spite of occasional comments, there appears at present no great danger of overbuilding, because, after all, the building demand of this country is not primarily for space alone, but for space of a satisfactory quality. Here then we find conditions which are certainly discouraging from the viewpoint of owners of old buildings, particularly those which physically or because of local conditions are approaching the state of obsolescence. The competition of new buildings will naturally be too great to sustain values in old structures, but it is probable that the new buildings themselves will not suffer materially except in isolated instances of a temporary satiation.

Each year "The Architectural Forum" forecast is expressed monetarily and in percentages, showing the anticipated activity in new building construction for each of the nineteen building types in the six established geographical divisions of the United States. Theatre building for 1927 ranks eleventh of these nineteen divisions.

By comparing the figures given in this forecast for 1926-27, it is possible to ascertain the changing public demand for new buildings and establish for each district the relative activity which may be expected.

Grouped in Six Divisions

The six geographical divisions of the United States to which the following statistics apply are grouped as follows:

1. Northeastern States, including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut.
2. North Atlantic States, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia.
3. Southeastern States, including Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.
4. Southwestern States, including Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas.
5. Middle States, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas.
6. Western States, including Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California.

The following table gives a complete analysis of the division of theatre building by various districts and also the expected change of theatre construction in each of these districts over that of 1926.

In dollars and cents, the total expenditure for theatre construction in the classified territories are as follows:

	1926	1927	Change in percent
			Increase
United States	$158,700,000	$199,652,500	25.8 %
Northeastern States	5,880,000	18,637,500	219 %
North Atlantic States	23.750,000	54,747.500	131 %
Southeastern States	3,497,500	6,995,000	100 %
Southwestern States	9,998,000	11,012,500	10.3 %
Middle States ...	91,800,000	93,367,500	1.75%
			Decrease
Western States ...	22,320,000	14,892,500	33.4 %

The above table shows some very radical changes in theatre building activities as grouped by territories. The figures above indicate that the United States as a whole will show an increase over 1926 theatre construction of 25 8/10 per cent., while the Northeastern States will more than treble their construction in 1927 over that of 1926. The North Atlantic States, having an increase of 131 per cent., are next in line in representing the most radical changes in the theatre building program, while the Southeastern States follow a close third, as the building program in that territory will be doubled. There is very little change in the building schedule for the Southwestern and Middle States, as compared with that of 1926. The only section that shows a decrease is the Western States, where the volume of building will be reduced by something like one-third. It can be seen from this analysis that the East and Southeast are scheduled for the heaviest building program in their history. This development is to be expected, considering that the West and Middle States have been the center of our era of theatre construction for the past four or five years, the East and Southeast lagging somewhat behind.

Proportionately, the total theatre building in the United States to be done in each of the six territories, is as follows:

Northeastern States, 9.3 per cent.; North Atlantic States, 27.9 per cent.; Southeastern States, 3.5 per cent.; Southwestern States, 5.5 per cent.; Middle States, 46.4 per cent.; Western States, 7.4 per cent.

Motion Picture Course at Columbia University

Dr. Butler Announces Decision to Inaugurate Four Year Training Period in Film Work

COLUMBIA University is to inaugurate a four-year course of instruction to train experts for the film industry and in the future Young America will have the same opportunity for a thorough education in all the branches of picture making as it now has to qualify in medicine or law.

This important fact was announced by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler at a luncheon given in his honor last Friday at the Waldorf Hotel by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association.

The University has had an extension course in various phases of motion picture production for several years, but the course has been handicapped by a lack of equipment and other features necessary to permit it to function with complete success.

The new course will be carefully planned and adequate funds and a competent faculty secured to give the students who enroll all the instruction for a highly technical profession that is possible. In other words, the graduate of the school will be in just as good a position to step into a studio as the young lawyer is to conduct a case in court.

While none of the details have been worked out, it is already known that the school will study such arts as architecture, designing, history and scenario writing. The student will also be taught the fundamentals in laboratory work, directing, stage technique and the more practical parts of picture production.

As soon as a committee appointed by Will H. Hays from the personnel of the M. P. P. and D. Association and a similar body from Columbia meet, the work will actually be under way.

Doctor Butler in his address at the luncheon made his position clear on the subject of the seriousness with which the prospective course is viewed by the Columbia faculty.

He paid high tribute to the motion picture, describing it as "a new set of forces for binding the world together" and called the film "a stupendous engine of great importance."

In explaining why the course had been decided upon he said that the University was dedicated to service and that motion pictures had progressed to the point where they were entitled to the recognition of Columbia if she was to live up to her traditions of providing scholarship and service where they were deserved and needed.

Dr. Butler expressed it as his opinion that the one big problem the motion picture industry faced was production of the trained expert and that Columbia would provide these experts with her graduates in the new school.

The luncheon given for President Butler was largely attended by film executives, newspaper and trade press and others who might be expected to be interested in one way or another in the proposed venture.

Ex-Governor Milliken of the Hays office introduced Dr. John H. Finley, who acted as toastmaster, and he in turn sponsored Dr. Butler and Will H. Hays, who represented the picture industry as spokesman.

After paying tribute to Dr. Butler and promising the support of his association in the undertaking, Mr. Hays talked at some length concerning the power of the screen, describing it as the "one universal language."

Among the prominent people who attended the luncheon were Will H. Hays, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Adolph Zukor, Haley Fiske, Mrs. William Dick Sporborg, F. C. Munroe, E. W. Hammons, Saul Rogers, Francis H. Sisson, Harry D. Buckley, Walter F. Wanger, Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, Professor Gaylor White, Mrs. Leon A. McIntire, Dr. John H. Finley.

Honorable James W. Gerard, Mrs. Robert E. Speer, R. H. Cochrane, Professor James C. Egbert, Harry M. Warner, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Jesse L. Lasky, Courtland Smith, Mrs. Elihu Root, Jr., J. Robert Rubin, Samuel Spring, John C. Flinn, Reverend Charles S. Macfarland, Mrs. Thomas A. McGoldrick, Frank D. Fackenthal.

William LeBaron, Reverend Henry F. Leiber, Maurice D. Kann, Fred J. McConnell, John Spargo, Arthur James, Merritt Crawford, J. S. Dickerson, C. F. Chandler, Paul Gulick, Joe Weil and John Barry.

Two New York Censorship Bills for Abolishment Pending

TWO new measures calling for the abolishment of State motion picture censorship, which are in line with the recommendation made by Governor Smith in his annual message, are now pending with the possibility of more being introduced into the Legislature later in the present session.

One bill which will be presented soon is sponsored by Fred L. Hackenburg of New York. Another bill is fathered by an upstate Republican. According to one observer at the State House, chances for the abolition of State censorship are excellent.

At present censorship powers are vested in the Board of Regents, who have appointed Jas. H. Wingate of Albany as director of the motion picture division of the State Department of Education. Yesterday the State Civil Service Commission announced that he had passed his examination. Wingate will soon prepare a budget covering financial needs of his department. He will receive a salary of $7,500 per year.

M-G-M Net Profits Are $3,055,229.35

METRO - GOLDWYN - MAYER and Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer subsidiaries 100 per cent owned report net profits of $3,055,229.35 for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1926. The gross profits for the period were $7,950,660.13, while assets are estimated at $29,829,764.88.

The net income reported for the year ending August 31, 1926, by Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer and subsidiaries, is equal to $4.37 per share on the 620,000 shares of common stock outstanding. This compares with $2.68 for the preceding year. The consolidated income account is as follows:

Morrison, Queens Village; Wirth and Hamid Realty Corporation, $100,000, Elizabeth Satlien, William Weinberg, Celia Cartoon, New York City.

H.H. Imray Now Advertising Sunday Films and Baseball

New Port Richey, Fla., recently had an election, the people voting on the question of Sunday picture shows, baseball and dancing. The vote was heavily in favor of both baseball and pictures, but thumbs down for dancing. New Port Richey has quite a winter colony of theatrical people. Thomas Meighan has quite a lot of property there and the motion picture theatre is named for him, the "Meighan."

H.H. Imray Now Advertising Mgr. Eastman Kodak Co.

Howard H. Imray has been appointed to the post of advertising manager of the Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, New York. His appointment is effective January 17. Mr. Imray was for several years with the United States Advertising Corporation, Toledo, Ohio.

Victoria Court Upholds Injunction Favoring Exhibitor

The Court of Appeals at Victoria, B.C., has rendered an important judgment of general interest to all exhibitors in sustaining the order of Justice F. B. Gregory of the Supreme Court awarding John A. Schuberg, proprietor of the Empress Theatre, Victoria, an injunction and $1,750 damages against Local 118 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

The injunction restrained members of the union, including operators, stage hands and others, from interfering with the operation of the theatre, although counsel for the union had contended at both trials that the act relating to trade unions had legalized peaceful picketing.

The justices of the higher court based their judgment on the criminal code which made it a crime to watch and beset. It was ruled that union men had watched and beset the theatre.

The trouble started when Manager Schuberg decided to cut down the staff of employes. When he did so, the local union advertised that he was unfair to organized labor.

Montreal Amusement Tax Revenue $780,265.37

The annual report of Patrick Collins, city treasurer for Montreal, Quebec, issued January 8, showed that the civic administration gained to the extent of $780,265.37 through revenue derived from the Amusement Tax paid by patrons at Montreal theatres during the calendar year of 1926.

This was an increase of $108,043 over the total for the previous year, thus indicating that Montreal theatres had done very nicely during the past twelve months.

The city also had a revenue of $5,965 in fines imposed upon exhibitors or theatre employes of local theatres through alleged evasions of the amusement tax by-law and other infractions.

Definite Plans for New Seattle Film Row

WITH the commencement of construction on the long proposed new film row in Seattle, Wash., not far distant, it has been announced that leases in the new block have already been signed by Warner Bros., United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Other leases are in preparation for Educational, First National, Famous Players-Lasky and other distributors as well as the Western Poster Company and additional supply houses.

The Canterbury Block, located between First and Second avenues on Battery Street, just three blocks north of the present row, will consist of a 16-story modern apartment hotel. to be built in the center of the block and surrounded by small stores and office buildings which will house the film branches and firms. An individual adjoining building will house the National Theatre Supply Company, according to report.

The present film row property has grown so valuable that on it must be constructed larger buildings than the one-story structures now occupied by the exchanges.

President Coolidge Sees "Tell It to the Marines" in Washington

WHAT is believed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to set a precedent in Presidential conduct was inaugurated last week when President Coolidge attended a special show of M-G-M's production, "Tell It to the Marines," in the auditorium of the Interior Department Building in Washington. The President, with Mrs. Coolidge, headed a party of guests invited by Major-General John A. Lejeune, head of the U. S. Marine Corps, which included the six members of the Cabinet and many Senators; the entire party numbered about three hundred guests.

The Marine band played the special score for the production and a detachment of Marines from the Capital were present. The picture is now playing an extended engagement at the Embassy Theatre, New York City.

Predicts Radio Movies

Broadcasting of Pictures to Distant Points is Likely Soon, Declares Dr. Alexanderson

IN a lecture and a sketchy demonstration given at the Engineering Building in New York City this week Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company and the Radio Corporation of America, forecast the possibility of radio movies in the home and the probability of seeing a person at a telephone within the next few years. The major portion of the attendance was composed of radio engineers.

Dr. Alexanderson described the simple apparatus by means of which he said he had broadcast photographs a distance of two miles and by which he hopes a beginning has been made toward television so that not within the too distant future anyone sitting at the telephone may see the person with whom he is conversing.

Dr. Alexanderson's method of broadcasting pictures, which he predicted would come as soon as the public demanded it, was only sketchily described by him. He indicated, however, that it is done by fastening the photograph to be sent on a rotating drum, and by reflecting light to it the various tone values are transmitted by electrical processes to the modulating carrier wave of a broadcasting station, which in turn actuates a photo-electric cell in the receiving instrument that paints, as it were, the tone values on a rotating film. The two rotating drums are synchronized so that they will always be in step.

Radio photography, Dr. Alexanderson said, is already an established fact, the only difference in the various methods being adaptations to varying conditions. His own method, for which he did not claim originality, but which grew out of experiments by other men for many years, produces under ideal conditions an accurate and smooth reproduction of a photograph, and its greatest value is its speed. It is made on a carrier frequency of 3,000 cycles. White is represented by 3,000 cycles modulation of full amplitude, gray by modulation of the same frequency by half amplitude, and black by no modulation.

By this process he has broadcast three pictures from Station WGY at Schenectady and picked them up at his laboratory, only two miles away. They are pictures of twenty-four square inches and were made in two minutes.

J. L. Baird Inventor of Talking Films on Phonograph Record

ACCORDING to a London dispatch in the "New York Herald-Tribune," talking pictures, which can be reproduced from wax records by means of a device which eventually will be marketed for not more than $100, have been invented by J. L. Baird, Scotch inventor. Baird has attracted attention in the transmission of pictures by wireless and has developed the "Visual Phonograph," as he terms it, as a side issue.

A ground-glass screen similar to camera range finders, on which the watcher is able to see the moving image, and a phonograph attachment which reproduces the voice, are the main features of the device. A demonstration of the instrument is scheduled soon in London.

Baird's records are cylindrical, one-half carrying sound impressions, which are reduced to light waves and the other half the sight impressions. A separate needle plays on each half the record, one connecting with the screen, the other with the horn. The records are revolved by an ordinary clock-work motor. Perfect synchronization of picture and sound is obtained, according to the correspondent. It is not necessary that the recording apparatus be near the subject, as both sight and sound can be transmitted by wireless. The pictures now are black and white, though Baird is experimenting with color.

10 Cents Per Seat Weekly, Vitaphone Royalty Charge; Kunsky-F&R Sign

VITAPHONE will exact a royalty of ten cents a seat per week for use of its equipment in addition to the cost of installation and film rental, it was announced this week. As yet the cost of installation has not been definitely approximated; the royalty will be kept by the Vitaphone organization.

According to the company's announcement 50 machines have been installed up to the present time in houses approximating 2,000 seats and it is estimated that 350 Vitaphones will be installed during 1927. It was also learned that George Trendle, general manager of the John H. Kunsky enterprises, has just signed for the installation of Vitaphone in the Kunsky Madison Theatre, Detroit; likewise that Moe Finkelstein of Finkelstein and Ruben contracted for the installation in the company's Garrick Theatre, Minneapolis.

Newspaper Penalty Rate Scored by Newman

"Fourth Estate" Publisher Calls It "Unfair"; A. M. P. A. Names Committee to Aid Campaign

DECLARING that the penalty rate for picture theatre advertising in newspapers is unfair, H. M. Newman, publisher of "The Fourth Estate," trade paper in the newspaper field, outlined his views vigorously to the A.M.P.A. at last week's meeting.

Following Mr. Newman's address, President Walter F. Eberhardt announced the appointment of a committee to represent the A.M.P.A. in the campaign for run-of-the-paper rate. The following were named: A. M. Botsford, chairman; C. F. Chandler, Howard Dietz, G. Bruce Gallup, George Harvey, Vivian Moses, Al Selig and Robert E. Welsh.

Mr. Newman, whose publication is a leader in the campaign, declared that he was fighting for revision of the rates on behalf of the publishers of newspapers rather than the film industry, because he believed the present scale "almost unconsciously dishonest."

He pointed out that the industry has been receiving unusual newspaper recognition recently, and cited the publication of Adolph Zukor's views in the financial forecast of "The New York Times," the first instance in which a film executive has been given a place in the forecast with leaders of the other great industries. He referred also to the fact that the Associated Press sent out from Los Angeles at Christmas a thousand-word wire story on the observance of the holiday by picture folk.

Mr. Newman urged that the industry conduct its campaign relentlessly, but on a dignified basis. "The newspapers know that picture stuff is news," he said. "Don't let anybody tell you otherwise. Your industry has reached a dignity which it needs to recognize itself."

Mr. Newman's appearance brought out a large attendance of members and others and his remarks were greeted with prolonged applause.

N. Y. C. Merger Rumored

Mayer-Schneider, Blinderman-Steiner & B. S. Moss Mentioned in Possible Circuit Amalgamation

THAT two or three of the larger motion picture theatre circuits of New York City have for the past few weeks been negotiating with a merger as their objective seems to be the opinion of those "in the know" along New York's Film Row. One or two claim that it is a ten to one shot that from forty to sixty theatres, now divided into three circuits, will soon be booking from one office.

The first of the rumors to apply to the merger concerned the circuits belonging to Mayer & Schneider and Blinderman & Steiner, operating on the East Side and in Harlem. Should these two firms merge, it would bring to an end a long struggle between these two circuits for supremacy on New York's East Side and would mean that their buying power would be doubly increased. Mayer & Schneider at present operate twenty-three theatres, most of them on the East Side, while Blinderman & Steiner's holdings take in both the East Side and Harlem, making a total of forty-five houses.

Following the rumor that the two above named circuits were negotiating a merger, it is also reported that there is a possibility of B. S. Moss entering the deal with his company's fourteen or so houses in New York and Brooklyn. The Moss house would probably fall in line with the Steiner and Blinderman theatres, according to report, and there also might be a possibility of all three coming under one banner, some seem to think. Should the latter occur, it would mean a combination of sixty theatres.

Sam Katz

Sam Katz Elected to F. P.-L. Board of Directors

Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres, Inc., was elected a director of Famous Players-Lasky Monday of this week at the board's regular meeting. Mr. Katz fills a vacancy in the Board of Directors.

About one year ago the theatre interests of Balaban and Katz were amalgamated with those of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation with the result that the Publix Theatres Corporation came into being.

Chaplin Posters Banned in Quebec

Because of the charges made against Charlie Chaplin by his wife in her suit for divorce at Los Angeles, Mayor Martin, of the City of Quebec, issued an order Jan. 12, placing a ban on the display by any local theatre of posters for a Charlie Chaplin picture.

Mayor Martin also announced that he had placed a formal request before the Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors to deal with a strict hand in the control of all Chaplin films for theatres throughout the Province of Quebec.

Grainger Plans Memorial for His Mother

TO commemorate the memory of his departed mother, the late Mrs. Elizabeth Grainger, a motion picture house is planned by James R. Grainger, general sales manager for Fox Films, to be erected in the town of Medford, Mass., in the early spring.

The theatre, of the community type, will seat 1,500 and will embody many new features. Within the next few weeks Mr. Grainger's plans for the new house will have been drawn up so that construction work may start as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The theatre will be situated so as to draw from the populations of both Medford and Somerville as well as neighboring communities. Mr. Grainger proposes to build at the Southern section of Medford and near the Somerville line.

M-G-M Active in Buying Theatres Abroad

THERE is no let up on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer campaign of acquiring theatres. Three Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer houses in Brussels, Ghent and Charleroi are the company's latest additions to its chain of Belgian holdings.

Metro-Goldwn-Mayer also plans a chain of theatres in France, to be built in conjunction with Leon Gaumont and modeled after the Capitol in New York City. Among the moves in the South American field is a deal recently closed by Louis Brock, whereby 44 Brazilian theatre houses pass to the control of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Other moves in the Southern Continent are anticipated shortly, especially in the Argentine.

S. L. Rothafel Now Located at His "Roxy" Theatre

On January 5th of this week S. L. Rothafel officially moved into his new theatre which is now on the last lap of completion. Offices were opened at the new cinema palace for "Roxy," William E. Atkinson, vice-president and general manager; A. O. Greist, secretary and treasurer; the personnel and publicity departments and their respective office staffs. Temporary headquarters in the dressing rooms are being used at the present time preparatory to the final installation into the permanent offices. "Roxy" still maintains his Steinway Hall studio, and the office at 383 Madison Avenue, in New York City. He is now engaged in selecting his musical staff and theatre personnel, which when completed will number five hundred.

Though no date has been set for the opening of the Roxy, the latter part of February will probably see its doors thrown open to the public.

New M. P. Firms Incorporate in New England

New England Theatres Co., Inc., has been incorporated at Westerly, R.I., with $100,000 capital. Incorporators are Booth C. Davis, 1440 Broadway, New York City; May S. Davis, Frank R. Nemec, Morris Kamber and Minnie Bergman.

L. & E. Capital Middletown Corporation has been incorporated at Bridgeport, Conn., to manage motion picture theatres. T. E. Halle of Brooklyn, N.Y., heads the company.

Elm Street Theatre Co. of Worcester, Inc., Worcester, Mass., has been organized with 990 shares of no par value. Incorporators are Henry J. Steinberg, Edgar S. Hill of 511 Tremont Building, Boston, and Helene R. Steinberg.

Retiring Governor of Pa. Appoints Two New Censors

As one of his last official acts, Gifford Pinchot, retiring Governor of Pennsylvania, has appointed Mrs. Marie Connor Biestel, of Greensburg, and Mrs. Geneva Gerlach Riegel, of Hazelton, inspectors on the Board of M. P. Censors at a salary of $1,500 per. These two additions to the board brings the total personnel of inspectors up to fifteen, the largest number that the board has had since its creation.

Heavy New Eng. Building

More Theatres to be Erected During This Year Than in 1926, Judging From Present Plans

CONSTRUCTION of the new theatres in New England during 1927 promises to eclipse the construction program of 1926, when the largest number of new motion picture houses in the history of that section, providing the greatest number of seats in any one year, were completed.

There is a vast amount of construction plans still in the embryo stage, that is, prospective owners are seeking sites, are buying options on sites, are consulting with architects and as yet have not actually accepted plans nor awarded contracts. These are not considered at this time because of the uncertainty attending actual construction. Some of the construction planned for this year includes the erection of the B. F. Keith Memorial Theatre in Boston; outside Boston, Springfield will lead in theatre construction, with three theatres planned thus far this year. These are the Memorial Theatre, to be erected by S. Z. Poli on a site adjoining the Municipal group of city buildings; the Marcus Loew Theatre, to be erected at a cost of $1,000,000 on the site of the Hotel Massasoit; the third theatre for Springfield will be located at Center and School streets and will cost about $150,000. It will be operated by a syndicate.

In Worcester, Daniels and Hodgdon are having plans drawn for a large theatre, for which a site has been purchased. In Revere, Mass., John A. DiPesa will build at Broadway and Prospect avenues. Robert A. Olinder of Boston will build a $400,000 house on Beacon Street, Brookline, to be known as the Kenmore Theatre. At Dedham, Mass., the Dedham Community Theatres Corporation have already started construction of a theatre which is expected to be completed about September 1st.

A new theatre is planned for the Charlestown district of Boston by P. J. Marget; construction will be started about March 1st. David Stoneman of Boston is to build a new theatre on Park Street, Milford; the site is now being cleared.

The new theatre in Plainville, Conn., sponsored by the Sequassen Corporation, is well under way and will be ready by early spring. Frank C. Leavitt of Sanford, Me., is to start March 1st on the construction of a theatre on Main Street.

Relief Fund in Montreal

Exhibitors Quickly Tender Aid After Tragic Fire Panic in Laurier Palace Theatre

SWIFT action was taken by the Montreal Theatre Managers' Association and other agencies in the industry toward relieving distress caused by the tragic fire panic January 9, in the Laurier Palace Theatre, Montreal, which cost 77 lives, mostly children.

The Montreal exhibitors pledged a fund of $10,000 immediately for funeral expenses of the victims, with the expectation that the amount would go later to $20,000 or $25,000. N. L. Nathanson, of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, went from Toronto to render any possible service in connection with the disaster.

The fire itself was small and was quickly brought under control, and most of the audience of 1,000 filed out in orderly fashion. The panic started at the balcony door, when men, women and children, fear-stricken, fought to get out, and many were trampled.

A few hours after the tragedy, A. Lawand, proprietor of the theatre, and Michel Arlie, manager, were taken into custody as witnesses for the inquest. Lawand was charged with admitting children under 16 unaccompanied. The employees were released, and Lawand's bail was fixed at $500 which he furnished.

The City of Montreal issued an order to take effect January 12, prohibiting special presentations in any picture theatre not equipped with a regularly fitted stage including a proscenium wall, asbestos curtain, fire sprinklers and stage exits. About ten of the large film playhouses of Montreal were affected by the sudden order.

Lawand admitted at the Fire Commissioner's Court on January 11 that he had previously been convicted a number of times for overcrowding and for the use of posters that had not been approved by the police. He also admitted that he had had fires in his Maisonneuve Theatre, in his bowling alleys and in his home. Evidence of witnesses showed that children were standing in the aisles of the Laurier Palace when the fire panic occurred.

Columbia Pictures Opens Offices in Japan

THE firm of Madden and Company, whose representative, V. Garfield Madden of Tokyo, sailed from Vancouver this week, has become exclusive franchise holders for Columbia Pictures product in Japan and her Far East dependencies, Korea, Formosa and Southern Manchuria. The new arrangement was agreed upon in New York prior to the holidays between Joe Brandt and Jack Cohen, president and treasurer of Columbia Pictures respectively, and Mr. Madden, representing his firm.

Offices have been established at the Murai Bank Building in the Japanese capital. Mr. Madden will be assisted by W. S. Kingsbury, formerly with Fox and First National in Japan but who is now exclusively attached to the motion picture activities of Madden and Company.

New $1,000,000 Loew House in Virginia

Considering Site; Deal Closed for Richmond Site; Universal Plans House in Cleveland

A NEW 2,500-seat Loew theatre is promised the theatre-goers of Richmond, Va., with the announcement that Marcus Loew has definitely closed a deal for a site at Grace and Sixth streets in that city. Construction will start within sixty days and more than $1,000,000 will be involved in the project. The theatre, when completed, will offer a combination policy of vaudeville and feature pictures, and will be modeled along Spanish architectural lines.

Confirmation was obtained from E. A. Schiller of Loew's, Inc., that his corporation is negotiating in Harrisburg, Pa., for a site in the business center of the city for the erection of an additional theatre. The Loew interests have for several years successfully operated Loew's Regent picture house in that city, which, it is understood, will continue to operate after the new proposed building is erected.

Important acquisitions of theatres continue in New York State. Last week the Schine brothers took over the Robbins houses in Utica, Watertown and Syracuse, as was predicted in the "News" a week or so ago. The Kallet brothers, of Oneida, also closed a deal by which they will acquire two theatres in Ilion that have been owned and operated by Whitney, Young and Pierce. There was an unconfirmed rumor along film row to the effect that Commerford interests of Pennsylvania are associated with the Kallets in the deal. Early in the spring, Loew interests will erect theatres in Syracuse and Utica, according to all reports, while the Stanley interests are planning to build a theatre in Utica.

The setting of plans for a new $500,000 suburban theatre in Cleveland, O., has just been announced at the home office of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises. It will be built as a combined store building and theatre and has been leased for twenty-five years to the U-B Theatrical Enterprises, the company formed by Universal and Dr. B. I. Brody, to hold and operate the former Brody chain in that city. The theatre will have a capacity of 1,800 seats.

At the second annual stockholders' meeting of the Carolina Theatres, Inc., at Asheville, which is headed by E. D. Turner of Asheville, the board of directors was increased from six to eight members, with an increase in the capital stock of the company authorized from $100,000, to $300,000, effective immediately. The houses now owned and operated by the company include the Rivoli at Hickory, the Concord Theatre at Concord, the Lexington Theatre in that city, the Rivoli at Lincolnton, the West Asheville Carolina Theatre in West Asheville, the two new theatres in Statesville and Elizabeth City, and several houses throughout South Carolina.

R. C. Seery

Seery Again Named F. N. Mid-West District Manager

R. C. Seery, who for a number of years was manager of the Mid-West district for First National, has again been named district manager by Western Salesmanager Ned Marin. He will have supervision over the Chicago branch and those of Detroit, Milwaukee, Omaha and Des Moines. In addition he will continue to manage the Chicago office.

All Units Now Arbitrate

Resumed Throughout Country States Pettijohn Following Meeting in Minneapolis

ARBITRATION is again in force everywhere declared Charles C. Pettijohn of the Hays office, who returned to New York this week following a meeting in Minneapolis of the opposing factors in the Northwest territory at which all differences were settled. On January third a conference of interested parties in the Michigan territory likewise resulted in the resumption of arbitration, with a new and very specific set of rules to govern the future conduct of the board, formulated.

The Minneapolis meeting was attended by representatives of the M.P.T.O. of the Northwest and the board of directors of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade, Mr. Pettijohn and W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Exhibitors Association.

While all present concurred in the opinion regarding the efficacy of arbitration, it was agreed that this means of settling differences was only of value if the six men comprising the arbitration board sit as judges and not as partisans. On the contract question it was declared that since motion pictures are leased under the terms of a written contract both parties, buyer and seller, are obligated to know the contents of that document; also, that the adoption of the uniform exhibition contract has proved of great value in accomplishing such purpose.

Both parties to the contract are also obligated to see to it that any special agreements not covered by standard clauses are plainly embodied and set out in the contract, as it is realized that certain unforeseen contingencies may, and have, arisen. It is also taken into consideration that every misunderstanding that happens cannot be covered by specific terms in the contract and it was agreed that it is at this point that equitable relief should be granted.

It is the contention of all those present at this meeting that practically all misunderstandings can be avoided and such situations corrected as they come up if the parties to a controversy can be brought together and, irrespective of legal technicalities, come to an agreement upon what is right and wrong under the circumstances.

While agreeing on these questions the distributors and exhibitors at the gathering did not mean to suggest or expect that contracts shall not be lived up to by both parties but, that those taking part in the discussion will at all times devote their best efforts to provide for any such emergencies not covered by technical terms of contracts, all to the end that arbitration shall mean not only the enforcement of contracts but fair dealing, righting of any wrongs, or correction of such unfortunate or unforeseen situations.

Building Begun on Warners' Hollywood Theatre

Actual construction has been started on the theatre which Warner Bros. are building on the corner of Hollywood Boulevard and Wilcox Avenue. Jack Warner, Raymond Schrock, William Koenig, Darryl Francis Zanuck, Dolores Costello and others were present at the ceremonies when the work was formerly begun with the breaking of a bottle on the steam shovel scoop. Warner Bros. assert that this edifice when completed will be on a par with the finest cinema palaces extant. Its seating capacity of 3,000 will give the house the distinction of being the largest in the film metropolis and will secure for Warner Bros. adequate first-run representation there, it is said.

Mrs. Parham Charlotte Better Films Com. Delegate

The Charlotte Better Film Committee recently had their regular monthly meeting and Mrs. J. A. Parham, president of the committee, was elected delegate to attend the National Conference of Better Films in New York the latter part of January. It was a very constructive meeting and a vote was taken to create a Criticism Committee within the Review Committee, whose duty will be to submit each month criticism of pictures shown in Charlotte, these criticisms to be discussed by the whole organization at their meeting and the information passed on to the Hays organization.

Launch Production on Two Paramount Pictures

Gilda Gray's "Cabaret" and "Knockout Reilly," featuring Richard Dix, were put into production this week at the Paramount Long Island studio. Robert Vignola is directing the Gilda Gray unit in the cast of which are Mona Palmer, Tom Moore, Chester Conklin, William Harrigan, Jack Egan, Charles Beyer and Anna Dewey. The story, by John Oliver, was adapted by Becky Gardiner. Malcolm St. Clair is directing Richard Dix for the first time in a story which was adapted by Pierre Colling and Kenneth Raisbeck.

Thomas Meighan has also been busy for a week at the Astoria plant working on a film tentatively titled "Blind Alleys." Two more pictures, "Rubber Heels," Ed Wynn's first screen effort, and Herbert Brenon's next production are to be started within a few days.

Appointment of MacBride to Ontario Censor Board Hinted

M. M. MacBride, former mayor of Brantford, Ont., and former member for Brant South in the Ontario Legislature, is slated for appointment to the chairmanship of the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, Toronto, by Premier Howard Ferguson, it is intimated. The position has been vacant since last spring, when Major A. S. Hamilton died after a lengthy illness.

Latest Columbia Picture Nears Completion

"The Price of Honor," Edward H. Griffith's production for Columbia Pictures, is nearing completion at the company's Hollywood studio. Dorothy Revier, the featured player, is supported by Malcolm McGregor, William V. Mong, Irville Alderson, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Dan Mason.

E. O. Brooks Executive in Pathe Production Dept

ELMER PEARSON, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc., has transferred E. Oswald Brooks from the sales department to the production department where he will be in charge of serial production in the East.

E. Oswald Brooks

Mr. Brooks joined Pathe in 1918 when he was assigned to organize the exploitation department which he managed for a year. He then became serial sales manager and during the five years he held that post he became thoroughly acquainted with the varied phases of serial production and selling. Since last May he has held the position of Southern division sales manager from which he is transferred to his new post.

Mr. Brooks leaves Monday with the entire production company which will make exteriors in Charleston, S.C., on "Crimson Flash," new Patheserial.

L. Pizor Heads Eastern Pa. Exhibitor Body

NOMINATED without any dissenting voice, Lewen Pizor will act as president of the Eastern Pennsylvania unit during 1927. His election will be a routine procedure at the organization's meeting this month when the secretary will cast one ballot for the slate. Other officers, nominated without opposition, are Will Cohen, Philadelphia, first vice-president; Harlan E. Woehrle, Easton, second vice-president; Louis Appel, York, third vice-president; E. M. Fay, Philadelphia, fourth vice-president; George P. Aarons, secretary, and M. Lessy, treasurer.

The association has named a committee to confer with the Film Board of Trade on alleged violations of an agreement to refuse to serve non-theatrical institutions with film less than one year old.

In and Out of Town

AL LICHTMAN, general manager of distribution of United Artists for United States and Canada, left New York Friday, January 7, on the Twentieth Century for Los Angeles. Mr. Lichtman expects to be gone for three weeks. He will confer with Joseph M. Schenck on the possible line-up of films for United Artists during 1927 and with West Coast Theatre officials in Los Angeles regarding the new United Artists product.

EDWARD GOLDEN, president of the Golden Distributing Corporation of Boston and New Haven, is in New York for a conference with I. E. Chadwick, president of Chadwick Pictures, who returned from Los Angeles last week. Golden handles Chadwick product in New England.

HARRY LUSTIG, West Coast division manager for Warner Bros., arrived in New York Sunday for the first time in more than a year. He came to attend a conference of Warner Bros. division managers. Incidentally Mr. Lustig had something to be thankful for, as he was on the section of the Twentieth Century behind the one wrecked Sunday morning and came near being on the section that was ditched.

J. E. STOREY, assistant general manager of Pathe, who has been in charge of West Coast production activities for the past year, arrived in New York Tuesday, January 11, for a production talk with Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager.

William Boyd, the original Sergeant Quirt of the stage play, "What Price Glory," plays the role of a "has been" prize fighter in "Knockout Reilly," Richard Dix's new starring picture for Paramount. This will be Boyd's fourth picture. He played twelve years ago in "Stop Thief," produced by George Fitzmaurice. About five years ago he was seen with Ethel Barrymore in "The Kiss of Hate" and with Anita Stewart in "Virtuous Wives."

Alberta Vaughn Terminates Contract With F.B.O.

Alberta Vaughn, who has progressed from comedy series to starring roles in full-length features during her association with F.B.O., has ended the three-year connection and will shortly announce new plans. The arrangement was entirely amicable, it is understood, it being felt that the company was not in a position to supply her with the type of vehicles which would best exploit her particular talents. Adamae Vaughn, her sister, and a 1927 Wampas Baby Star, has also left F.B.O.

Export Corporation Formed to Sell for A.C.A.

Edward L. Klein, well-known distributor of motion pictures abroad, has been elected president and general manager of the newly formed International A.C.A. corporation, which will handle the foreign release of all the productions of the American Cinema Association. L. J. Rosett becomes vice-president and Etta L. Klein secretary and treasurer. Harold K. Moss is publicity manager. Klein will shortly leave for abroad to complete a chain of foreign offices and arrange for distribution of the A.C.A. product.

Schoenbaum Gets New Contract With Famous

A new contract with Paramount has been given C. Edgar Schoenbaum, dean of the Paramount studio cinematographers. Mr. Schoenbaum, who has thirteen years of experience behind him, is now photographing "The Mysterious Rider," a John Waters directed vehicle featuring Jack Holt and Betty Jewel. He was responsible for the camera work of "The Vanishing American," "Forlorn River," "Born to the West," and "The Man of the Forest."

Joseph Schildkraut Signs De Mille Star Contract

AS an outcome of Joseph Schildkraut's portrayal of the role of Judas in "The King of Kings," Cecil B. De Mille has rewarded the actor with a new contract by the terms of which Schildkraut will star in De Mille-Metropolitan productions during 1927.

Joseph Schildkraut

Upon completing his role in "The King of Kings" the younger Schildkraut will move to the Metropolitan studio to assume the stellar role in "The Heart Thief," a screen version of "The Highwayman," by Lajos Biro. This play was one of Schildkraut's last stage vehicles before he definitely cast his lot with the films. Nils Olaf Chrisander will direct "The Heart Thief."

Lasky Offers Prizes for Best Famous Pictures

Gold Medal and $17,500 in Cash Bonuses to Directors of Three Outstanding in 1927

IN an effort to set the highest standard possible for film entertainment at the Paramount Theatre, New York City, Jesse L. Lasky announces the offer of a gold medal and cash bonuses totaling $17,500 to the directors of the three best Paramount pictures to be played at the Paramount Theatre in the 52 weeks beginning last January first.

The director of the picture judged best will receive a gold medal and a bonus of $10,000, the director of the second best will receive $5,000 in cash and an award of $2,500 will be made the director of the third highest rating production. The judges will be Adolph Zukor, S. R. Kent, general manager of the company, Mr. Lasky and Sam Katz, president of Publix Theatres, Inc. The awards will be based on quality of production, cost and the directorial contribution to the picture.

This plan is in accordance with the company's policy of showing nothing but the best Paramount pictures at the Paramount Theatre, said Mr. Lasky. "It is to focus the thought and attention of our directors upon the strict requirements of the Paramount Theatre that we offer these prizes. No pictures will go into production in either of our studios unless in story, cast and production value they measure up to the demands of the Paramount Theatre. And no director can remain with our organization who, given these values, does not produce pictures of this high quality.

"For the rest of the year our directors will have to follow a stiff pace, as in the coming weeks we have booked some of our best pictures into the Paramount. These include 'Blonde or Brunette,' starring Adolphe Menjou; W. C. Fields in 'The Potters,' Richard Dix in 'Paradise for Two,' 'New York,' with Ricardo Cortez, Lois Wilson, Estelle Taylor and William Powell; Clara Bow in Elinor Glyn's picture, 'It,' and 'Love's Greatest Mistake.'

"We feel that in making this offer we not only are benefiting our own productions and the Paramount Theatre, but we also are performing a great service to theatre owners throughout the world and to the public as well. Everywhere in the country magnificent theatres have been built upon a basis of a weekly change of pictures. The pictures which are shown in these theatres form the backbone of our industry—they are its bread and butter. Moreover, they are the staple entertainment for millions of people throughout the world. Whatever enchances the screen entertainment in these theatres, therefore, is of immense benefit and it is for this reason that we are offering this prize."

"U's" Five Super-Films

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" Heads List for New Season; Company's Best Directors for Specials

ADVICES contained in a wire sent to Universal's home office in New York from Carl Laemmle, now at the producing plant in Hollywood, state that the company will release five super-productions during the 1927-28 season. These pictures, comprising adaptations of well-known novels and original stories, will be made with especial care and will have the best obtainable directors and casts, it is said. The list includes the following pictures, now being produced or ready for filming: "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Show Boat," "Love Me and the World is Mine," "The Big Gun" and "The Man Who Laughs."

Of the five listed, it is expected that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be the outstanding Universal picture of the year. It is an adaptation of the popular ante-bellum novel by Harriet Beecher Stowe, and is being produced by Harry Pollard with a cast comprising James B. Lowe, who portrays the role of Uncle Tom; Virginia Gray as Little Eva; George Siegman as Simon Legree; Arthur Edmund Carewe as George Harris; Lucien Littlefield as Lawyer Marks; Margarita Fischer as Eliza, and a number of prominent players in minor roles.

Part of the action was filmed at the Mississippi River Basin last Fall and the company is now working at the Universal Studio. The script of "Show Boat," the Edna Ferber best-seller, is now being worked out by Charles Kenyon and the roles of Magnolia Hawks and Gaylord Ravenal will probably be portrayed by Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry, respectively. No director has been assigned as yet, for all Universal top-notch men are tied up for months to come and an outside man is being sought.

The same situation as regards directors is true of "The Man Who Laughs," Victor Hugo's novel which Universal has decided to film. It has been decided, however, that Conrad Veidt is to play the name role with Mary Philbin as the probable selection for the role of Dea, the blind heroine. "Love Me and the World is Mine," an adaptation of "The Affairs of Hannerl," by Rudolph Bartsch, is a dramatic romance, directed by E. A. Dupont and Edward Sloman; Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry are featured.

The fifth production is "The Big Gun," a story of the American Navy, written by Richard Barry, who is also preparing the scenario. It is probable that George Lewis will have the featured role. Lynn Reynolds has been assigned to direct.

Warner Division Mgrs. Confer on Extended Runs

COINCIDENT with the release of the Warner Bros.' extended run productions, a conference of division managers was held this week at the Warner Bros. home office with Sam E. Morris and Morris Safier, general manager of distribution and head of the extended run sales department respectively, to discuss future plans for the distribution of these pictures. It was decided that the division manager would henceforth handle the extended run films in their respective territories, working in conjunction with special field men selling the product under the supervision of Mr. Safier.

The conference was also called for the purpose of having the managers meet Edwin Silverman, the new Warner Bros. sales manager, and Morris Safier, head of the extended run department. Division managers present were J. S. Hebrew, H. E. Elder, Nat Barach, E. F. Lyon, C. C. Ezell, Arthur Abeles, A. H. Fischer and Harry Lustig.

Richard Halliday Director of Gloria Swanson Publicity

Beginning with "Sunya," Gloria Swanson's first production for United Artists, Richard Halliday is at present working as publicity director for Miss Swanson, according to an announcement by Thomas Allen Moore, vice-president of the Swanson Producing Corporation. Mr. Halliday was formerly associated with "Liberty Magazine" and the "New York Daily News" as motion picture editor. He was later employed by George Palmer Putnam and John N. Wheeler as motion picture broker.

Taylor Will Direct "Spring Fever" for M-G-M

"Spring Fever," Vincent Lawrence's golf comedy, which was produced on the Broadway stage last season, will be directed by Sam Taylor for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company. No statement of the cast of "Spring Fever" has been made but the picture is scheduled to go into production some time this month. This will be Taylor's second directorial vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the first being "Exit Smiling," featuring Beatrice Lillie.

Evelyn Brent Feminine Lead in Hecht's "Underworld"

Upon the return of Evelyn Brent to Hollywood from New York, where she is now playing opposite Thomas Meighan in the latter's new picture, she will begin work on her newest assignment, the leading feminine role in "Underworld," the Ben Hecht story, written directly for the screen.

Louise Fazenda is Cast for "Cradle Snatchers"

Upon the completion of a Louise Fazenda starring vehicle, "The Gay Old Bird," Warner Brothers have loaned the comedienne to Fox Films for the featured role in "The Cradle Snatchers" which Howard Hawkes will direct.

"Bugle Call" First Coogan Under New Contract

As his first starring role under his new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Jackie Coogan will appear as the son of an army commandant and mascot of a regiment in an original story based on frontier life after the Civil War entitled "The Bugle Call." Hunt Stromberg will produce the vehicle on the exact locations described in the story, near Fort Laramie, Wyo. Production on the feature will start in the near future. "Buttons," previously announced as the juvenile's first starring film under the new contract, follows "The Bugle Call" on the company's schedule.

A. C. A. Acquires Screen Rights to Guest Poems

The American Cinema Association, of which A. J. Moeller is president, announced on December 23rd the acquisition of exclusive world rights to the screen adaptation of the poems of Edgar A. Guest. The negotiations were concluded between the officials of the film company and representatives of the George Matthew Adams Service which controls syndicate rights to the poet's work.

The first of the series will be released on February 1st through the twenty-five exchanges of the American Cinema Association. These single-reel jewels, as they have been called, will embrace a wide and varied range. They will be produced under the direction of Charles L. Glett and photographed by G. Walter Scott.

This announcement comes on the heels of the company's nationalization and the decision to release eighteen Hartford productions this year besides the remaining six on the present schedule.

May Robson Added to Cast of "King of Kings"

May Robson, stage actress who joined the Cecil B. De Mille film stock company six months ago, has won one of the important roles in the De Mille production of "The King of Kings." She will appear in the Calvary sequence. The De Mille effort entered the New Year with but a short production time to go. It is listed as the largest production ever made in the West Coast film colony, it is said; it has been under way since August 24, 1926.

Rudolph Schildkraut in Cobb's "Turkish Delight"

Rudolph Schildkraut is to portray one of the principal roles in "Turkish Delight," Irvin S. Cobb's first original story for the screen which Paul Sloane will direct at the DeMille studio.

"Ankles Preferred" Is Madge Bellamy's Latest Picture

The title of Madge Bellamy's latest starring vehicle is "Ankles Preferred," which has just been put into production at the West Coast studio of Fox Films. J. G. Blystone is directing.

End "King" Filming Jan. 17

De Mille Allows Eight Weeks for Editing; Other Productions Progressing Rapidly

According to advices received at Producers Distributing Company's New York offices, filming of "The King of Kings," Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed production, will end on Jan. 17. Twenty sets, used in the picturization, will be left standing for several months in case the necessity for retakes arises; Mr De Mille and Jeanie Macpherson, author of the screen story, will devote eight weeks to the editing of the picture.

Of the principals in this picture, H. B. Warner is to "rest" for a time, Joseph Schildkraut starts immediately "The Heart Thief" for the Metropolitan, Ernest Torrence goes into a stellar part at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Robert Edeson will appear with Marie Prevost in "The Night Bride," and Rudolph Schildkraut has three big roles prepared for him.

Work on other productions being made at De Mille and Metropolitan studios is progressing rapidly. In addition to the De Mille picture, another production on which camera work will be completed during this month is "White Gold," Jetta Goudal's current starring vehicle which William K. Howard is directing. Pictures to go into production during January include "Turkish Delight," featuring Julia Faye and Rudolph Schildkraut, with Paul Sloane directing, "The Little Adventuress," directed by William De Mille and starring Vera Reynolds, "Vanity," which Donald Crisp will direct with Leatrice Joy in the stellar role, and "The Country Doctor," featuring Rudolph Schildkraut.

At the Metropolitan studio, Marie Prevost began the New Year by starring in "The Night Bride" under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, with Harrison Ford as her leading man. "The Heart Thief," in which Joseph Schildkraut makes his bow as a star under a newly-signed De Mille-Metropolitan contract, with Nils Olaf Chrisander directing, will be started at once, and a little later filming on the screen version of "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary" will get under way under the directorial guidance of Scott Sidney.

"Convoy" Title of Kane's Navy Special for First

"Convoy" is the title finally chosen for Robert T. Kane's navy special which First National will release in March. The all-star cast includes Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman, Lawrence Gray, Ian Keith, William Collier, Jr., Vincent Seranno, Gail Kane and Jack Ackroyd. The picture, based on "The Song of the Dragon," a short story by John Tainter Foote, tells of the Navy's participation in the World War. Almost a million dollars went into its production, it is said. After three months in the making it is now being cut at the Cosmopolitan studio by Joe Boyel, director, Paul Maschke, film editor, and Louis Sherwin, author of the titles. Ernest Haller headed the camera staff on the picture.

Six Fox Films Completed

Six in Production and Equal Number Ready for Filming; Winfield R. Sheehan Supervising

AN announcement from Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, states that six productions were completed this week, six more are in work and a like amount are past the scenario stage and are ready for filming.

The completed productions are "The Music Master," an adaptation of the Belasco-Warfield stage combination which Allan Dwan directed with Alec B. Francis in the name role and a large supporting cast: "The Last Trail," a Tom Mix starring vehicle based on the story by Zane Grey; Tony, Mix's horse is featured, and Carmelita Geraghty has the feminine lead; another is "The Monkey Talks," a Raoul Walsh production in which Olive Borden is starred with Jacques Lerner playing the monkey role.

Also in this group is "Upstream," a John Ford production, the cast for which includes Nancy Nash, Earle Foxe, Raymond Hitchcock, Ted McNamara, Sammy Cohen and Francis Ford. "Stage Madness," fifth in the group is a Victor Schertzinger production featuring Virginia Valli, Lou Tellegen, Richard Walling and Tulio Carminati; last on the completed list is "The Wedding Ring."

Among the pictures in work is "Sunrise," F. W. Murnau's production on which he is now filming the lighter scenes with the aid of William Counselman. "A.W.O.L.", a comedy feature, is also in the camera stage. It was written especially for Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara and Benjamin Stoloff is directing. Two Westerns in this group are a Tom Mix starring picture, "The Broncho Twister," directed by Orville Dull and in which Helene Costello, borrowed from Warner Bros., is playing the feminine lead, and "The Whispering Sage" which Scott Dunlap is directing with Buck Jones in the stellar role. It is an original story by Harry Sinclair and Joseph Noel; Natalie Joyce appears opposite Jones.

"The Secret Studio" and "Ankles Preferred" are the other two productions now being filmed. The former is a mystery story with Olive Borden in the featured role, directed by Harry Beaumont and the last named is a comedy original by James Hamilton with Madge Bellamy featured under direction of J. G. Blystone.

Included in the pictures scheduled for filming are "The Seventh Heaven," with Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in the leads, "Cradle Snatchers," which Howard Hawks will direct with Louise Fazenda prominent in the cast; "Is Zat So?" with George O'Brien, Edmund Lowe and Kathryn Perry in the leading roles; "The Heart of Salome," with Alma Rubens, directed by Victor Schertzinger and "Rich But Honest," adapted from Arthur Somers Roche's story in "Cosmopolitan" which will be directed by Albert Ray.

At the Eastern studios Allan Dwan is getting ready to start filming of "The Joy Girl," in which Olive Borden has the title role, assisted by J. Farrell McDonald, who has an important supporting role. The exteriors for this production will be filmed in Florida.

First Nat'l Feb. Releases

List Includes Colleen Moore, Harry Langdon, and Anna Q. Nilsson Attractions

"ORCHIDS AND ERMINE," "Long Pants," "Easy Pickings," and "An Affair of the Follies" are the First National pictures scheduled for release in February. The first is listed for February 6th, and the others, the 13th, 20th and 27th respectively.

Colleen Moore is the star of "Orchids and Ermine," a John McCormick production in which Jack Mulhall has the masculine lead. Carey Wilson prepared the story and scenario and Alfred A. Santell directed.

Harry Langdon's starring vehicle, "Long Pants," is said to be his most ambitious production to date; the comedian has been engaged with its making, literally day and night, for the last three months. The support is contributed by Alma Bennett, Gladys Brockwell, Al Roscoe, Frankie Darro and Priscilla Bonner. It is probable that the comedian will bring personally the print of his latest effort to New York as he contemplates a trip East following the cutting and editing of the picture.

"Easy Pickings," in which George Archainbaud directed Anna Q. Nilsson, featured, and Kenneth Harlan and Billy Bevan, is a mystery-drama adapted from a play by William A. Burton and Paul A. Cruger. The photoplay will reach the public long before the play, which is now in its try-out stages in small towns on the Pacific Coast.

Al Rockett produced "An affair of the Follies," the last of the First National February releases. Its principals are Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes. Support comes from Arthur Stone, Arthur Hoyt and Bertram Marburgh. Millard Webb directed. The source of the story is "Here Y'Are Brother," a short story by Dixie Wilson which June Mathis adapted to the screen.

United Artists Sign Three Authors to Do Originals

F. Scott Fitzgerald, Donald McGibney and Wallace Smith are to write original stories for United Artists as the result of an agreement reached Tuesday of this week between the authors and John W. Considine, Jr., president of Feature Productions, Inc., and general manager of Joseph M. Schenck Productions, Inc.

Mr. Fitzgerald's first story will be for Constance Talmadge's initial United Artists picture. The author arrived in New York a short time ago after spending three years in Paris. He goes to Hollywood immediately.

McGibney's first under the United Artists is intended for Estelle Taylor and an all-star cast. He is responsible for "Two Arabian Nights," which Lewis Milestone is filming as a Caddo Production for United Artists release. Mr. Smith will write the second Constance Talmadge story. He has just completed "The Dove," the first United Artists picture featuring Norma Talmadge.

Long Term Contract Signed by Lucien Prival

Before departing for the West Coast, Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager of First National Pictures, Inc., announced the signing by Lucien Prival of a long term contract with First National. The young character actor made his debut in First National pictures some months ago in "Puppets," Al Rockett's production starring Milton Sills. He was also cast in "The Great Deception" and "Just Another Blonde." More recently he completed a role in Robert T. Kane's forthcoming production, as yet untitled, featuring Ben Lyon and Mary Brian.

Cortez Negri's Leading Man in "Confession"

The leading male role in "Confession," Pola Negri's next Paramount picture, will be played by Ricardo Cortez. His role will be unusual, it is said, in that he will portray both a hero and a villain throughout the film. Lothar Mendes will direct under the supervision of Erich Pommer. "Confession" is an original story by Ernest Vajda, founded upon the life of Rachel, Parisian stage favorite of fifty years ago.

Select Principals for Herbert Brenon Paramount Film

Paramount officials have decided upon the cast for Herbert Brenon's next production for Paramount, which is to go into work within a few days at the company's studio on Long Island. The principals for this film, for which no title has yet been chosen, will be Alice Joyce, Neil Hamilton, Ivy Harris and Holbrook Blinn.

Tiffany Distributing Colorart Fashion Picture

A one-reel fashion picture photographed in Technicolor and entitled "Clothes Make the Woman," was recently completed by Colorart Pictures, Inc., for distribution through Tiffany exchanges. This color reel, which shows the latest in Parisian gowns and dresses, has Sigrid Holmquist, Swedish screen star, as the featured player. It first presents the star as a poorly dressed girl and through a series of episodes gradually changes her apparel into that of an extra well dressed woman. Several of these Colorart reels have been shown in the Paramount, Capitol and the Brooklyn Strand theatres in New York.

Sterling Buys Two Stories for 1927-28 Season

Sterling Pictures has just purchased screen rights of two unpublished stories by Wallace Irwing for conversion into Sterling productions in the company's 1927-28 season. The first story in question is "Mothers of Today"; the other, "Brother in Arms." They will be given unusually elaborate productions with stellar casts and will probably be among the first of the coming season's Sterling pictures.

"The Poor Nut" Is Put Into Work by Jess Smith

Another production intended for First National release gets under way this week on the West Coast. It is "The Poor Nut," which will be brought to the screen by Jess Smith, who heads his own producing organization, Jess Smith Productions, Inc. The producer's plans call for the use of several prominent track athletes in a track meet scene which is the climax of the picture.

Tiffany Completes Twelve of Twenty "Gems"

With the completion of the filming of "The Broken Gate," Tiffany Productions, Inc., will have completed twelve of the twenty Tiffany "Gems" scheduled for the season of 1926-27.

Change in F.P.-L. West Coast Scenario Dept.

DUE to a recent reorganization and strengthening of the executive personnel of the Famous Players-Lasky West Coast scenario department, E. Lloyd Sheldon and Louis D. Lighton are the two new editors-in-chief, each to be occupied with a definite type of duty.

Mr. Sheldon, heretofore in charge of the editorial work, will confine his efforts to roadshow productions, long run specials and the Bebe Daniels unit. Mr. Lighton, who formed for seven years with his wife, Hope Loring, the writing team of Loring and Lighton, henceforth assumes charge of all other feature productions, with the exception of the Daniels unit, with which Sheldon will remain because of his long and successful association with that unit. The present head of the reading department, Fanny Franks, will become business manager for both editors-in-chief.

May McAvoy Signs Long Term Warner Contract

MAY McAVOY has signed a long term contract to appear in Warner Brothers starring productions. Her first work will be "Matinee Ladies," already in the course of production at the Hollywood studio of the company.

Miss McAvoy has previously appeared in two Warner Brothers' productions, "Three Women" and "Lady Windermere's Fan," both directed by Ernst Lubitsch.

L. Hanson Opposite L. Gish in M-G-M's "The Enemy"

The male lead opposite Lillian Gish in the latter's starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, "The Enemy," has been given Lars Hanson, the Swedish stage and screen actor who was seen in "The Scarlet Letter." Victor Seastrom, director of the Hawthorne tale, will again direct the Hanson-Gish combination in this screen version of the Channing Pollock stage play. As Miss Gish has just returned to the Coast after a vacation in New York, and as Seastrom is in readiness to begin work, it is likely that "The Enemy" will be put into production before the end of January. June Mathis has prepared the scenario.

"Moulders of Men" Title of F.B.O.'s Elks Special

The exploitation title of "Moulders of Men" has supplanted "Hello, Bill," the original title of the Elks' special production, which has just gone into work on the F. B. O. lot. It is claimed that exhibitors playing this feature will have over a million and a half boosters in view of the fact that the film will be of, by and for the glorification of the Elks, and that the story was written by John Chapman Hilders, managing editor of the Elks Magazine. F.B.O. has assigned Conway Tearle to play the lead with Margaret Morris as the chief feminine player. Danny O'Shea and Frankie Darro will also handle prominent parts in the picture.

Schenck Purchases "The Woman Disputed"

"The Woman Disputed," a play by Denison Clift which concerns the love episode of a French girl during the late war, has been purchased from A. H. Woods by Joseph M. Schenck as a vehicle for Norma Talmadge. The story, which will be a United Artists production, is founded on an episode in "Boule de Suif," a short story by Guy de Maupassant. Miss Talmadge will play the role that Ann Harding portrayed on the stage.

"Becky" to Be Screened as Cosmopolitan Film

"Becky," the newspaper serial story which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recently purchased, is to be produced as a Cosmopolitan feature for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. John P. McCarthy has been chosen to direct the picture, which is likely to go into production soon. Marion Blackton is adapting "Becky" to the screen. The story is an original by Rayner Selig.

Bessie Love to Co-star With Ray in "The American"

George K. Spoor and J. Stuart Blackton, producers of "The American," the first natural vision (stereoscopic) screen drama, have secured the services of Bessie Love to act opposite Charles Ray in "The American." Ward Crane has already been signed for the part of the heavy. Blackton is selecting additional members of the cast. The Fine Arts studio is the place where the picture will be made.

The adaptation and continuity have been completed by Marion Constance Blackton. Acting as production manager will be James Stuart Blackton, Jr., just returned from a year spent with the Spoor company in Chicago.

"Red, White and Blue" Dramatizes Gov't Work

Education as well as entertainment will figure strongly in the making of "Red, White and Blue," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's comedy-drama founded on the Citizens' National Defense training camps which is to be produced in co-operation with the Government. The story has just been finished by Byron Morgan and Sam Wood is preparing to start immediate direction with a cast made up of Marceline Day, featured in the feminine lead, Karl Dane and George K. Arthur. Officers of the California training camp, held last year at Del Monte, will act in the capacity of technical advisers on the new M-G-M picture.

Dorothy Sebastian and Bert Roach in New Vidor Film

Dorothy Sebastian and Bert Roach have joined the cast of King Vidor's original story of the average American boy and girl, which the director will start photographing shortly. James Murray, a discovery of Vidor, will portray the masculine lead and Eleanor Boardman the chief feminine role. This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is scheduled to go into early production.

Universal Signs Ted Wells, New Western Star

Ted Wells of Texas is to become a Western star in a series of Universal pictures to be made under the personal supervision of William Lord Wright. Screen stories are now in preparation for his vehicles. Wells was discovered by Universal officials while enacting minor roles in pictures. As yet no definite work has been received as to a director for Wells.

Fifth "Wisecracker" Number Put Into Production

Del Andrews, F.B.O. director, has the fifth story of the H. C. Witwer "Wisecrackers" in the course of production. Danny O'Shea plays the pugilist role, while Lorraine Eason and Thelma Hill portray the two feminine principals. Al Cooke and Kit Guard provide the comedy.

"Duck Soup," Educational-Vernon Comedy, Completed

Production has been finished on "Duck Soup," a new Educational-Bobby Vernon comedy in which the star sets forth a typical country boy characterization.

Educators Guests at "Flaming Frontier"

Endorse Film After Showing Staged by Birmingham Manager

MANAGER WILLIS GRIST, JR., was so enthused over "The Flaming Frontier" that he personally wrote letters to college presidents, history teachers, Y.M.C.A. secretaries, civic club presidents, and members of the Better Films Committee inviting them to a special screening when that film showed at the Galax Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Practically everyone at the special screening commented upon the picture as being one of the best of the year. Many of these comments found their way into the columns of the local newspapers, which greatly helped to convince others to see the picture at its regular showings.

In addition to endorsing the picture, all those attending the special screening, either announced it or wrote special letters to their respective organizations or classes strongly urging every person to see "The Flaming Frontier."

A "gay deceiver's club" was formed at Colorado College and Colorado Springs High School as an exploitation stunt tying up with the showing of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Gay Deceiver" at the Rialto Theatre in Colorado Springs. Photo above shows the High School band in front of the Rialto, where a concert was given the opening night

First National Introduces New Style Radio Program

ON the recommendation of exhibitor clients and direct results obtained during the several months of radio advertising, First National will continue the practice of broadcasting weekly programs through WJZ, New York, and the so-called Hastings, Neb., network of radio stations. The company has made use of the air for the broadcasting of condensed versions of picture plots, but last week a new form of radio entertainment was introduced, the program being sent through WJZ and associated stations in Boston, Springfield, Mass., Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Chicago.

What many consider a greatly improved method of sending this motion picture publicity through the air was initiated when a "double act" called the "To-be Weds" made their first appearance before the microphone in a dialogue in which publicity for "The Lunatic At Large," a recent First National offering, was included.

The "To-be Weds" are a boy and a girl, called "Jack" and "Dorothy." Each week a new dialogue is to be presented, the action being based on the typical spatting proverbially supposed to be one of the leading pastimes of an engaged couple. The settings are laid in New York street cars, restaurants, supper clubs, etc. Conversation usually veers about to the subject of a film recently seen by the pair, and a humorous discussion pointing the highlights of the play ensues. The acts will be entirely humorous and an effort will be made to popularize Jack and Dorothy with radio fans.

The new form of broadcasting will be carried on for some time and if the "To-be Weds" catch on with the listeners in, a motion picture may be produced to tie-up with the stunt. First National is considering several plans, the aim of which will be to bring this radio publicity into a direct tieup with theatres in all cities reached by the programs featuring the "To-be Weds."

These programs will be sent each Friday evening, from 7:45 to 8:00 or 8:00 to 8:15 P.M. Which of these two periods will be permanently used has not yet been determined.

Birmingham Theatres Show Business Improvement

Conditions in Birmingham, Ala., proper are returning to normalcy. Factories, mines and mills are resuming operations and the payrolls are showing life. Business along the theatrical Rialto has been very good the past week and if the initial showing of 1927 presages what is to follow during the year then 1927 should be a healthy one.

Toy Train in Window Sells "K. & A. Train Robbery"

What proved to be one of the best exploitation items in an especially fine campaign staged in Charlotte, N.C., for the showing of "The Great K. & A. Train Robbery" at the Alhambra Theatre there, was obtained at no greater cost than four complimentary tickets handed to the owner of a local toy store. The attractor was a window display featuring an electric train along with a card advertising the film.

Manager James Cartledge noticed that this particular window was always drawing huge crowds, so he edged his way to the window to see what it was all about. The attraction was a toy electric train.

By slipping a few passes to the manager of the store, Cartledge was allowed to put a few decorations of his own in the window.

"NervousWreck"DriveCity-Wide

Simultaneous Campaigns by 20 Theatres Create Ballyhoo for Picture in Greater New York

EXTENSIVE exploitation campaigns simultaneously executed by twenty theatres in Greater New York the split-week of January 6—10 created a drive for "The Nervous Wreck" which was practically city-wide in its scope and influence. The houses participating in the campaign were of the Keith-Albee, F. F. Proctor and B. S. Moss chains.

The drive developed into a sort of exploitation contest with the result that the managers of the theatres adopted methods best suited to their particular neighborhoods. The outcome was a composite model campaign, embracing exploitation which covered all showmanship angles of the picture.

One of the most successful drives was that put on by Manager Edward Hart, of Proctor's Theatre, Mt. Vernon, N.Y. A highlight of this campaign was the unique lobby display, featuring a "laughing horse," shown in cut-out, in conjunction with a large phonograph playing the well-known laughing record. The billing read, "The horse is laughing at Al Christie's 'The Nervous Wreck.'" Street ballyhoos were another important item. In one of these there were two "street men," a doctor and a very nervous patient.

Hart also presented a special prologue, featuring a man dancer and singer. He sang a song about the "Nervous Wreck" and performed a "Nervous Wreck Dance," a jumpy, eccentric affair.

Leon Kelmer, manager of the Prospect Theatre, Brooklyn, realized 100 per cent. on the exploitation possibilities of "The Nervous Wreck." Inside the lobby Kelmer had at least a dozen hanging signs and three lobby display frames. Outside there were large cut-outs on the front of the marquee, twenty feet long by eight feet high, with two cut-outs fifteen feet long and eight feet high on each side of the marquee, and also comedy cut-outs at each corner. On street posts, comedy faces three feet high, facing street cars and sidewalk, attracted attention of passers-by. A week in advance of the showing, Mr. Kelmer had window tie-ups with twenty different kinds of stores.

Another great campaign was put over by the Riviera Theatre, Brooklyn. The big feature of this ballyhoo was a shadow box eleven feet long by four feet deep and thirteen feet high, which was erected in a conspicuous part of the lobby, in direct view of all people entering or leaving the theatre. The front of this shadow box was painted to represent a proscenium arch and stage of a theatre. On this stage was erected an elaborate "sick room," attractively decorated with a back-drop of velvet and side-portieres of brown velvet. On one side of the "stage" was placed an invalid's chair in which was seated a man representing "The Nervous Wreck." Tie-ups were arranged with the Life Saver Company whereby the theatre received 20,000 Life Savers free of charge. These were placed in the envelopes containing the prescriptions.

Proctor's 58th Street Theatre used a "Cannon Shot" of "The Nervous Wreck" firing, over the marquee. This had red buckram cloth from the mouth of the gun to a six-foot ball on which was inscribed the name of the picture, around the ball being a row of fifty amber and red electric bulbs with running water effect; Keith's Royal Theatre had an effective lobby, featuring wheel-chairs borrowed from a hospital, with signs: "Keep Out—This seat reserved for Harrison Ford, 'The Nervous Wreck.'"

B. S. Moss' Franklin Theatre had tie-ups with drug stores, with window signs reading: "If You're a Nervous Wreck we have the tonic you need to Restore Your Health. Then, to complete the cure, be sure to see Al Christie's great comedy, 'The Nervous Wreck.'" There was also a tie-up with ten taxi-cabs with signs reading: "You will not be a Nervous Wreck if you ride in my cab to the Franklin Theatre and see the laugh tonic of the season."

Action featured the display at the 125th Street, shown on the left. In the center is the prologue used for the Christie comedy at Proctor's. Performer was a dancer who featured the "nervous wreck dance." On the right is the lobby display at Proctor's, employing a phonograph laughing record to tie up with the cut-out heads of the laughing horse

The cast of "Matinee Ladies" has been augmented by the Warner Brothers with the addition of Malcolm McGregor, Hedda Hopper and Charles Lane. Byron Haskins will direct from the script by Henry Dittmar. As soon as the complete cast has been assembled shooting will be started.

Louise Brooks has left for California to appear in her first Western picture, "Evening Clothes," starring Adolphe Menjou and directed by Luther Reed. This production will mark the return of Miss Brooks to the leading role opposite Menjou with whom she made her first featured screen appearance in "A Social Celebrity."

One of the principal supporting roles in "Cabaret," Gilda Gray's second starring picture for Paramount, will be played by Tom Moore. Other members of the supporting cast will be chosen in a few days. Robert Vignola will direct.

Henry Victor has been cast for an important role in "Looie the Fourteenth," Paramount's Wallace Beery vehicle which was put in production on January 3, under the direction of James Cruze. Others already assigned to the cast are Ford Sterling, ZaSu Pitts and August Tollaire.

The Warner Brothers have signed Anthony Coldeway, scenarist, to a long-term contract. His first assignment will be Monte Blue's starring vehicle, "The Brute," which Herman Raymaker will direct from the story by W. Douglas Newton.

Director Fred Newmeyer has been engaged to do his third picture for Paramount. He has just completed "The Potters," made at the Paramount Astoria studio, and prior to that directed "The Quarterback." Now he is to direct Mildred Davis in "Too Many Crooks." To date the cast includes George Bancroft, John St. Polis, Gayne Whitman and Tom Ricketts.

Famous Players-Lasky has given Doris Anderson another writing assignment. Miss Anderson wrote the screen adaptation of "A Kiss in a Taxi," now in production as a starring vehicle for Bebe Daniels. Her new assignment is the script on "Afraid To Love," Florence Vidor's next starring production.

Just before sailing for Europe last week, Henry Ginsberg, president of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, approved the cast for "Wanted—a Coward," Sterling's next Banner release. Roy Clements will both produce and direct this picture, which has been adapted from the story by Vincent Starrett. Lillian Rich and Robert Frazer will be the featured players in "Wanted—a Coward," and others prominent in the cast are Harry Northrup, Frank Brownlee, James Gordon, Frank Cooley, William Bertram and Fred Obeck. The picture was placed in work last week.

Additions to the cast of Warner Bros.' "White Flannels" include Virginia Browne Faire as the ingenue lead, Warner Richmond, George Nichols and Brooks Benedict. Others in the cast to date are Louise Dresser and Jason Robards. Lloyd Bacon is now directing "White Flannels" at the Hollywood studio of the Warner Bros.

Final casting was completed last week at the Gotham studio by Sam Sax on "The Final Extra," a newspaper drama which goes into production with Marguerite De La Motte and Grant Withers in the leading roles. Assisting players for this production include John Miljan, Frank Beal, Leon Hoomes and Joseph W. Girard. The script was written by Herbert Colbert Clark. Cooperating with James P. Hogan, who is directing this feature, are Glenn Belt, production manager, Ray June, chief cameraman, Don Liggins, assistant on production, Edith Wakoling, film editor. Release is announced for the latter part of January.

Tom Kennedy has been cast for an important role in Wallace Beery's latest starring comedy for Famous, "Looie the Fourteenth," which James Cruze will direct.

Her first real opportunity comes to Thelma Todd in Ed. Wynn's first starring Paramount vehicle in which she will be seen in a featured role. Since appearing in "Fascinating Youth" Miss Todd has had minor parts in a number of productions, among them "God Gave Me Twenty Cents" and "The Popular Sin." The Wynn picture is to be started about January 10 with Victor Heerman directing.

Frank Griffin has started camera work on "Bayo-Nuts," the title of the war comedy he is producing for First National release. Three members of the cast, Charlie Murray, Natalie Kingston and George Sidney, have been chosen to date. Initial scenes are being filmed in one of the enclosed stages, after which the unit will probably go on location in Northern California. The story is an original by Griffin, and Del Lord, formerly with Mack Sennett, is directing. Hampton Del Ruth wrote the scenario and Clarence Hennecke and Gene Towne have been retained to inject gags into scenes as they are filmed.

Einar Hanson, under contract with Paramount, has been assigned the leading male role opposite Esther Ralston in "Fashions for Women," her first starring picture, which Dorothy Arzner will direct as her first venture with wielding the megaphone.

Not content with interesting scenes taken at the river which runs through the Burbank studio lot and the location on the Colorado River, soon to be filmed, Director King Baggott has taken his company, making "The Notorious Lady," for First National, to Balboa, where coastal scenes are being taken for the picture. These scenes will "tie up" with those to be made later on the Colorado River.

Chester Conklin, bound East from Hollywood to appear in Ed Wynne's first screen comedy, "Rubber Heels," has also been cast for "Cabaret," Gilda Gray's newest starring film. Robert G. Vignola and Victor Heerman, directors of "Cabaret" and "Rubber Heels," respectively, have arranged their shooting programs to permit Conklin's appearance in both pictures. "Cabaret" started Monday with Tom Moore, Mona Palmer, Jack Egan and William Harrigan in supporting roles. The Wynne vehicle gets under way on January 14.

Henry B. Walthall and Lonis Natheaux have been recalled to the DeMille Studio for additional scenes for "Fighting Love," starring Jetta Goudal, under the direction of Nils Olaf Chrisander.

Director Walter Lang this week finished shooting on "The Ladybird," the first Betty Compson production for Chadwick Pictures. Miss Compson will start work shortly in "Say It With Diamonds," an original by Arthur Gregor, the Australian producer, who will direct this production.

Accompanied by his technical staff, Reginald Barker, who will direct "The Branding Iron" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has left Los Angeles for the snow-topped Sierras of Colorado to select locations for this new feature which will co-star Lionel Barrymore and Aileen Pringle. The story, an adaptation of the dramatic novel by Katherine Newlin Burt, has the European Alps as its locale. Barker and his assistants plan to go to the highest peaks of the divide. Miss Pringle in "The Branding Iron" makes her first appearance for M.-G.-M. in eighteen months and her first under her new contract with that company.

Edward Sloman, director, and Charles Kenyon, scenarist, have both signed contracts whereby they will remain with Universal for another twelve months. Sloman recently completed "Alias the Deacon." His first production under his new contract will be "Lea Lyon," starring Mary Philbin. Kenyon is now adapting Edna Ferber's "Show Boat."

Laugh Month Scores Through Country

Mirth Period Passes Halfway Mark With Exhibitors Working

WITH National Laugh Month at its height and with hundreds of circuits and individual exhibitors participating, January still offers a big opportunity to cash in for the exhibitor who has not yet done so or planned to do so.

Two weeks have passed, and so successful has the experience been of every showman who boosted Laugh Month in general and his short subjects in particular, that many are planning to extend the period originally scheduled. Exhibitors who want to ride the crest of the wave of publicity can do it now—now, when the full fruit of months of work on the part of the National Laugh Month Committee is ripening.

Right now the daily newspapers are full of Laugh Month propaganda. The tide of clippings reaching Laugh Month headquarters has been rising steadily from a few a day late in December to almost a hundred daily today. The middle of January also sees the fruition of the plans for special Laugh Month broadcasting on the part of fifteen national radio broadcasting stations in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Atlantic City, Omaha, Cincinnati, Clearwater, Fla., Shenandoah, Ia., Denver, Newark and several other cities.

Many exhibitors already have sent in their entries in the Laugh Month exploitation contests, in which the National Laugh Month Committee will award $430 in cash prizes to exhibitors or theatre employees conducting the best exploitation campaign tying up with Laugh Month. The prizes will be awarded after February 15, 1927, and are divided as follows: First prize, $200; second prize, $100; third prize, $50; fourth prize, $25; three prizes of $10 each; five prizes of $5 each.

The awarding of the prizes will be in the hands of a committee of judges consisting of the editors-in-chief of six national trade publications.

A contestant may make as many single entries as he desires. There are no restrictions as to the size of the theatre, and the amount of money spent will not enter into the decision of the judges, the awards being made to those who, in the opinion of the judges, have conducted the best campaigns for their particular theatres and under their own peculiar circumstances.

Here are the simple rules of the contest:

Contest open to all exhibitors or theatre employees responsible for exploitation campaigns. Campaign can include advertising, posters, publicity, ballyhoos, contests or any other form of exploitation. Description of campaign not over 200 words must be sent with each entry. Proofs or clippings of ads. and publicity stories and photographs of ballyhoos, displays, etc., must be submitted. All campaigns to be eligible for prizes must tie up with Laugh Month. If campaign is based on a particular comedy the comedy must be in the Short Feature class (not over three reels).

Contestants may make as many individual entries on separate campaigns as they desire.

All entries must be received at the offices of the Laugh Month Committee not later than February 15, 1927.

Pathe Re-engages Landis for "Crimson Flash"

Following his work in the new Pathe serial, "On Guard," Cullen Landis has been re-engaged by Pathe to head the cast of "The Crimson Flash," a serial story by George Grey which is being placed in immediate production. The serial unit will make the opening sequences for this chapter-play at Charleston, S.C. The organization has already left for the South, headed by Director Arch Heath and his assistant, Willard Van de Veer, for many years a production cameraman on the Pathe Review staff.

Arthur Rankin Engaged for Puffy Comedy Series

Arthur Rankin, stage and screen juvenile, has been signed by Universal to play prominent roles in the current series of ten Charles Puffy two-reel comedies. Production began last week on the stories which were written especially for Puffy by Octavus Roy Cohen. Harry Sweet has been signed to direct.

Educat. Comedian Cast for Role in Chaplin's "Circus"

George Davis, featured in Educational comedies of the Mermaid brand, will render an important portrayal in the forthcoming Charles Chaplin film, "The Circus." The Mermaid comedian, who has had wide and varied experience on the stage, will start on his contract with Chaplin as soon as he completes his present Mermaid.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Two Time Mama"
(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BEWARE of masked balls. While, if you are unmarried or unattached, romance may be lurking behind a dominoe, on the other hand, if you are married, disaster may be your lot especially if you are a susceptible male prone to philandering. That is the lesson that Tyler Brooke and Anita Garvin learned or should have. Fred Guiol directing and F. Richard Jones supervising saw to it that the complications were fast and furious. To show you how varied are the points of view of husbands, Tyler Brooke decides to pass up the dance because he thinks his wife's knees are unattractive. (That is a foul slander on Vivien Oakland incidentally.) Glenn Tryon is a devoted husband, but his admiration of Vivien's knees makes Anita peeved, so she decides to doff a very becoming Colonial costume and go with ankles and knees exposed. This to flirt with her own husband and teach him a lesson. A good idea but it does not work out because the two husbands change costumes and instead of bringing Glenn to his own home she brings the flirtatious Tyler. When the masks are removed and also when the other helpmates discover what is happening disaster threatens. However it is all straightened out somehow, as is the way with farce-comedies of this type.

It is a slightly different twist from the usual plot and rather amusing. The quartet of movie-married farceurs give a convincing portrayal of probably typical American couples and their trials and tribulations. Gale Henry as a scandal-loving maid helps with a bit. Her key-hole listening and peeping produce some eloquent subtitles.

"Oh, What a Kick!"
(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

AND still the World War. This time it is in a one-reeler with nothing but comedy aimed at and largely achieved. This is a tabloid "What Price Glory" to the extent that it starts with a conflict between a fat sergeant and Slim Summerville, actor and director, for the affections of one of Charmaine's sisters. And then because the mule kicks Slim out of line when the major or captain (rank unimportant) is asking for a volunteer for a dangerous mission to locate a German gun the lanky one gets the job. He gets to the Teuton gun nest and two by two decoys them from their own lines. There the mule, Fanny, kicks them in the head for Slim to drag them into the A.E.F. trenches. In this manner he puts the gun out of commission, as no gunner is left to manipulate the same. You can trace the origin of the title if you study hard.

It is an amusing bit of tom-foolery that D. Smith has directed and in which mule and Summerville co-star. It will be released February 7. —PAUL THOMPSON.

"Funny Face"
(Educational-Big Boy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THERE is no particular point in fastening the title "Funny Face" on this Big Boy juvenile comedy, for in all of them he presents funny faces. That is part of his stock in trade. In this instance he uses facial contortions to intrigue Bonnie Barrett. But, possibly, we should start at the beginning. The family is much up against it, being minus coal and food. Some coal Big Boy secures. For food he gets a position as errand boy in a grocery store. And that is where the trouble starts, largely because of his flirtations with the little girl. He has practically wrecked the store before he ties a dog to an empty baby carriage. The baby's mother and the storekeeper nor anyone else, except Big Boy, know that the baby has been removed, so when the dog starts after a cat and the carriage goes careening down the street into the lake naturally there is despair. But—the hero who has had the baby under his eye all the time brings him up in time to collect the reward offered for saving the baby. Hence, food, coal, rent and no more temporary worries for the family of Big Boy.

Charles Lamont directed Big Boy, Jack McHugh, Bonnie Barrett and Hy Mayer in the piece under Jack White's supervision. It is not as funny as "My Kid" and some others of the series because it lacks the emotional appeal of the first, but it is mighty good fun. The boy is uncanny in his unaffected yet convincing acting

"Many a Slip"
(F.B.O.-Bowers-Novelty Comedy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANOTHER of those ingenious and amusing farce-comedy pictures acted by and devised by Charley Bowers. The various machines which he invents for divers purposes function and accomplish something, but just what really does not really matter because you are fascinated watching the inventor set them in motion, watch the various wheels and belts revolve and do something or other. In this, the sixth of the series, Bowers is trying to win a reward for the perfection of a chemical which will render the banana a non-skidding proposition. In the course of his researches we are afforded glimpses of many other schemes of the inventor with Neal O'Hara, the witty columnist, doing the subtitling. Could any better combination be devised? I doubt it. Consistent with the spirit of the piece once Bowers has perfected his discovery it is to find that the philanthropist who has offered the big award is an escaped lunatic. I am sorry for the moving picture fan who does not find himself falling out of his theatre seat seeing this very amusing melange of nonsense. It is one of the funniest things of its kind I have seen for months.

The Cast: Charley Bowers, Corinne Powers, Ricca Allen, Eddie Dunn, Kolin Kelly, Con MacSunday, Dan Duffy, Frank Donnelly, Mrs. Goodwin, Maureen McCoy, Elizabeth Marvin, Bertha Wilson, George Williams, Jos. F. O'-Connor, Pierre Colouse.

Produced and directed by Charley Bowers and H. L. Muller.

"My Word, London"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

LONDON and its environs, the life and customs of its people, all are on view in this number of the series, made with the intent to show people without the time for travel the highspots and highlights both at home and in foreign lands. The reel opens with views of the slums of the capital of the British Empire and takes in Covent Garden, once a promenade for the wealthy and now a marketplace. According to scenes in this reel even dogs have headstones on their graves in England.

Royalty and the world's elite are shown taking their morning gallop on Rotten Row, bank clerks with the traditional high hats (the custom is reversed in London), London Bridge and the London Tower with its guards in their ancient uniforms, which are inherited, and the Strand and Piccadilly Circus—all are here to provide knowledge and, at the same time, amusement because of the titles and construction of the picture, for your patrons.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Should Sleep Walkers Marry?"
(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE answer to the question in the title of the Mack Sennett comedy is "No." Especially if the somnambulist is Bill Bevan and he lives next door to Vernon Dent and the latter's wife, Thelma Parr. Good little pals on the golf field it is something else again when Vernon discovers his side-kick with a penchant for getting into the Dent bed when walking in his sleep. Billy is perfectly honorable, but it does look suspicious, you must admit. As evidence of good faith he walks around the coping of a skyscraper in his night shirt before he invades the Dent apartment. Not once but twice and that is a bit too much. Even when the Dents try to get away from their neighbors the latter seek the same outdoor camp and here again Billy takes refuge alongside of Vernon on a gas-inflated mattress.

The latter incident results in a Douglas Fairbanks "Thief of Bagdad" flying magic carpet episode in which the two men find themselves floating over towns and mountains on awakening from their night's sleep. Evidently this air trip has made them see the light because both men find themselves in church the following Sunday eschewing golf and vociferously, if not melodiously, chanting hymns in the most approved (by their wives) fashion. A great moral lesson this. Do not golf on Sunday or sleep on a mattress filled with gas or you may find yourself an unwilling aviator.

Evidently Bevan's explanation of his sleep-walking proclivities is accepted by his wife, his neighbor and his neighbor's wife, for they continue to live in amity to the end of the reel. Just as well, especially as Bevan really was on the level. Barbara Tennant makes the fourth of the quartet of featured actors. Del Lord directed.

"Monarch of the Glen"
(Ufa-M.-G.-M.—Short Subject)

ANOTHER of the short subjects released in this country through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by Ufa of Berlin was shown at the Capitol Theatre the week of January 3. This is called "The Monarch of the Glen." Major Edward Bowes did the editing and titling for American consumption. Like the others in the series it is characterized by interesting and effective photographic shots. For a finale there is a thrilling duel presumably to the death between two stags whose horns become interlocked as they struggle for supremacy. It is one of those short subjects that are a decided asset to any program no matter how successful and widely acclaimed the feature picture may be. Also I have discovered that these are excellent educational pictures and teach the spectator a lot of things that he never would learn in a classroom.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"We Must Be Thrilled"
(Castle Films—One Reel)

A NOVELTY reel that should prove interesting and provide a vicarious thrill for your audiences is this release by Castle Films. Incorporated in the footage are shots, taken from real life, showing the producer's idea of what constitutes the "thrill that comes once in a lifetime": a boy's first long trousered suit, his first car; the father's thrill when presented with triplets. Scenes, all over the world, show bridge workers in London, iron workers in New York, the man who keeps the light burning in the Eiffel Tower, window cleaners on a skyscraper and, finally, aviation and its attendant sensations. Worth showing in any house.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Society Architect"
(Fox-Van Bibber Comedy—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN a Richard Harding Davis story as the basis for a moving picture. The New York society man-about-town Van Bibber, whom the late writer made famous. This time he is supposed to give his approval to the plans for and the completed skyscraper, though why an authority on such a subject as building I am free to confess I do not know. First he (that is, Earle Fox, who is the movie Van Bibber) goes to the house of Colonel Paddock (Frank Beal) which is perched on the top of a mountain. Reaching there by automobile is supposed to drive home Fox's terror of heights, a feeling shared by many other wise, sane, human beings. He disapproves of the drawings for a skyscraper more because the architect (J. Clifford Rice) is too devoted to Florence Gilbert. But his objections are over-ruled and the steel structure is erected. At the dedication of the cornerstone Van Bibber and the girl are hoisted to the top of the building by a derrick through the machinations of the villain-architect (and incidentally he is also a villainous architect). Then follow innumerable trick-photography shots with Van Bibber performing at a height on steel girders. Ultimately the building collapses in most convincing manner. It is amusing and clever photography. Van Bibber emerges unscathed and a hero. What the moral may be—if one is intended—I do not profess to have discovered.

It is a generally entertaining, absurd and ridiculous farce-comedy, well done by director, actors and cameraman.

The Cast: Earle Fox, Florence Gilbert, Frank Beal, J. Clifford Rice, Fred Walton, Alice Howell. Director, Robert P. Kerr. Supervisor, George E. Marshall. Story, Richard Harding Davis. Scenario, Jess Robbins and Eddie Moran. Cameraman, Barney McGill.

Two reels. Released February 13.

Paris Originations in Color
(Educational-Hope Hampton in McCall Fashion News—One Reel)

HOPE HAMPTON appears in another of the McCall Color Fashion News releases. Names such as Paul Poiret (the exotic), Boue Soeurs, Anna, Jean Patou, Phillipe et Gaston, Charlotte, Jenny, Martial et Armand and Lanvin appear as the designers and sponsors of the various feminine garments worn most effectively and becomingly by Miss Hampton. The names and costumes will mean more to a feminine reviewer than to a helpless male. However, they are all stunning and make the poor masculine simp beholder wish he were a bond-holder and could buy such expensive things for the woman who is unfortunate enough to bear his name—or some other. It is an extremely effective way to show the newest styles and surely no more striking mannequin than Miss Hampton could be found to show them off.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Jap Joys—Pussy Poses—Big Guns
(Pathe Review No. 4—One Reel)

DIVERSITY is the keynote of the January 23 release by Pathe. From Japan to the manufacture of big guns for our Navy at Washington, D.C. and, en route, a series of effective cat poses; can one ask for more variety than that? And they are all interesting. The Japanese section shows the subjects of the Mikado throwing off their serious mien to celebrate the Cherry Blossom festival frolic. It is really a Japanese Coney Island with its diversity of amusements and entertainments showing that fundamentally we do not differ much from our Far East cousins of brown or yellow skin.

"Pussy Poses" introduces a new cat star worthy of his honors. He poses in several Pathecolor pictures and proves a most excellent histrion. A bride, highland lassie, grandmother, chef, Emperor of Egypt, Queen of the Harem and then—woe is me—as a dope fiend. He smokes the opium pipe most convincingly and belongs in a Chinatown melodrama rather than in this protean act. Pathe should make sure that a long-time contract will prevent other producers from signing the felicitous feline.

How our fourteen-inch guns are made at Washington, D.C., shipped and then used on our battleships is the third division of the review. Interesting because of the selection of pictures, whether the subject appeals to you or not. For a fitting finale the guns are fired in target practice.

All in all the Pathe Review No. 4 is unusually well rounded and effective.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Tied Up"
(Universal-Western—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

I SOMETIMES wonder if Pee Wee Holmes and Smiling Ben Corbett will ever end their duel for the favor of the same girl. It doesn't look so as the weeks go by and two-reelers are regularly released with the same two men rough-housing each other and one or the other beating his pal out. It doesn't make much difference which wins; the other probably will the next time. This story is quite involved. Pee Wee cops the only clean shirt and rides away to visit Susie. Ben buys a shirt from a peddler. Ants get in it and he goes swimming, losing his clothes but getting those of the crook, who is also bathing. This same crook, I might tell you in passing, has painted Susie's white horse black for some reason. And—Oh yes, I forgot to tell you that Ben substitutes a skunk for a puppy which Pee Wee presents to Susie. Pleasant idea. What?

Then the great cross-country race in which the painted horse wins and is discovered to be painted. The crook grabs the prize money anyway and dashes away. That you see gives an excuse for some more hard riding and a rough and tumble struggle when the villain is overhauled and pummeled. The two pals split the purse, half for the cross-country race and half for the reward for getting the dirty crook. That seems fair enough and satisfies everybody concerned except the thief, who is last seen en route to a movie lock-up.

"The Sporting Knack"
(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

KNACK or the happy faculty of doing things well enters into every sphere of life. In sports it is an invaluable and omnipresent quality differentiating the star from the dub or tyro. This point Grantland Rice drives home in this particular Sportlight through titles and camera shots. As usual, he picks out well-known exponents of sports to make his point; Monte Munn, the Nebraska law-giver boxer, Dave Shade, boxer, Strong, of the New York University football team, and other stars. Boxing, football, log-rolling (not the Algonquin literary round-table kind) and skating are some of the sports selected for the purpose. Knack is not based on physique or strength, but that curious indefinable flair or ability to do the thing gracefully and naturally that counts and marks the champion as apart from his fellow men.—PAUL THOMPSON.

A Movie Medley
(Educational-Howe Hodge-podge—One Reel)

COMPARISONS are the dominant trait in this release. For example, the Vernal Falls in California are shown in summer and then in winter. That is the keynote. Follow a Dutch maid carrying water in Holland and the Segovia Spain aqueduct doing the same thing on a big scale. This latter was built entirely of granite without mortar or clamps by the Romans. One hundred and nineteen arches carry this water half a mile across the city. Florida versus California, Korea and Maine are among the other points touched by this personally conducted tour. With supplementary drawings this particular movie medley should interest a fair section of the theatre-going public.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Plow Boy's Revenge"
(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

THE title sounds as though it had some kinship with Synge's "The Playboy of the Western World," but it hasn't, even if Milton Mouse and Thomas Kat are characterized by their playfulness. Hard toil is the portion of the mouse as the action starts, as he is manfully or mousefully following a plow. Because his hard task-master does not share the refreshments at the noon hour, he takes his venom out on a toy cat. He flees on the approach of the real feline. Taking refuge in the house he accepts an invitation of the goldfish to cool off in the privacy of the bowl immortalized by Irvin Cobb. But his respite is only temporary, for on leaving the house Thomas puts the mouse to work smoking a pipe. Then, presumably because of the goldfish's hospitality to Milton, the vengeful cat kidnaps the object of the goldfish's affections and intentions and binds her on the sawmill saw in old fashioned melodrama style. At the psychological moment Milton appears to save Gwendolyn and thus repay his debt to Graham, the hospitable gold-fish, and thwart the malignant cat.

As the press agent for the attraction might justly claim, "Something doing every moment; packed full of thrills and suspense; heart interest galore" (even if only of two loving goldfish); proper climax of villain baffled, lovers reunited and a saccharine fade-out. What more can you get in a program picture or special?—PAUL THOMPSON.

"What's Your Hurry?"
(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS one of the "Excuse Maker" series, featuring Charles King, gets him into an unusual number of scrapes. He is afraid to approach father to ask for daughter's hand. Director S. Newfield saw to that. An incursion into the gasoline selling game (for autos) blows up literally and figuratively. Still seeking trouble, he invades a room where a woman is drying her hair—some still wear it long in Hollywood, evidently. Her husband appears and Charles gives an imitation of a female impersonator—and gets away with it. Next, father is kidnaped by two ransom-seeking bandits. Charles pursues in another Ford. Losing trace of the villains' car once you can imagine for yourself how many pass to confuse them as to which one carries father. Done up in a bag like the family wash he is thrown from his own car. Charley catches on a rock on a cliff-side but falls just in time to stage a re-union with Father and Sweetheart as their car passes beneath the cliff. Ah, the long arm of co-incidence in the movies, especially two-reel farce-comedies.

It is a good rough-house, rapid action film and will make its see-ers laugh during its short appearance on the screen. February 9th sees it released.

Short Shots No. 8
(Castle Films—One Reel)

AN amusing and instructive collection of scenes are shown in this latest issue of the series produced by Castle Films. The present-day vogue of wide trousers for boys is treated in a novel manner, showing that it is possible for a mother to decrease the expense of dressing twins, if they are provided with a pair of these pants, in which both can fit comfortably. Following this sequence are scenes showing the latest "bobs" for women and the subject of squirrels in Chicago is next projected.

The world's smallest railroad engine is next on view; this machine was constructed by regular railroad engineers and is an exact duplicate of the larger locomotives; Charles Edwards, a contender of the throne now empty through Houdini's death, releases himself from a straight-jacket while suspended from an automobile traveling forty miles an hour. Last but not least are shots, actual this time, made by the 30th Infantry Machine Company, which outline a head of Uncle Sam.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Flesh and the Devil

A Personality Picture of Tone and Quality

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WORTHY of presentation for a lavish premiere and lengthy run is this picture—which is appealing any way you look at it. Carrying an intriguing title, introducing a cast of favorites including John Gilbert—and produced with a fine display of colorful scenes and detail the film has earmarks of becoming one of the real bets of the season.

The story is something of a love triangle tempered with the pathos which always arises when romantic differences separate two firm friends. And Clarence Brown, who has advanced so rapidly the past year, has brought out every point to build a story which fascinates in its play of caprice and feeling. It is touched with sex—but sex never becomes rampant. It always remains a film of visual excellence. The atmosphere is somewhat martial as the central figures are two brother officers in German army barracks. They both fall in love with the same temptress, whose husband is exterminated by the more ardent of the two lieutenants. When the latter returns from Africa he is surprised and disillusioned to find that his friend has wooed and won the fair widow.

The early scenes project the development of the affair. What follows are the dramatic complications which culminate in a happy ending—the only flaw in the picture. It is finely staged and is saturated with atmosphere. It has poise of setting and precision of movement.

The Cast: John Gilbert, Greta Garbo, Lars Hanson, Barbara Kent, William Orlamond, George Fawcett, Eugenie Besserer, Marc MacDermott, Marcelle Corday. Director, Clarence Brown.

THEME: Romantic drama of two inseparable friends whose close relationship is destroyed for a time when one marries the other's sweetheart. She had been made a widow when the ardent youth killed her husband in a duel.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The settings. The duel. The church scene. The love scenes. The acting. The atmosphere. The direction.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Gilbert and Garbo. Use stills. Cash in on title. Play up director. Go the limit.

DRAWING POWER: Should be a sell-out anywhere. Title and cast will draw them.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn. Length, nine reels. Released, January, 1927.

Scenes from "Cactus Trails," an F.B.O. Western release

Hotel Imperial

Fine Production With Negri At Her Best

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ONE can look at this film and not go wrong in calling it Pola Negri's best insofar as her American productions are concerned. It surely arrests the attention with its European atmosphere, the fine tempo of the scenes, the lighting and details—and above all its acting. The story could be stronger, yet its weakness is never manifested so expertly has the director handled it. The plot disintegrates toward the finish principally because it is difficult to keep it so compact all the way.

The story centers around the Hotel Imperial in an Austrian city which is in turn the headquarters for the Austrian and Russian troops. When an Austrian officer is trapped by the Russians, a maid advises him to act as a waiter. What follows is the Russian commander's effort to conquer the maid. He is more interested in her than he is in the conquest of Austria.

Pola Negri plays the servant with splendid feeling and imagination. She looks more like the Pola of "Passion" than any picture in which she has appeared over here. Good acting is also rendered by George Siegmann and Max Davidson. It is an intelligent film, redolent with action and atmosphere.

The Cast: Pola Negri, James Hall, George Siegmann, Max Davidson, Michael Vavitch, Otto Fries, Nicholas Soussanin, Golden Wadams. Director, Mauritz Stiller.

THEME: Drama of intrigue and deception revolving around hotel maid outwitting commander of army and finding happiness with her betrothed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fine atmosphere. The lighting and sets. The scenes involving maid and general. The detail. The suspense and intrigue. The clever acting by star and entire cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as Pola's best American film. Tease the title. Bring out that it carries a war flavor. Bill it as one of the big films of the season.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for first runs and all types of houses. Title and star should draw them.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, seven reels. Released January, 1927.

The Perfect Sap

Melodramatic Tricks Make It Thrilling

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE original of this picture was a fairly successful stage play of last season, but it didn't carry much of a box-office title. Hence "Not Herbert" emerges as "The Perfect Sap" in its celluloid version. It is a tricky melodrama which caters to spine-shivering thrills in its play of stunts. There is a wild auto chase which builds suspense when the bridge revolves at the "croocial" point; there is a rough and tumble scrap between the hero and the villain—and a diamond robbery to boot. And for pleasantries —a masked ball is introduced which tempers the up and at 'em action.

Ben Lyon plays the central figure, who is ambitious to become a detective. His spare moments are occupied in studying a correspondence course. Otherwise he succeeds in capturing a gang of crooks when they attempt to rob his home. There is a girl mixed up with these rough boys who turns out to be a newspaper reporter. And she takes care of the humor and the romance as well.

The film is chock-full of incident—and every scene is complete in itself. It is one of those documents which could go on without end. The acting is capable as rendered by Ben Lyon, Pauline Starke, Tammany Young and Sam Hardy.

The Cast: Ben Lyon, Pauline Starke, Diana Kane, Sam Hardy, Tammany Young, Helen Rowland, Byron Douglas, Charles Craig, Virginia Lee Corbin, Lloyd Whitlock.

THEME: Melodrama revolving around rich youth who studies to become detective and eventually captures gang of crooks and wins a sweetheart.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The action and incident. The auto chase. The ballroom sequence. The fight. The suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title. Play up cast which comprises well-known figures in celluloid world. Bill as fast-moving melodrama.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses. Cast should attract them.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released January, 1927.

Bob Custer Strikes Oil On An F.B.O. Ranch

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ONE busy hour, or 4,862 feet of film to be exact, is spent by Bob Custer on his arrival at "Led Horse:" He does the following things: rescues the heroine Marjorie Zier from the villain Lew Meehan, breaks up the latter's gambling hell, proves that the latter is double-crossing Marjorie's aunt, Inez Gomez, in the matter of oil on her ranch, locates a gusher on the property, captures Bud Osborne and his gang, pals of Meehan, after they have robbed the local bank and quite naturally wins the heart and hand of the aforesaid Marjorie. What could be fairer? W. Bert Foster, spinner of the story, George Merrick, who adapted it, and Harry P. Crist, continuity writer, provided enough material for Director Percy Pembroke to divide into two Westerns.

From the moment Bob Custer arrives on the scene bearing the name of Ross Fenton, action follows fast. Following the recent tendency there is a mixture of cowboy romance and oil rather than a straight Western plot. It is quite well done by all concerned and different in that there are some real characterizations such as that provided by Inez Gomez as the determined feminist who owns the ranch on which the oil is ultimately located.

The Cast: Bob Custer, Marjorie Zier, Lew Meehan, Roy Watson, Inez Gomez, Roy Laidlaw, Bud Osborne, Milburn Morante. Author, W. Bert Foster. Adaptation, George Merrick. Continuity, Harry P. Crist. Director, Percy Pembroke. Cameraman, Ernest Miller.

THEME: Western drama. Thwarting villain who is a gambling-hell, dance-hall owner from stealing oil property from heroine's aunt.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Ingenious combination of cowboys and oil boom town. Amount of plot and action compressed in short time. Something doing every minute.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Same as preceding.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 4,862 feet. Released January 23, 1927.
Produced and distributed by Film Booking Offices.

Regional News from Correspondents

Albany

TWO of the most important changes along Albany's Film Row in many months occurred this week when Alec Weismann resigned the position as manager of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange, and was immediately succeeded by H. O. Worden, of Boston, who was in Albany three or four weeks ago for several days during a sales drive. Mr. Weismann became manager of the local exchange about a year ago. He left this week for Buffalo, but without announcing his future plans.

H. C. Bissell, who has been manager of the local Universal exchange for a year or so, following his promotion from the ranks of salesman, also resigned and has been succeeded by Julius Singer, of New York, who will probably remain here for two or three weeks, or until such time as someone has been selected for Mr. Bissell's post. Mr. Bissell's future plans are unknown. Both of these exchanges are among the largest in the city, and are located in the new Exchange Building.

The Columbia Theatre in Rensselaer, N.Y., had a close call from fire last week, that originated in the ticket office from an unknown cause. Chemicals were used in extinguishing the flames before they did any great amount of damage.

George Wright, one-time theatre owner of Albany, who went to Florida a couple of years ago, is back in town.

Mrs. Alec Herman was in New York City last week for the purpose of bidding her brother goodbye as he sailed for Europe, where he will spend the remainder of the winter. In the meantime, Mr. Herman, who is the Albany representative for Pro-Dis-Co., was confined to his bed for a couple of days with an attack of the grippe.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, is planning to turn over the Colonial Theatre in that city, to interests which are said to contemplate transforming the theatre into a large store.

The formal opening of the James Theatre in Utica, took place on January 5, and was largely attended. Invitations to the affair were received along Film Row. The house is owned by S. P. Slotnick and B. N. Perlman.

Abe VanDusen, head booker at the F.B.O. exchange, was quite badly injured about the chest last week in an automobile accident.

Bert Gibbons, who recently went with the F.B.O. Exchange, here as salesman, has resigned. A represenative of the company was up from New York during the past week, looking for a building in which the exchange will be housed as soon as the present lease expires.

Visitors along Film Row included Clarence Dopp, of Johnstown, who reported that between running his two theatres and selling disinfectants, that he was extremely busy. Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, was also in town, as well as Fred Herbst, of Philmont.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs, and D. J. Harrington, his opposition in the same city, have entered into an agreement whereby they split the Pathe product between their houses this year.

Film Row received a letter last week from Leon Medem, former manager of the Pathe exchange here, who is now in New York City. Mr. Medem writes that he is in the advertising business and doing very well.

Walter Suckno, who has been managing the Frieder and Grossman theatres in Hudson, for the past several months, resigned last week and has returned to Albany. His sister, Noma, who one time handled the Albany Theatre, is back from New York City, where she spent three or four days last week in buying her trousseau. She will be married early next month.

Fred Bloomingdale has resigned as manager of the Hudson Theatre in Albany, and Julius Berinstein, the owner, is handling the house as well as the Colonial. Mr. Berinstein returned to Albany last week from New York, following a rather severe illness in that city due to an attack of tonsilitis.

Alec Papayanakos, who with his brothers, owns theatres in Northern New York, announced last week that negotiations were on for the acquisition of three theatres in one of the Western States.

From now on the Rialto in Witherbee, is not to be run in conjunction with the Empire Theatre in Port Henry, which is handled by C. D. Dery. Information to that effect was conveyed to Film Row in letters during the week.

The Albany Theatre in Schenectady, a Farash house, closed its doors on January 10, and all bookings have been transferred to the Barcli. The theatre has been managed by Edward Walsh.

H. C. Bissell, manager of the Universal exchange in Albany, was in New York City last week, attending a sales conference. Alice Finder, chief inspector at the exchange, was ill during the week with the grippe; Mildred Bucci cut her hand very badly, while Ray Richardson, assistant shipper, was home with the grippe.

Jack Krause, formerly manager for Chase in Albany, has taken over the management of the Tiffany exchange here, and plans to expand the activities of the exchange, which will be located in the same quarters with the Bond company.

Mike Kallet, of Oneida, paid a business call to Scranton a few days ago.

Cleveland

E. MANDELBAUM has sold out his interest in the Temple Theatre, Toledo, to his associate, Oscar Smith, and, with Mrs. Mandelbaum, has gone to California for the winter. Mandelbaum has been in poor health. He has recently been dismissed from hospital attendance and was advised to seek a milder climate.

Harry Charnas, Mrs. Charnas, and their son left Cleveland at noon last Saturday to spend a month or six weeks on the West Coast. There was a rumor around that Charnas had resigned as president of the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland to become associated with Warner Brothers. Harry emphatically denies this. He stated that he is and will continue as the active president of the Standard Film Service Company but that he is going west for a much needed rest.

Lemotto Smith, president of the Smith Amusement Company, operating a chain of picture houses in Alliance, Warren and Huntington, W. Va., was in Cleveland last week making his final adieux to his film friends before joining the annual pilgrimage to Florida

Harry Carl is building a new theatre in Ashland, so we have been told by the troubadours of the film industry. It's to be a 500-seat house and he will run it in conjunction with the Opera House which he now operates. The new house has been in the building most of the winter and will be completed by February 1st.

D. B. Follett, owner and proprietor of the Star Theatre in Gibsonburg, Ohio, included the building of a new motion picture house in his New Year's resolutions. It'll be done in March.

Maybe it's a coincidence that Howard Feigley of the Rivoli Theatre, Toledo, had business in New York just the week of the Auto Show.

George Fleischman, who has the World and Atlas theatres in Toledo, is to have another house in the near future, so the wiseacres say. It's not to be in the downtown district. But it's not to be far from the downtown district. While the exact location of the house is being withheld, it is known that it will be a first-run house. Fleischman is one of the most successful exhibitors in Toledo.

J. E. Beck, manager of the Cleveland P.D.C. exchange, will be in Detroit January 16th to attend a meeting of the branch managers of the company. Detroit was selected as the scene of the meeting in order to exhibit the beautiful new Detroit film building. Harry Zapp, Detroit P.D.C. exchange manager, will be host.

Robert Cotton, P.D.C. central division manager is scheduled to be present at a district managers' meeting in Chicago January 14th and 15th. From Chicago he will go to Detroit to attend the exchange managers' meeting.

Henry Lustig is said to be about to build a new picture house on Lake Shore Boulevard and East 152nd Street. Lustig and his associates now have three houses in operation.

Andrew Sharrick, Universal publicity manager in the central territory, has just returned to headquarters in Cleveland after spending two weeks in New York.

Paul Gusdanovic, former president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, and one of the leading exhibitors of the city, spent the past week in New York. Gusdanovic has the Orpheum, Norwood, Corlett and Regent theatres.

Rose Levine Sattler has resigned from the local First National staff after five years' unbroken service. She'll be sorely missed by the many exhibitors who have wandered in and out of the First National offices during those five years.

W. W. North, of Akron, a rare visitor for the shores of Lake Erie, was in town last week. North is a traveling exhibitor. He has a truck which is specially fitted up to show pictures. He takes the truck into small towns, sets up his equipment and presto, there's a picture show.

The Film Building register was not heavily taxed last week. The only out-of-towners noted therein were James Platt, Memorial and Vine theatres of Mt. Vernon; J. A. Smith, Majestic and Nixon, Akron: and Herman Graubner, Opera House, Salineville.

Mrs. William Gibson is the new owner of the Crown Theatre at North Baltimore. She recently bought the house from H. Starrett.

The Peerless Theatre, Cleveland, change hands during the past week, when Louis Lampru sold the house to Lawrence Barbalich.

Atlanta

AMONG the representatives of film exchanges and equipment concerns present at the opening of Joe Steed's North Birmingham Theatre were A. R. McRae, of F.B.O.; O. K. Bourgeois, of Pathe; F. A. Leatherman, southern distributor of Reproduco organs; P. A. Strachan, of First National. Other special guests of the occasion were J. W. Peck, Sr., and J. W. Peck, Jr., of the Norwood and Five Points theatres; F. A. Wilson of the Gem Theatre, Red Bay, Ala., and W. S. King, of Northport.

F. A. Wilson, of Red Bay, Ala., spent several days in Birmingham this week buying equipment for his new theatre.

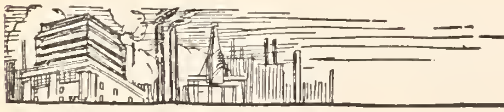
Earl J. Dennison, special representative from the home office, was a visitor in the Famous Players-Lasky office last week.



St. Louis

THE St. Louis film colony was grieved to learn of the death in Los Angeles on Sunday, January 2, of William A. Estep, pioneer motion picture producer and executive and a native of St. Louis. He moved from St. Louis to Hollywood 12 years ago. His widow was formerly Miss Emma Adele Bube of St. Louis.

Marcus Heiman, president of the Orpheum Circuit, was in St. Louis, Mo., on January 6. He inspected the Orpheum, Grand Opera House and St. Louis theatres, which play Orpheum Circuit vaudeville.

Closing quotations on St. Louis film stocks listed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange on January 8 were as follows: St. Louis Amusement A, $45 bid and $47 asked. A year ago $54; Skouras A, $47.25 offered.

The Newstead and Ashland theatres in St. Louis, Mo., have been sold by the Laventhal Theatre Circuit to Albert Foritori. The consideration has not been made public.

Foritori is a nephew of Joe Foritori, who operates the Criterion Theatre, Broadway near Olive Street, St. Louis.

The Newstead is located at 4366 Lee Avenue and seats 665. The Ashland, at 3522 North Newstead Avenue, has a rated capacity of 900 and an airdrome seating 800 persons.

In recent weeks the Laventhal circuit has disposed of the Embassy, Mikado, the Ashland and the Newstead. It is understood the circuit has abandoned plans for the construction of two new houses in North St. Louis.

Peyton Campbell of Memphis, Mo., has sold the Majestic Theatre in that city to Mrs. R. A. Barnridge of Knox City, Ia. Mrs. Barnridge took charge on January 8.

The Bridge Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., has changed hands again.

The Palace Theatre, Macon, Ill., reopened on January 7, after being closed for about a year.

Miss Mabel Doyer, cashier for the local Producers Distributing Exchange, is confined to her home by illness.

Miss Mabel Price, biller for F.B.O., has resigned. Her place has been filled by Miss Ann Taylor.

Dale Dwyer has joined the local Universal sales staff. He formerly was with Producers.

Tom McKean, manager for F.B.O., returned to town after battling the muds of Northeast Missouri for several days. He brought back some nice contracts as a reward for his difficulties. Missouri mud can't stop Tom.

Albert Crishlou, owner-manager of the Temple Theatre, Alton, Ill., has been confined to his bed for a week through an attack of la grippe.

C. D. Hill, division manager for Producers, has gone to Kansas City. Russell McLean, district representative, has gone to Des Moines.

Philadelphia

GEORGE BENNETHUM and Green & Altman have created a pooling arrangement known as the South Philadelphia Theatre Company whereby the Owl and Avon Theatres located near 23rd and South streets, Philadelphia, will be operated jointly. The Owl was a Bennethum theatre and the Avon a Green & Altman house. The arrangement provides that each concern will have a fifty-fifty interest in both houses. The Avon will be redecorated and renovated and the Owl will change its policy to cater to colored patrons exclusively. The theatre will be under the immediate supervision of Bill Weber, who has been managing the Avon, and Abe Altman will book the house and serve as managing director.

Al Fisher, Jr., who has been attached to the Philadelphia office of P.D.C. for the past several months, has resigned and taken over the lease of the Bellevue Theatre, Susquehanna Avenue and Front Street, Philadelphia, from Morris Wax, who has operated the house for some time.

Miss Rose Levy, secretary to Wm. G. Humphreys, branch manager for P.D.C., resigned her duties recently to marry. The members of the office force presented her with an embroidered silk counterpane and pillow covers and Mr. Humphreys presented her with a coffee percolator. Miss Levy has been connected with the industry for several years. Miss Dorothy Callahan is temporarily taking over Miss Levy's duties.

At the regular meeting of the Film Board of Trade, William J. Heenan, president, appointed the following committee to serve for the ensuing three months:

Nat Barach, district manager for Warner Bros., paid Branch Manager Jim Allen a short visit.

John A. McDonald, 39 years old, business manager for the Moving Picture Machine Operators local 199 in Detroit, died at his home at three o'clock last Monday. He had been ill for almost three months and death was due to heart trouble. The passing of Mr. McDonald removes one of the outstanding figures in the motion picture business of Detroit. Formerly an operator himself, he showed so much executive and fighting ability that he was elected business manager of the Detroit local, a position that he has filled for many years. His wife, one son, two years old, and two sisters survive.

Ernie Forbes, manager of the National Theatre Supply Company, has tendered his resignation, so as to devote his entire time to his Redford Theatre at Redford, Mich., which he has just acquired. J. C. Tuck, formerly assistant manager, will succeed Mr. Forbes as manager.

New England

MYER GRUBER is the new branch manager of the Boston exchange of Tiffany, where he succeeds Robert Cobe. Mr. Gruber was formerly with the Royal Film Co. exchange at 44 Church Street, Boston.

L. E. Morin, who operates the Strand Theatre at Sanford, Me., has acquired the new Majestic Theatre at Fitchburg, Mass., which has been operated by E. M. Loew.

Lysander Richmond, one of the prominent Maine exhibitors, was in Boston during the week. It is understood that he is planning the construction of a new theatre on the main street in Sanford, Me., in the heart of the business district, and that the visit to Boston had something to do with the preliminary work in connection with the proposed theatre. Mr. Richmond formerly operated the Colonial Theatre at Springvale, Me., which was recently purchased by E. M. Loew.

The Rialto Theatre at Madawaska, Me., which has been operated by L. W. Carrier, has been taken over by Leona Fife.

Bookers of the New England area in and about Boston are planning for their second annual grand ball, which will be held in the State Theatre ball room on the night of Feb. 18. Entire proceeds from these annual events are devoted to philanthropic purposes.

M. Rossito has been engaged by Fox exchange at Boston for the sales staff. During the current two weeks he is doing special work in Maine and the following two weeks will be in Vermont and New Hampshire.

The Graphic Circuit, which operates through northern New England, has disposed of the Auditorium Theatre at Lincoln, Me., to Orman B. Fernandez. Mr. Fernandez recently acquired Odd Fellows Hall in Lincoln and for the present will operate both houses although there is some talk of later consolidating the two. Mr. Fernandez has also been associated in the management of the Strand Theatre at Old Town, Me.

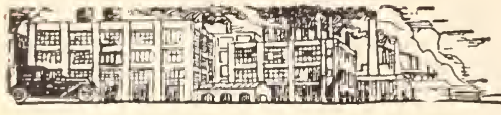
Miss Beth Donnelly, formerly the popular biller at Warner Bros. exchange, Boston, has taken a similar position with Producers exchange.

Jack Dobbins, former Paramount salesman in New Haven and vicinity, who broke his leg in an auto accident September 2, is now able to be about with the aid of a cane.

William E. C. Warr of Warr's Theatre, Wareham, and his charming daughter motored to Boston during the week in their brand new Buick brougham, which was the envy of the Row.

Jacob Conn has established a broadcasting station on the roof of Conn's Olympia Theatre, Olneyville, R.I.



Cincinnati

THE Shultz Opera House, Zanesville, Ohio, is to become one of a chain of three houses which will be operated by the Imperial Theatres Co., recently incorporated at Columbus, Ohio. According to announcement by Manager Sam E. Lind, approximately $70,000 will be spent for improvements which will include a new organ. The Shultz was the first house in the city to play legitimate attractions, having recently gone into vaudeville and pictures. The new organization will also operate the Imperial and Quimby theatres in Zanesville.

Everett Bennett, who has been conducting a garage at Oxford, Ohio, has acquired the Peoples Theatre, at Dayton, and is operating the house. No immediate changes in policy or equipment are contemplated.

The feature sales department of the Cincinnati branch of Pathe is now in charge of Emile C. Bullwinkle, who came from New York recently to assume management.

The name of the Orpheum Theatre, Lima, Ohio, devoted to pictures and vaudeville, has been changed to the State Theatre. Policy unchanged.

Miss Irene Leake, who holds a responsible position with the Universal office in Cincinnati, stole a march on her friends a fortnight ago, and was married to Frank Hull of Rock Hill, S.C., the ceremony taking place at Charlotte, N.C. The marriage was the culmination of a romance which began a little over a year ago when the bridegroom met his bride while he was on a business trip to Cincinnati. The couple expect to reside in Rock Hill after the honeymoon.

John Schwalm, manager of the Rialto Theatre, Hamilton, was host to a children's club at a special matinee recently, the affair being given in connection with a local daily newspaper.

A. F. Thiele, who manages special engagements of symphony concerts and similar projects at Dayton, Ohio, has been appointed by the Fox Film Company to manage the showing of the Eucharistic Congress pictures in this section of the State.

The Cincinnati Film Board of Trade, acting in accordance with a suggestion from Will Hays, has granted free film service to the Cincinnati Children's Home, the free service coming as a New Year's present. A local club has donated a machine, and the Cincinnati exhibitors will provide the films weekly.

Allwein and Shreffler, who operate the Castraba Theatre, as also the Opera House at Shelby, Ohio, have closed the former house during January and February, but will resume activities at the Castraba on March 1. No reason is assigned for the suspension.

Seattle

TWO anniversaries were celebrated in this city during the holiday season—both by John Hamrick. First came the sixth anniversary program at his Blue Mouse Theatre, made up of special film and musical numbers, and then there was the first anniversary of the opening of Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre in the University district. This house was opened in December, 1925, by Warner Brothers, but was acquired by Mr. Hamrick in July of last year and has been under his management since that time.

Arch McDonald, head of the Liberty Theatre in Ketchikan, Alaska, left this city recently for his home town, after spending almost a month here. During his stay he arranged bookings for his house for the next several months.

Paul Burger, official of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from the home office in New York City, has been spending the last several days at Manager Ben Fish's local exchange. During his visit here he had a chance to welcome Jess Beckman and Harry Landstrom, who have returned to this territory after a trip into the East and Canada with the special sales force of M.-G.-M.

Charles E. Feldman, former manager of the First National Exchange in this city, last week was appointed manager of the Denver territory of the National Theatre Supply Company's interior decorating department by B. F. Shearer, director of that branch of the concern. Mr. Shearer last week entertained H. A. R. Dutton, President and Treasurer of the National Company, and Walter E. Green, Vice-President of the International Projector Corporation, during their visit in this city.

Ned Edris, former manager of the Blue Mouse Theatre in Tacoma, and now head of the Centralia and Chehalis theatres, operated by Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., spent a short time here last week with his company managers and the magnates of Film Row. He expects that Centralia soon will hear of plans for a new house in that city to be built by the Pacific Northwest group.

Al C. Raleigh, manager of the Coliseum Theatres, assisted by Mrs. Raleigh, last week entertained the inmates of several Seattle children's charitable homes at a special holiday matinee.

Albert Nadeau, general manager of the Washoe Amusement Company of Anaconda, Mont., spent a short time here last week making arrangements for the remodeling and equipping of the Margaret Theatre in the Montana town. It was planned to stage the formal opening early in January, following the expenditure of close to $30,000 in renovating and repairs.

John Danz, president and general manager of the Capitol, Colonial and several other theatres in the downtown district, was host with Mrs. Danz last week to all the employees of his theatres at a midnight dance and supper given at the Varsity Night Club. Everyone, from janitor to house manager, attended, and joined in the fun. Mr. and Mrs. Danz were given a handsome silver service by the group.

Another big holiday affair was the Christmas banquet for the employees of all the Everett theatres, operated by the Pilz and Swanson enterprises. The party was staged at 11 p.m. on Monday, December 27, under the leadership of R. E. Charles, managing director for the company, and lasted until the wee small hours of the morning. It was held on the stage of the Everett Theatre.

Wesley Sorenberger, theatre operator of Wrangell, Alaska, was seriously burned recently in a fire which partially destroyed his home, and is at present slowly recovering from his injuries. He is under special treatment at a local hospital, where it is expected he must remain for several weeks yet.

Ernest Russell, concert organist from the Liberty Theatre, now being renovated prior to its opening at the United Artists Theatre, last week presided at the console of the huge Wurlitzer at Manager James Q. Clemmer's Fifth Avenue Theatre. He succeeded Harry Reed, who has been at that house since its opening in September.

Reports received last week from Hoquiam, Wash., indicate that the Arcade Theatre may soon be closed and remodeled into a modern store building. No reason for the move has been made public, but it is thought possible that it might presage a new motion picture house in that town to replace the Arcade.

Among the Christmas greeting cards sent out during the last holiday season by the various theatres, that of Manager Robert W. Bender, of the Universal Columbia Theatre, achieved first prize in the minds of most recipients.

Canada

QUITE a few managers of Canadian theatres started off the New Year propitiously with the receipt of a substantial token of esteem from their theatre employes.

At Chatham, Ontario, Manager A. P. Drohan of the Griffin and Princess theatres received a fine overcoat from his staffs, the presentation being made by Miss Irene Zimmer, who, in turn, was given a box of chocolates by her confreres.

Clarence Robson, Toronto, Eastern Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was presented with a handsome Japanese inlaid telephone table and bench in black and gold, the gift of the managers of Famous Players houses in Ontario and Quebec.

At Montreal, Quebec, Harry Dahn, manager of the Capitol Theatre, has received a handsomely-fitted travelling bag and there was also a wonderful bouquet of flowers for Mrs. Dahn.

H. E. Wilton, manager of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, was raided in his office by his house staff and presented with a pipe and a pair of nifty gloves.

P. C. Taylor, Toronto, general manager of the Canadian F.B.O., was the recipient during the holiday season of a fountain pen, mahogany desk set, the gift of the personnel of the head office and Toronto branch. The presentation was made by Sam Garr.

A charge against Thomas Conway, well-known theatre manager of Montreal, of operating a theatre without a license was dismissed by Recorder Semple in the Montreal Court for want of evidence. The civic authorities did not press the case and Mr. Conway is now general manager of the Orpheum Theatre, Montreal, without hindrance.

Manager Wendall of the Starland Theatre, Morden, Manitoba, has extended the depth of the theatre by 50 feet, making it 120 feet all told. The ceiling has also been raised another 10 feet. The seating capacity was also increased by 250 and there are now additional exits.

J. P. Pitner, manager of the Starland Theatre, Nelson, B.C., a Famous-Players house, has announced that a new theatre is to be erected by the company on Victoria Street, starting early in the spring.

The Bedford Theatre, a new suburban moving picture house for Toronto, Ontario, has been opened. It is situated on Upper Yonge Street, close to the radial station at the city limits.

H. E. Wilton, manager of the Strand Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, has been re-elected an alderman of the Hamilton City Council for 1927 for the First Ward. Alderman Wilton headed the polls with a record vote.

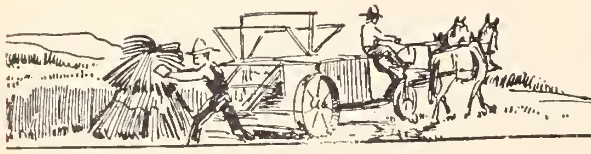
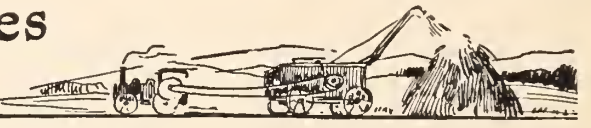
E. Vollendorf resigned his position as salesman on the P.D.C. force to accept a position as booker in the local Fox exchange. H. I. Ironfield, who served as booker in the Fox office for the past few months, has been recalled to the New York office for special work.

Des Moines





MR. and Mrs. B. B. Holdridge of the Zenith Theatre took possession of the Empress Theatre New Year's Day, having bought it from C. J. Latta in a whirlwind deal, which left the public and the principals alike excited over the change in ownership.

Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge have taken over the 1927 contracts of Mr. Latta and will continue to run both theatres. A drop was made in the admission price recently so that one theatre was charging twenty-five cents and the other thirty. Later prices will depend on the contract rates, but Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge plan to do the best they can by the amusement public. They have managed the Zenith Theatre ten and a half years and need no introduction here.

Since Mr. Latta's international publicity as the "honest movie man," who advertised when his show was below standard for people not to attend, he has received numerous offers and propositions which he thinks will be an advancement. At present he does not care to make his plans public other than he and Mrs. Latta will leave in ten days to visit his mother in Indianapolis, following which they will go to California on a business and pleasure trip. He will take a two months' rest and vacation before definitely considering other locations. They will return here after the visit to California.

Thomas E. Smith, who comes from the Omaha office of the National Theatres Supply Company, is now covering the eastern part of the State for the Des Moines office.

The Grand Theatre at Greenfield, announced by those who have seen it to be one of the finest theatres in the southern part of the State, opens on January 14. The theatre is owned by George Misner. A number of the exchange men plan to go to Greenfield from Des Moines for the opening of the Grand Theatre.

The Star Theatre at Arnolds Park is closing for the winter season. It will reopen with the beginning of the summer season. Another theatre temporarily closed is the house at Auburn, Ia.

Ilah Elwood is the newest recruit at the offices of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Miss Elwood was formerly with the Thomas Electric Company and will do general office work and stenographic work at the exchange headquarters.

The Universal managers are to attend a sales convention in Chicago. George Nalor, manager of the Des Moines office, left to attend the meeting.

Lew Olsan, play date representative for Universal, has been in Des Moines and left for Sioux Falls, S.D., from here.

Andre Bustanaby, inspector booker, returned to the Des Moines office of Universal after a visit to New York for the Christmas holidays.

William Beale, booker for Pathe, has now joined the ranks of radio fans. He got the latest model for Christmas.

L. C. McDonald has bought the Star Theatre at Exline. The former owners were Cleo and Davis.

Bob Gary, publicity man from the Kansas City office of Universal, has been in Des Moines working on exploitation of a Universal feature at Dubuque and Iowa City. These are test showings, given in different parts of the State of the tall corn before the release of the film over the country generally.

The high school at Nichols, Ia., is showing motion pictures in the school auditorium. Superintendent G. G. Bellamy is in charge of the showings.

The Strand Theatre at Mount Vernon has changed hands. L. O. Hendrix sold to Mr. Rompt.

H. C. Reagan, who operates the Toledo Theatre at Toledo, in an effort to educate the critics of the motion picture to the usefulness of the movies as a means of education, wrote a very complete article on moving pictures and the moving picture theatre which has been put into publication.

Mrs. R. O. Brownell has bought the Leeds Theatre at Leeds, Ia. Mrs. A. Danese sold to Mrs. Brownell.

The Plaza Theatre at Sloan has changed hands. C. R. Seff sold to O. F. Johnson.

C. T. Nolan has sold the Opera House at Palmer. The theatre was purchased by Buckingham & Loots.

The Rex Theatre at Newton had its opening on Christmas Day. This theatre is owned by Ross Ewing, who has a rather unusual policy for this, a brand new theatre. He is to run Westerns of the highest grade and Westerns only. Between $10,000 and $15,000 was spent by Mr. Ewing on the theatre, which has a splendid location on one of the main streets of Newton. The shows run from one o'clock to eleven and admission charges are ten and fifteen cents.

Mr. Kauffman, manager of the Pathe exchange, spent the last week in the territory with Salesman McEwan, who covers Block B.

New York and New Jersey

LOCAL theatre men are of the opinion that all exhibitors can expect a general tightening up of fire inspection laws on account of the recent Montreal holocaust, when seventy-odd persons, mostly children, perished in a stampede to the exits of a film house. Several exhibitors interviewed stated that they had already been paid special calls by those higher up in the department in the matter of checking up conditions and that an unusually strict observance of the law will be enforced.

The New Jersey Sunday amusement situation continues week by week to occupy space in the local Monday newspapers, following, of course, some exhibitor's attempt to battle against the almost century-old State blue laws.

Over in Red Bank on January 9 it is reported that the Mayor personally brought about the arrest of Morris Jacks, proprietor of the Carlton Theatre, for violation of the Sunday law. The show proceeded after Jacks was taken before the recorder, from whom he demanded a jury trial. This was granted and Jacks was paroled until January 14. It is said that the Mayor, after arresting the Carlton's proprietor, partook of some Sunday sport himself, entering and winning an iceboat race on the Shrewsbury.

At Dunellen, N.J., George Hosford, operator of the Dunellen Theatre, was evidently not to be caught napping again after his last Sunday's tilt with the authorities. This time Mr. Hosford was allowed to proceed after it was found that the film being shown was that of the recent Eucharistic Congress and therefore not considered detrimental to public welfare.

In Irvington, in accordance with last week's announcement that Stanley-Fabian officials would abide by the present laws pending an expected revision of the statute by the Legislature, the managers of the Castle and Sanford theatres made no attempt to hold a performance.

There may be much more fire than smoke to the report that two or three of the big New York City motion picture theatre circuits are on the point of merging. (See front news section of this paper.)

A fire in the projection room of the Universal Theatre (no connection with Universal Theatre Corp.) on the Bowery near Canal Street caused the rout of 150 spectators to the street on the afternoon of January 10, but was not attended with any disorder. Herbert Lardner, projectionist, was burned about his face: The theatre, operated by Messrs. Hurweitz and Charnobelosky, will remain closed indefinitely.

Objection to the proposed construction of a motion picture theatre on a site at Avenue C and Forty-eighth Street, Bayonne, N.J., was recently voiced by members of Ohab Sholem Synagogue, which is located in the neighborhood. The Songar Realty Company is the firm which seeks the permit to build. Argument on the rule will be heard before the Supreme Court at Trenton on January 18.

Considerable activity has been lately observed on Lafayette Avenue, Hawthorne, N.J., which is the site of the announced new Hawthorne Theatre, to be built by the Community Theatre Corporation, a firm composed of a number of local people.

It has been announced that construction will immediately start on the Mercedes Theatre, to be built at 207th Street and Broadway, New York City. Eugene De Rosa is the architect and completion is looked for in the fall of 1927.

A. Abramowitz, former owner of the Alhambra Theatre, 98 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, is once again back in his old neighborhood coincident with his taking over the Washington-Fifth Avenue Theatre, Fifth Avenue and Third Street, Brooklyn, from Chas. Trippi.

H. M. Hobbs is the new manager of Keith's Alhambra, 126th Street and Seventh Avenue, New York City. Mr. Hobbs is from one of the Boston Keith theatres. The former New York manager was transferred to Boston.

The Chelsea Theatre, long devoted to a straight policy of burlesque of the eyeful species, will introduce a Sunday bill of pictures and vaudeville, according to report. Chas. Fisher and associates, of the Cross Bay and Somer's Sheepshead Bay theatres, operate the Chelsea.

Manager Evans, at one time with the Small & Straussberg Terminal Theatre, Brooklyn, and also Henry Siegle's Ritz, has been appointed manager of Chas. O'Reilly's circuit of motion picture theatres.

Irving Seidman, alias "Eddie Polo," and one of the champion night men of the Prudential Film Delivery's West Side route, is about to forsake the local film trade for the auto accessory business. Irving will locate up at Peekskill, N.Y., on the Post Road, where traffic is thickest and will give a de luxe service to all film men who happen his way.

Dave Mannheimer, manager of the Peerless Theatre, 5th Avenue and 86th Street, Brooklyn, is back on duty again after a five-day siege of the grippe.

A report to the effect that Fred Dollinger had left the management of the Filmland Theatre, Church and Nostrand avenues, Brooklyn, seems unfounded, Fred's well-known figure being in evidence around that house, according to an eyewitness.

Joe Hornstein estimates that 125 new motion pictures will open in this zone during 1927, and that isn't hard to believe with the past year's construction record in mind; in fact, actual figures at the close of the year may exceed those of Mr. Hornstein's.

Recent openings reported by the National Theatre Supply Company, of which Joe Hornstein is the Eastern division manager, include the Brook Theatre, Bound Brook, N.J., on January 12, and the Cameo Theatre, Jersey City, on January 11.

Those openings which will occur in the near future are as follows: Joelson's Parkway Theatre, 172nd Street and 3rd Avenue, New York City, and Chrisedge Theatre, Inc.'s new Wakefield Theatre, White Plains Avenue, Bronx, are both scheduled for February 1.

The Broadway Theatre, East Rockaway, which was all set for a Christmas premiere, was forced to postpone matters until around the first of February.

Another postponement was that of Sam Baker's Floral Park Theatre. This, in all probability, will also open on February 1.

William Salkin's new Eagle Theatre at 103rd Street and 3rd Avenue, New York City, will be ready about the middle of February, according to report.

Several of these houses were entirely equipped by National Supply and were reported to us by Dave Solomon, well known about the local film trade. Dave has been ill for the past few weeks, but is well again now and back on the job.

Sam Roth, manager of the Orpheum and Broadway theatres, Yonkers, N.Y., for the past five years, and also part owner of those houses, has resigned his post and will in the future be in charge of the Stanley-Fabian Baker Theatre, Dover, N.J.

Sam Lee, connected with the Walter Reade enterprises for some time, will manage the Cameo in Jersey City for Morris Kutinsky.

It is said that Jack Steinman's new Daly Theatre in uptown New York has been doing finely since its opening at Christmas time. Nat Walter, former manager of the Harlem Grand, is with Mr. Steinman at the Daly.

Joe Hornstein keeps on adding floor space to his headquarters over the Embassy. This time he has taken over part of the fourth floor. Joe reports that 1926 was the biggest year in the history of the organization, not only in New York zone, but in the Philadelphia and Boston branches, which are also under his supervision.

"Mike" Glynn will open his new Mineola Theatre within a few weeks, it is said.

Kansas City

SEVERAL fire companies responded to an alarm from the Gillis Theatre, Kansas City, Monday. Only a comparatively few feet of the feature film had been run. There were only six persons in the audience. The firemen found a film ablaze in the projection room, it having started when a film was placed too close to an electric light bulb. The fire was extinguished and the six patrons sat through it all, unaware that there had been a fire.

Six hundred orphans from Kansas City institutions were entertained by a free show at the Newman Theatre, Kansas City, through Bruce Fowler, manager, Monday afternoon. The Kansas City Public Service Company furnished six special street cars to transport the children and the event was a front page story for newspapers the following day.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Gardner, Neosho, Mo.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; W. H. Weber, Great Bend, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.

Here's one for the book: An exhibitor singing the praise of a film salesman. R. M. Shelton, Warrensburg, Mo., exhibitor, has the following to say of A. J. Simmons of the Kansas City Paramount branch:

"He never visits us without having some helpful idea and is sincere in trying to put over all houses with which he is associated—not only in respect to his own pictures, but pictures of other companies, as well. It certainly is appreciated, as he gives us helpful hints he has picked up in the territory."

John Nolan, of the Fox branch, won the traveling honors among the native sons, having gone to New York to spend his holidays.

Ed Solig, booker at the Warner Brothers branch, asserts with confidence that the Kansas City exchange will finish "right up there" in the date drive now being conducted by Warner Brothers.

W. C. Haynes, Universal representative who has been doing special work in the St. Louis territory, has returned to Kansas City to take up his duties as key town representative.

"Red" Jones, Educational branch manager, has a rather dubious explanation of that red tinge on his face these days. "Red" swears by all that is truthful that the crimson hue was acquired from laughing at an Educational comedy.

W. G. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer district exploiteer, returned to Kansas City after conducting campaigns in St. Louis and Omaha.

Minneapolis

SPEAKERS at the annual banquet of the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade, held recently at the Radisson Hotel, included W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest M.P.T.O.; Theodore Hays, general manager for F. & R.; H. L. Nicholas, owner of the Strand Theatre at Fairmont, Minn.; H. O. Martin, of United Artists; Bob Workman, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Ed Lipson, P.D.C.; Max Weisfeldt, F.B.O.; R. W. Liebmann, Pathe; Ralph Branton, Educational; A. B. Leak and Tom Tucker, Famous Players-Lasky, and L. W. Knisker, from the P.D.C. home office.

H. O. Martin, who resigned as manager of the Minneapolis branch of United Artists, has been succeeded by Lew Thompson. Thompson formerly managed the Indianapolis branch of U.A.

When the Minneapolis Arbitration Board met last week, it had as its guests Mrs. Mary Benjamin, secretary of the Des Moines Film Board of Trade, and Ben Koenig, secretary of the board in Milwaukee.

The new stage at the State Theatre, which will be one of the largest in the country, will be completed by the middle of January.

M. J. Weisfeldt of the Minneapolis branch of F.B.O. has been transferred to the Pacific Coast in connection with the rearrangement of territory and managers which this company has just completed. Shea's Buffalo Concludes Successful Year

Shows and Policies of City's Newest Theatre Receive Approval of Local Theatregoers

SHEA'S BUFFALO will celebrate its first birthday. "The wonder theatre," which has become the synonym not only for the best in entertainment, but for courtesy, comfort and genuine service, will observe its first anniversary week, commencing Sunday, January 16. With its opening a year ago Shea's Buffalo introduced many revolutionary things in the theatre world and so successful has been its entertainment plan that today, not only Buffalo and all Western New York but visitors from many other cities are singing its praises.

In its brief career of one year this theatre has developed new standards in management and entertainment at once evident in its equipment, personnel and comfort features, as well as in its stage and screen presentations. The Shea Operating Corporation, of which Buffalo's veteran showman, Michael Shea, is president, through its affiliation with Publix Theatres Corporation, has been able to bring to Shea's Buffalo stage and screen programs presented in luxurious settings and surroundings.

Service Policies

Mr. Shea and his associates in Publix Theatres Corporation hold that the success of Shea's Buffalo or any other theatre depends primarily upon the character of its personnel and that of foremost importance is the courtesy extended to the patrons by those employes with whom the patron comes into direct contact. So, in view of this fact, cashiers, doormen and footmen, those attaches whom the patron meets before passing into the theatre, are chosen with the same meticulous care that is exercised in the selection of the most important members of the administrative staff. Inside Shea's Buffalo, energetic ushers, perfectly trained and nattily clad, receive patrons not as customers but as guests. In fact every member of the Shea's Buffalo staff, including pages, program boys, checkroom attendants, nurses and ladies' maids, stand ready at all times to serve and assist with gracious willingness, and without expectation or desire for direct reward.

But Shea's Buffalo appreciates that the consideration of the mental comfort of its patrons means little unless such courtesy and service are the concomitants of worthwhile entertainment and adequate physical surroundings.

The Buffalo during the past year has inaugurated many innovations in entertainment and in addition to its Publix stage presentations and screen attractions, has brought to the city some of the biggest "names," in the theatre world for personal appearances. These luminaries included Gilda Gray and Paul Whiteman.

Art connoisseurs from many other cities have waxed enthusiastic over the art treasures in the form of paintings and sculptures by old masters, which adorn promenades and artistic corners of the theatre.

Music and Projection

The music at Shea's Buffalo is always one of the highlights of the program and during the past year this feature has been improved so that today it is more enjoyable than ever. Herbert Straub and his Magic Music is becoming a household phrase in Buffalo. Straub has developed the symphony orchestra to a high degree of musicianship and the programs offered by this organization are always worth while. Harold Ramsay presides at the console at the Wurlitzer, one of the largest of its kind in the world.

Projection, illumination, stage settings, ventilation, especially the refrigeration system during warm weather; the ushers' signal system, the rest rooms, with nurses ever ready in the ladies' rooms, the elaborate furnishings, all these and many more "wonders," are even to this day "the talk of the town."

And now, on the eve of its first birthday, Mr. Shea has planned a fitting celebration in the form of a great Anniversary Week program, the features of which will be personal appearances of Gertrude "Trudy" Ederle, Paramount's "New York," and the Frank Cambria-Publix revue, "The Pearl of Damascus."

Edwards Revue to Play Stanley

The Stanley Company of America is breaking away from its established policy in introducing as a special feature at the Stanley Theatre in Philadelphia, the week of January 24, a new edition of Gus Edwards' Revue.

A New Building Record

By P. M. ABBOTT

ON another page of this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be found a forecast for theatre building for 1927. This forecast has as its basis a very reliable source of building information.

We wish to call attention to the agreement in general between conclusions to be deducted from this forecast and those which we have previously set forth: namely, that theatre construction is on the increase rather than decline.

Our predictions have been most optimistic, and have not escaped criticism for that reason. But, optimistic as we have been, the survey we reprint this week, compiled from confidential reports made by over 2,000 architects, shows us as being conservative.

When record years, such as 1925 and 1926, are relegated to second place by a proposed program of a twenty-five percent increase over these years, for 1927, the prosperity and future of theatres can be taken as assured. Pessimism today is entirely misplaced when used in reference to the motion picture industry.

Of particular interest is the forecast for theatre building in the eastern and southern sections of the country. Our northeastern States are scheduled for treble the building of 1926. North Atlantic States for over double; southeastern an even hundred percent increase, while the southwestern and middle States will retain their present rate of theatre construction. Only the Western States are forecasted to curtailment.

With theatre construction the vanguard of advancement of this industry, 1927 should prove an all round record year.

Anniversary Bill at Howard

Special Presentation Celebrates Sixth Birthday of House

A special anniversary bill was offered at the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, last week in celebration of the sixth birthday of that house. The Howard's screen attraction was "Summer Bachelors," Fox film version of the novel of that title by Warner Fabian.

A gala presentation, produced by John Murray Anderson, was the stage feature of the program. This elaborate number was called "The Birthday Cake." Helen Yorke, coloratura soprano, was the featured performer in the presentation.

Billy "Uke" Carpenter, musical comedian, was an added stage feature. An overture by the Howard Symphony Orchestra, directed by Joseph Littau, Melvin P. Ogden's organ solo, Pathe News and a comedy, completed the program.

Wilchinski Song Features Capitol Radio Program

Martha L. Wilchinski, publicity purveyor for the Capitol Theatre, New York, stepped out of that role long enough last Sunday evening to star as the author of a new song, set to music by Dr. William Axt, which proved the feature of the radio program offered by Major Bowes and his Capitol Family. The new song is called "Little Son." It was sung by Westell Gordon.

The new ballad scored with the radio fans, judging by the large number of requests reported to have arrived at the Capitol for copies and its repetition on future programs of The Family.

Boston Met Changes Radio Programs to Thursday

The Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, has changed its broadcasting night, formerly Monday, to Thursday nights, through Station WEEI, Boston. The change is effective this week. Incidentally the broadcasting studio is one of the "sights" of the theatre, patrons being privileged to visit the studio when it is not in operation and look through the double glass doors into the room when a program is being presented. The studio is located off the lounge beneath the main floor.

Kansas City Cinemas Doing Flourishing Business

Now that December has been hurled into the scrap heap, again being labeled the "gloom month" of the year, exhibitors of the Kansas City territory are beginning to "brush up" the fronts of their theatres and look forward to increased business. Each day this week the temperature has been above 40 degrees, but business, both in the suburban and downtown houses, has shown substantial increases.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

JOHN STILLE has returned to the management of the Liberty Theatre in Portland, Ore. For the past two years Stille has been manager of the Oregon and Elsinore theatres at Salem, Ore. Since his departure from the Liberty two years ago, that house has been taken over by Northwest Theatres, Inc., from Jensen & Von Herbert, who operated the house during Stille's previous association with the Portland theatre.

EDWIN G. HITCHCOCK has been named manager of the new United Artists' Theatre in Seattle, Wash., by Harry C. Arthur, president of the Pacific Northwest Theatres, operators of the new long-run house in that city. Hitchcock recently has been manager of the Liberty and Rivoli theatres in Portland. He is a former newspaper man.

W. R. SCRUGGS, formerly Famous Players representative at Memphis, has joined the Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville as manager of the Strand Theatre there. He succeeds H. G. Judkins, who has been transferred to the Princess Theatre at Springfield, Tenn.

W. F. BROCK, manager of the Strand Theatre in Knoxville, has been promoted to manager of the Rialto in Chattanooga.

R. C. ARMSTRONG, formerly at the Keith-Albee Theatre in Louisville, Ky., is now managing the Lyric Theatre in Gainesville, Fla.

Chiropodist Helps Staff Morale

Capitol's Foot Clinic Treated 1,000 Patients Last Year

Nearly 1,000 patients were treated for foot ailments by the staff chiropodist at the Capitol Theatre, New York, during the past year. The work is in charge of Dr. Max Machbar. Major Edward Bowes, managing director at the Capitol, installed the department for the benefit of the personnel of the theatre as an indirect means of insuring perfect courtesy and service for the Capitol patrons on the theory that the condition of their feet is an important factor in the efficiency of the ushers and house attendants.

A laboratory was opened in the theatre, and all the necessary modern medical and mechanical equipment installed. In addition to the ushers' staff, the members of the ballet corps also receive the benefit of this treatment, a service which is of inestimable value to the dancers in their professional work.

Theatres in Northern N.Y. Hit by Heavy Snows

The heaviest snowstorm in several years swept over northern New York last week, costing theatres hundreds of dollars in lost patronage. In Watertown, four feet of snow fell in two days, and over 300 men were employed in clearing the streets. Theatre owners reported the smallest business of the entire year, for few persons ventured out during the storm. In some places the theatres were closed entirely. Trains ran hours behind time and much trouble was experienced in getting film.

Install Vitaphone at Strand

Louisville Premiere Scheduled for January 15

Vitaphone apparatus is being installed at the Strand Theatre in Louisville and the premiere of this new musical device is scheduled for January 15 in that city. The opening attraction will be "Don Juan" as the screen feature with the Vitaphone presentations shown with the John Barrymore starring vehicle at other theatres included on the program.

Contracts under which the Vitaphone presentations were signed for the Strand, were concluded in New York recently by Fred Dolle and Dennis Long, who, with their associates, control the Strand.

The work of installing the Vitaphone equipment was started last week at the Strand, the work going on before and after curtain time during the scheduled performances of motion pictures on the weekly change policy heretofore in force.

Tab Musical Comedy Staged at Colonial Theatre

Messrs. Bingham and Cohen offered the Indianapolis public a distinctive type of entertainment at the Colonial, starting Sunday, with the presentation of a miniature musical comedy.

Arthur Hauk's "Sunshine Revue and Beauty Chorus" was the opening attraction. With the revue, short-reel subjects and feature pictures were offered. Helen Kennedy, Tom Collins, Billy Cullen, Barney Kleeber, Claude Reed and Arthur Hauk are principals. "The Four Harmony Kings" and Cecil Paquin and Company, posing models, interspersed specialty numbers during the revue.

The new policy brought no change in admission.

New Policy at Watertown Olympic; To Offer Acts

J. Myer Schine, of Gloversville, was in Watertown last week, conferring with Sol Manheimer and L. J. Carkey, the latter being district manager for Schine houses in Northern New York. Now that the Schines have taken over the Robbins theatres in Watertown, they will inaugurate a new policy at the Olympic, calling for three changes a week and presentation acts. The theatres are to be renovated in the near future.

Wiley Solo Organist at Strand

W. Rudolf Wiley, organist at the Strand in Schenectady, and who was formerly at Atlantic City, is being featured in connection with his special musical program at the theatre.

Schenectady Strand Cuts Prices

In order to meet the competition of the new Proctor Theatre in Schenectady, the Strand, which is one of the Farash houses, and which is managed by Frank Learnan, has reduced its admission prices.

Extended Runs at 5 Detroit Theatres

Record for Hold-Over Film Attractions Set By Houses Last Week

WITH five downtown theatres offering hold-over film attractions, a new record for motion pictures in Detroit playhouses was set last week. Since the Adams and the Madison were placed on a long-run policy, it was not unusual for two or three motion picture attractions to be playing hold-over engagements in one week at Detroit, but last week's record of five elevates the mark considerably.

The pictures which last week continued over into second, third and fourth week runs were "Tell It to the Marines" at the Madison, "The Scarlet Letter" at the Adams, "Michael Strogoff" at the Broadway Strand, "Beau Geste" at the New Detroit, and "Don Juan" and Vitaphone at the Shubert-Lafayette.

New screen attractions as usual were offered at the Michigan, Capitol and State. The Michigan had "Valencia" with Harry Langdon's short comedy, "Saturday Afternoon," as an added screen feature. The Publix show for the week was "The Book of Dreams." Herbert Rawlinson made personal appearances as the stage attraction at the Capitol, which offered "The Lady in Ermine" as the leading photoplay. "Man of the Forest," starring Jack Holt, was the State's screen feature. Russ Morgan and his State Bunch provided an elaborate stage show called "Foibles of 1927." Freddie Bernard, Master of Ceremonies, Jack & Johnny Trigg, Peaches & Poppy, and the Burns Twins were the principals in this stage presentation.

Whiteman Plays Two Weeks at St. Louis Ambassador

Paul Whiteman extended his engagement at the Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, and appeared as the leading attraction for a second week at that house. Last week's appearance at the Ambassador was more or less assured when the Jazz King was credited with giving the Ambassador a record box-office take the week between Christmas and New Year's. The screen feature last week was "The Popular Sin."

Whiteman and his orchestra are at the Allen Theatre, in Cleveland, this week.

Plays Two Weeks at Merrill

"The Temptress," M.-G.-M. feature, starring Greta Garbo, was held over for a second week at the Merrill Theatre in Milwaukee last week.

Julia Glass Soloist at Capitol This Week

Julia Glass, pianiste, is the soloist on the musical program surrounding "The Flesh and the Devil," the screen feature, at the Capitol Theatre in New York this week. Miss Glass plays the first movement of Tchaikowsky's "Concerto in B Flat Minor."

The ballet of the week is called "Moon Dreams and Sun Beams." It is in two episodes, the first taking its music from Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata," which is danced by Joyce Coles, the Capitol Ballet Corps and Chester Hale Girls. The second episode is the "Waltz Song" by Bemberg, sung by Caroline Andrew, with pantomime, interpreted by Miss Coles, Mr. Triesault and the entire ensemble.

Berlin Song Featured in Strand Presentation

"Blue Skies," the newest of Irving Berlin's new songs, is being featured in the presentation which Managing Director Joseph Plunkett is offering in conjunction with "The Perfect Sap," the screen attraction at the Mark Strand, in New York, this week. Edna Burhans sings the number with a violin obligato by Madeleine MacGuigan. Others appearing in the Frolic this week are Bernado DePace, mandolinist, and Edward Albano, Mlle. Klemova, Nikolas Daks, George Kiddon, the Trado Twins and the Strand Ballet Corps, all of whom are seen in "Harlequinade," the finale of the presentation.

Musical Novelties Stage Features at Eastman

Managing Director Eric Clarke, of the Eastman Theatre, in Rochester, provided a number of interesting musical features as supplementary offerings on the program with "The General," the new Buster Keaton comedy, heading last week's presentation at the house. "Spanish Caprice," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, was the overture by the Eastman orchestra. Beatrice Ryan, recently added to the theatre's staff of organists, offered the "Toccata" from Vidor's Fifth Symphony.

There were two stage presentations, a song novelty in a special setting which showed a country lane with a white house at the end of it. Martha Atwell, soprano, and Charles Hedley, tenor, sang "The Little White House," "All Alone Monday" and other numbers. The second stage offering featured Charles Bybee and James Quinlian in a two-piano presentation.

Petroff Producer of Stage Number at Paramount

Boris Petroff produced the presentation which is currently showing at the Paramount Theatre, New York, on the program headed by "Blonde or Brunette," the Adolphe Menjou screen vehicle.

"Puppets" is the title of the presentation, which is built around the characters of Pierrot and Pierrette. The Paramount orchestra offers "Orpheus in the Underworld," by Offenbach. In addition to the screen feature, the program of film offerings includes a topical reel and "Songs of the British Isles," one of the Famous Melody Series.

Rea Orchestra Popular Hit at Albany Strand

Presentation acts appear to be well established and will undoubtedly become a permanent part of the program at the Mark Strand in Albany, N.Y. Last week Joe Rea's "California Night Hawks" established what the management of the theatre claims to have been a new house record.

This week, in addition to the regular picture program, there are acts given by a trio of piano players, including the Misses Mooreland, Crawford and Fesselet, and also an act known as "The Human Jazz Band," featuring Cogert and Matto.

Landry Orchestra at Palace

Art Landry and his orchestra were the stage attractions at Loew's Palace Theatre, Memphis, last week, playing a second consecutive week at the Publix house. The screen feature was "The Sorrows of Satan."

Forrest Theatre, Bristol, Pa., To Be Rebuilt

A new theatre is to be erected immediately to replace the Forrest Theatre, Bristol, Pa., recently wrecked by flames at a loss now estimated at $150,000. The property belongs to William Romphf and David Rabinovitz, who leased it to Mike Landow, who, in turn, sublet it to Sablosky & McGuirk, whose lease has still two years to run. It is proposed to erect a modern theatre on the site. It will be a three-story brick building with offices and stores. Contractors' bids will be sought soon. The old theatre seated 1,500, and the owners carried insurance amounting only to about $43,000.

Alterations Under Way on Delmonte, St. Louis

S. G. Hoffman has obtained a building permit to make needed alterations to place the Delmonte Theatre, Delmar Boulevard, near Clark Avenue, St. Louis, in shape for re-opening about February 1. It will operate as a subsequent run house. It is known as the largest one-floor theatre in the world, but has never been successful as a first-run house.

Ala. Amusement Hall Under Way

The E. G. Holladay Company, of Nashville and Birmingham, has been awarded contract covering a $250,000 club house and hotel at Shelby Springs, Ala., to be known as Club Yamakita.

The large banquet hall will be equipped with balcony and stage.

Stanley Company to Build 2,000-Seat Theatre in New Philadelphia Suburb

THAT new residence section which will soon develop through completion of about two thousand dwellings on the famous Aronimink Country Club tract at Drexel Hill, will be provided with a splendid motion picture house of the finest type. The theatre, which will be known as the Drexel, will represent an investment of $500,000, of which $100,000 is for the site. The house will be built as soon as practicable and will be the newest Stanley Company of America creation. Announcement of the intention to build the theatre was made yesterday by John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company, who declared that there will be early breaking of ground, to be followed immediately by active construction work. The Hoffman-Henon Company has designed the house.

The new theatre will be at the intersection of Burmont Road and the Philadelphia and Barrettsford Street Railway Company, with a breadth of approximately 131 feet on Burmont Road and extending for a depth of 250 feet. It is in the midst of a populous neighborhood and will at once fill an actual need on the part of residents. Negotiations for the acquirement of the property were completed yesterday, Mastbaum Brothers & Fleisher acting for the Stanley Company of America, with William Knatz conducting the necessary arrangements on behalf of the tract's owners. It will be remembered that the Aronimink tract was transferred not long ago, the club receiving a most attractive price for the holding.

The intention of the Stanley Company is to devote the new theatre to the finest photoplays, together with the best of music. There will be a seating capacity of 2,000 and the house will be equipped with the latest devices for heating and ventilating. Special attention will be paid to details of decoration and there will be special conveniences for patrons in well-arranged retiring rooms. Building operations will be expedited so that the house may not be delayed in opening. A feature will be a number of stores to be a part of the structure.

Stanley to Break Ground Soon at Bridgeton

Ground will be broken as soon as conditions are favorable for a theatre to be constructed by the Stanley Company of America at the southwest corner of East Connecticut and N. Pearl streets, Bridgeton, N.J. The announcement was made by John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley organization. The theatre will have a capacity of 2,000 and the investment, including land, will be something in excess of a million and a half. Work will be pushed in order to have the theatre in operation by fall.

New Stanley, Pittsburgh, Pa., Will Seat 4,000

Combined Cost of Theatre and Office Building Estimated at Over $10,000,000

SEATING over 4,000 people, the new Stanley Theatre, now under construction at Seventh Street and Penn Avenue, will be one of the largest, and the most beautiful theatres in the State. It will be operated under the direction of the Stanley Company of America, controlling the Rowland & Clark theatres and the Harry Davis Enterprises under the personal supervision of James B. Clark and Harry Davis.

Eight Stories High

Rising to a height equivalent to eight stories, the theatre building will be constructed of granite, light brick and terra-cotta, absolutely fireproof throughout. The lobby entrance will be in the centre of the building on Seventh Street, over which will be a copper and bronze marquee of unique design acting also as a base for a forty-foot electric sign, flat against the building. Two spacious storerooms will be on each side of the entrance, so designed that they can be converted into one large store. The lobby will have a terazza floor, marble base, and walls of ornate plaster, marble and mirrors. A highly-ornamented ticket booth, constructed entirely of bronze, metal, marble and glass, will be so arranged in the center of the lobby as to adequately provide for capacity crowds. From the foyer, two grand staircases rise to the promenade floor, and both the main and promenade floors will have ample check-rooms, toilet facilities, spring water drinking fountains, lounging and smoking rooms.

The auditorium, the largest in the city, will be finished in ornamental plaster, marble and damask of rich coloring. The extraordinary design, it is said, will provide phenomenal acoustics. The ceiling will be a gigantic dome, indirectly lighted by many vari-colored lights. An immense chandelier of special design will hang from the dome, while smaller chandeliers of similar design will ornament the promenade dome and all the various rooms. The stage will be one of the largest in the East, the opening being 75 feet wide and 50 feet high. Backstage equipment will be modern in every respect, including mechanical stage lift apparatus, and the very latest lighting equipment.

The entire orchestra pit will be on an elevator, and will be lighted by spotlights high in the ceiling, so concentrated as to throw a brilliant light on the orchestra without reflection upon the stage or out into the audience. A lounge room will be provided back-stage for the comfort of the orchestra, in addition to the musical directors' study room, a music library and locker rooms. There will be lounge rooms and individual dressing rooms for the performers, a large chorus dressing room, and a call room. Elevators will operate between the stage floor and the upper dressing rooms.

Empty House in 3 Minutes

The promenade floor will open into the balcony with seven entrances, which, with three cross-over aisles in the balcony and ample exit doors throughout the building, will allow the theatre to be cleared of an audience in less than three minutes should the occasion arise. In addition to the lounges for both men and for women, there will also be on that floor the manager's office and a spacious lounge for the general public. It is lighted by an immense chandelier, hung from a beautiful dome, indirectly lighted by vari-colored lights.

The projection room, absolutely fireproof throughout, will be completely equipped with the latest appliances for projecting pictures, spotlights and other lighting effects. All the latest special improvements have been incorporated in its design. Rewind rooms, operator's lounge and private toilet facilities will adjoin the booth.

Although of complete fireproof construction, the building will be equipped with automatic sprinklers in addition to regular theatre fire equipment, and will provide for an emergency water system by virtue of a 15,000-gallon tank, 120 feet in the air.

One of the most up-to-date combined cooling and heating plants known to modern science will be installed, supplying heat during winter, and fresh, clean, cool dry air, without draft, throughout the hottest summer weather. No expense is to be spared on either the exterior or the interior in making the Stanley Theatre one of the finest in the country and a credit to the community. Hoffman-Henon Company of Philadelphia, Pa., are the designers and general contractors, and the W. T. Grange Company of Pittsburgh, are the supervising contractors.

The Clark Building, a twenty-three-story office building, is now under way on the adjoining property. It will cover an area of over 15,000 square feet. It will be an absolute fireproof construction of granite, limestone, brick and terra-cotta.

The light color, with its monumental design, will make the structure outstanding in the downtown district. The first floor has been designed to accommodate a banking or commercial enterprise, or it can be divided into smaller units to suit the tenants.

Warner Bros. Los Angeles Theatre Under Way

Permit to build and contracts have been let on Warner Brothers' new theatre, at Wilcox and Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal., according to the local realtor who negotiated the transaction.

Lange and Bergestrom will handle the building from plans drawn by G. Albert Lansburgh. The estimated cost of construction is $1,500,000 for the entire structure. The auditorium is planned to have a seating capacity of 3,000 and a stage measuring 60x100, one of the largest on the Coast.

Nelson, B.C., Citizens to Realize Their Hope

For several years citizens of Nelson, B.C., have been crying for a new motion picture theatre and with the recent announcement made by J. P. Pitner, manager of the Starland Theatre in that city, they are well on the way toward realization of their hopes. Mr. Pitner recently left for Vancouver, where he will complete details for the new house with the Famous Players-Canadian Company.

Start Work on Birmingham Publix Theatre

Work started last week on tearing down the old building on Eighteenth Street to make way for the new $1,500,000 Publix Theatre. Officials of Publix Theatres Corporation plan to complete the new house in time for a New Year's opening in 1928.

Roxy Switchboard Claimed Largest

Has Over 1,000 Levers and Took a Year to Construct

Hauled by trucks from its landing-place at the ferry dock, what is claimed to be the largest stage switchboard that has ever been constructed was recently installed in the switchboard room at the left of the stage in the new Roxy Theatre, 50th-51st Street and 7th Avenue, N. Y. City. This switchboard has a total of over 1,000 switching levers. It will consume electricity which totals 1,500 horsepower, the amount of current equivalent to that used by 25,000 houselights, or sufficient lighting to supply 2,000 homes.

The combined equipment necessary to produce these effects has a total weight of over fifty tons. The board, which was constructed in Chicago and was over a year in preparation, is 22 feet long. All of the heavy currents are manipulated in a fireproof enclosure in the basement, where there is an array of electrically operated switches which respond to the manipulating levers on the stage level.

In order to supply sufficient current to manipulate the board, the combined services of the New York Edison Company and the United Electric Light and Power Company will be employed.

Direct feeders have been installed between the generating station and the theatre which is arranged to interlock with the local supply feeds, commonly referred to as network.

The manipulating levers on the switchboard are so arranged that the operation is similar to that of a pipe organ.

The task of placing in position and making the necessary inter-connections of miles of electric cable and thousands of connections has been placed in charge of Harry Alexander, Inc., whose corps of engineers is co-operating with the Hub Electric Co. in the installation. Due to the demands of this work, it has been necessary for the Hub Electric Co. to establish a New York office at 1457 Broadway.

To quote the manufacturer of the intricate switchboard and control apparatus, the Hub Electric Company of Chicago, F. L. Decker the president and the chief engineer who has had this work under his direct supervision for the past two and one half years:

"The Roxy stage switchboard is without question the largest stage switchboard that has ever been built. To give you an idea of the magnitude of this apparatus, imagine yourself sitting down to a piano or pipe organ having a thousand keys. The Roxy board has a total of over a thousand switching levers which are used in the manipulation of the numerous effects in both the auditorium and the stage."

Rochester Men Combine to "Build and Buy"

MAX FOGEL and William Tishkoff, long identified with the theatre business in Rochester, N.Y., and Frederick Bieger, contractor, have recently combined to form the Bemat Amusement Company, Inc. The firm will "build, buy and operate theatres."

The firm at present operates the Murray and Pullman theatres in Rochester, plans the construction of a 1,400-seat house to be known as the "Webster," on Webster Avenue, Rochester, and also has plans under way for building theatres in Syracuse, N.Y.

Dress Ala. House with New Sign

Interstate's new Ritz Theatre is dressing up again. One of the largest electric signs in the South is being erected atop the building. It will flash the headline attraction of the Ritz to all Birmingham.

Famous Players Portland Plans Ready Feb. 1

Plans for the construction of a new theatre building for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at Portland, Ore., will be ready about February 1, according to an announcement made recently by local architects DeYoung and Roald, associates of Rapp & Rapp, a nationally known firm.

The estimated cost of the entire building project is $1,500,000. The theatre portion, which will be leased to Famous Players-Lasky for a term of thirty years, will probably contain an auditorium seating about 3,000 and a building between 70 and 80 feet in height.

Inquiries and Comments

To Relieve His Mind

A PROJECTIONIST in a small Illinois town, located near Chicago, picks us up on our recent editorial, "Education and the Union," and wishes to know why all the fuss is being made over the Union when there are any number of non-union men in small towns and villages who consider themselves just as important in the general scheme of things as their organized city brothers.

Here is his letter:

"Dear Sir:

"For several years I have been an ardent follower of your department, and as a result have derived much benefit, for which I want to thank you very much.

"In your issue of December 18, I read your article regarding the education of the craft and must say that your point of view in this matter is one that all projectionists should try to follow.

"But—how about the small town fellow who is not a member of the Union? Who, as a general rule, can't get in even if he tries, owing to the fact that he does not have the advantages of the Union man in educating himself in the technical phases of projection.

"Don't you think he deserves some consideration? I realize that the Union, as a whole, may regard the country projectionist as a half-baked kid who operates a pic'her machine, but there are some of us who strive to learn and try to give the patrons of our theatre the best possible results from our equipment.

"My equipment, for example, is one Simplex, one Powers, and a home-made dissolver, all operated from a 110-Volt A. C. circuit. But at that, my light is always clear and white, the change-over unnoticeable and my picture steady. And for the past eleven years I have done all of my own repair work. Furthermore, I have studied all available literature on mechanical, optical, and electrical phases of motion picture projection.

"But—when I apply to a Union for admission to its membership, I am gracefully put off, or, in some manner or other, am indirectly given to understand that I don't know enough to be a member.

"Now if this has bored you, I am sorry, and you have my hearty consent to chuck it in the waste basket, but it was on my mind and I just had to let it out to someone and I picked on you.

"For several personal reasons, I am asking you to withhold my name if you should wish to publish any or all of this.

"Wishing you and your department every success, and thanking you again, I beg to remain

"Yours for Better Projection."

Same Old Story

To facilitate referring to this chap, we shall call him "W. L.," which are the initials of his first two names.

As far as we can see, Friend W. L., yours is the same old story in connection with a problem which has ever confronted the unorganized men who desire to overcome the barriers erected by the Union to keep their membership properly limited so that a few could derive benefits of a closed organization. The problem referred to is this—"How can an experienced projectionist, not a member of the Union, but deriving a livelihood from this class of work, obtain membership in an organization which initially was formed to include just such persons as himself?"

Theoretically, this is a simple question and the answer appears to be that the said projectionist should make formal application for admission to the Union, whereupon he would be duly examined for the purpose of determining whether he was capable and proficient in his work. If he passed the examination, he would then be voted upon by the membership to determine whether his personal characteristics were such as to make him a desirable associate of the membership at large, and if elected, he would, after paying admission fee and dues, be properly admitted.

This appears to be a simple, if somewhat inaccurate, recital of the steps in the procedure, and many non-Union projectionists cannot understand why they do not get beyond the first step, which is that of making a formal application.

Much bitterness is occasioned among applicants by the fact that they are required to accompany their application with a sum of money, which, by no means, is a small one, with the understanding that this money, less a nominal fee to cover expenses, be returned in the event of his not being elected to membership.

General Good Reasons

There seems to be several good reasons why the membership of locals is purposely limited. Motion picture projectionists, in large cities at least, receive good wages, and this field of work, therefore, is attractive to outsiders, who see, primarily, a way to obtain excellent pay and relatively short working hours. As a result, practically every local is swamped with applications for membership and each has a waiting list of applicants awaiting balloting and election, which numbers up into the hundreds.

There is no way to crash the gates, and the only thing to do is to fall in line and wait.

Then, too, members of the Union, working in small towns and cities, cast longing eyes at the pay which their brothers in the large cities pull down and no small number try to obtain transfers in order to share likewise in the prosperity.

The Local's Duty

Now it should be remembered that there are only a certain number of jobs in any locality and it is one of the principal duties of the local to see that "each one" of its members is employed.

Allowing for a reasonable number of reserves, it should be clear that the membership of any local is automatically fixed by the number of jobs available in that territory. Therefore, the rate of admission to the local must necessarily be governed by the number of vacancies created by the construction of new theatres, the death of members, the transfer of members, etc. It must be realized that the number of vacancies so created are strictly limited and this accounts for the large waiting lists not encountered.

Having more applications than they can possibly take care of, it is no wonder that small regard is had for new applications for membership.

The best advice we can give, Friend W. L., is that you make friends with a number of the members of the local you are endeavoring to join, and then keep on trying so that when your name comes up for ballot you will have some friends on the inside who will put a good word in for you. Don't fail to "keep at it."

Montana Theatre Opened by "Hi" Knutson

The Miles City Theatre, Miles City, Montana, under the management of Hi Knutson, was recently opened to an enthusiastic audience. Utility and artistry have been combined to make this playhouse one of the finest in the state and Mr. Knutson spared no expense in his efforts to make it attractive.

The installation of a new two manual Robert Morton pipe organ was completed in time for the opening and made its contribution to the exceptionally fine motion picture and vaudeville program arranged for the first night. There is a full trap combination included in the general arrangement. Miss Marmon, formerly of the American Theatre at Butte, has been engaged to play the new instrument.

The color scheme of the theatre is light buff and blue blending in pleasing harmony. Well cushioned seats were supplied by the American Seating Company.

Milwaukee Suburbs Busy

Theatre Building Continues Increase with Announcement of Four New Houses

MILWAUKEE motion picture theatre building continues to increase at a rapid rate. During the week several interesting announcements were made. George Fischer, manager of the Milwaukee Theatre, announced that construction of the new south side theatre in which he is interested will begin within a week. It is to be located on 21st and National avenues, an active, progressive community center. The house will have a capacity of 1,600. Mr. Fischer expects it will be ready for opening about the middle of September.

Filing of incorporation papers of the Northwest Amusement Corporation during the week indicated eight northwest side businessmen interested in the project. This corporation plans the erection of a $250,000 house on the corner of 25th and Hopkins streets. Building will begin about February 1st, and it is expected the theatre will open about the 1st of October. The theatre will have a capacity of 1,300. The building will include recreation facilities and two stores in addition to the theatre.

Wauwatosa, Milwaukee's western suburb, has been promised two new theatres. Wauwatosa, though strong in civic spirit, has very little promise of ever having a prominent business center. Because the present business section is so very small, and the residential section lies so close around it leaving no favorable theatre sites, theatre men have hesitated to intrude. However, within the week two new theatre projects have been announced much to the delight of the residents.

The Badger Building Service Company has purchased lots on Wisconsin Street, and ground will be broken soon. The building has been leased on a 15-year contract to the Badger Amusement Company. Peacock and Frank are the architects for this $200,000 theatre. The other motion picture theatre is to be erected just one and one-half blocks from this theatre and also on Wisconsin Street.

Arkansas Theatre Opens

Universal Theatre Corp.'s Strand at Jonesboro Stages Successful First Night

AN auspicious dedication marked the formal opening, on New Year's Day, of the Strand Theatre, at Jonesboro, Ark., Universal's latest acquisition in theatres, when more than 2,100 persons attended the performances, which began at 1 o'clock that afternoon. The house seats 1,262, but 600 more awaited on the mezzanine floor and in the lobby for an opportunity to see the second show of the evening, while fully 300 others were turned away for lack of room.

The new theatre is said to have cost $110,000. It has a fine new organ, a beautiful mezzanine with all modern conveniences, has a stage opening of 36 feet, the stage being finely equipped. The draperies are all of dark blue, including the screen and the front drop curtain. A large electric sign, just above the marquee, can be seen for blocks from either side.

The opening exercises proved a gala affair and attracted considerable attention. The papers in Jonesboro had given much space to the opening, indicating that Locke Crumley, of the theatre department of Universal Chain Theatres, Inc., of Atlanta, Ga., who had charge of the theatre, and Earle E. Griggs, director of exploitation for Universal, had both overlooked no opportunity in putting over the publicity.

The exercises began at 7:30 and the program consisted of a welcome address on behalf of the city by C. J. Chapin, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; a welcome address on behalf of the churches by the Rev. Ira Kirk, pastor of the First Christian Church; a review of the theatre business of Jonesboro over the past decade by Eli Whitney Collins, president of the Independent Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, who is a resident of Jonesboro and who, together with Messrs. Mack and Powers, owns the new theatre leased to Universal.

The exercises were presided over by Earle E. Griggs, who introduced each number and kept up a running fire of witty and serious comment. The affair was a success from every angle.

Theatre Magnates Plan West Coast House

Ventura, Cal., will have one of the finest motion picture theatres on the Pacific Coast when the plans laid by Charles Corcoran, Sol Lesser, and Mike Rosenberg materialize. As matters stand at present, they plan to start work on the new house during January.

Plans call for a theatre seating 1,500, all seats on one floor. This is twice the size of the American, the present largest theatre in Ventura. The entire building will be of Spanish design. Everything modern in the way of equipment is included in the specifications.

The owners will, in all probability, present a program consisting of the finest first-run feature pictures with elaborate presentations and occasional vaudeville and stage productions.

A Correction

In the January 14 issue of "Motion Picture News," reference was made to F. C. Leavitt's announcement of a new theatre to be built at Rochester, N.Y. This should have read Rochester, N.H., where Mr. Leavitt owns and operates the Leavitt Theatre.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Valencia" — Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York

American: "It ought to duplicate the phenomenal success of 'The Merry Widow.' How wise were the powers that be of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to secure this title for a picture of old Spain and star Mae Murray in it. She plays a sunny maid of pure Castilian blood. Never has she looked younger or prettier. 'Valencia' is what fans love to see her do. Exquisite sets make 'Valencia' a delight to watch."

World: "Out of 'Valencia' Metro has gained a movie with gayety because of Mae Murray, and beauty because of the direction of Dimitri Buchowetki Miss Murray, possessing much of the lightness and glitter of that enchanting song, 'Funiculi, Funicula,' with its philosophic, 'some think the world is made for fun and frolic, and so do I,' has here a role made mostly for fun and frolic. Mr. Buchowetzki runs the story evenly with such fine details as the camera-caught sway of the mob, the lighting for a scene in which the sailor is marched to prison, the composition of the ship scenes."

Morning Telegraph: "Marvellous Mae Murray is as decorative an actress as any in pictures, and her pouting lips and eyes are as alluring in 'Valencia' as in any of the film ladies she has portrayed. Lloyd Hughes never appeared so handsome as in this one. . . 'Valencia' is exquisite in color and admirable in workmanship. A beautiful production notable for fine direction and exquisite pictorial composition of romantic sequences."

Mirror: "Lest you have forgotten, Buchowetzki is the genius who megaphoned 'The Swan' and 'The Midnight Sun.' 'Valencia' takes its place with these celluloiders. Their director's subtlety is astonishing. Roy D'Arcy repeats 'The Merry Widow' in this flicker. Lloyd Hughes zips sincerely into his Spanish sailor role and Miss Murray's admirers will delight in her characterization. 'Valencia' has been beautifully dressed."

Telegram: "Home bodies are in for a wonderful treat at the Capitol Theatre. 'Valencia,' a saga of sunny Spain, is the order of the week. Our Mae is the unmistakable native of bonny Barcelona. . . . The mob scenes feature the most sensational exposition of Spanish shawls and mantillas seen hereabouts."

Evening Graphic: "Should fill the houses at every performance."

Evening World: "A grand opera story. Highly entertaining."

Post: "Story of a Spanish charmer—picturesque background."

Herald Tribune: "The blonde and beautiful star plays a Spanish siren who can lure with lips that drop honey. Lloyd Hughes is a delightful actor."

Times: "Miss Murray performs with her accustomed grace and charm."

Journal: "Colorful costumes, Good backgrounds."

Evening Sun: "Comedy relief really funny. Roy D'Arcy was the chief funster. Pretty settings."

"The Big Parade"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Rialto and Picadilly Theatres, Stockholm, Sweden

Svenska Dagbladet: "'The Big Parade' has had such a great amount of advertisement previous to its releasing, that one felt sceptical towards same. However, I have seldom seen a picture that gave such a strong impression of having been cut out directly from life as did 'The Big Parade.' It contains both humour, tragic and above all fascinates from the beginning to the end. In addition to this the photographing is splendid.

"King Vidor is the director and has proved himself one of the foremost. Even if one has seen in reality a great deal of that portrayed on the white screen, the strong feeling of the picture's genuineness is overwhelming. It is the war's monstrosities that are depicted—and with breathless excitement one follows the many thousands of soldiers on their way to the front. King Vidor has here produced wonderful effects with very small means, and the scenes in No Man's Land are so realistic that they can compete with those taken by military film-photographers, which have never been accessible to the public. John Gilbert plays nobly and understands to give his part of a lover a unique charm. Renee Adoree plays convincingly and feelingly. 'The Big Parade' is a victory for the film—and for my part I am going to see it once again."

Dagens Nyheter: "'The Big Parade' is the season's best picture. King Vidor, the director, has created a wonderfully touching and fascinating picture. When the introductionary scenes are over—the outbreak of the war in U.S.A. and the men enlisting as volunteers—then the story has a dramatic tempo and an intensity which is seldom seen on thte white screen. Vidor's directing is masterly both in what concerns the outer scenarios and the individual performances. John Gilbert and Renee Adoree have the leading roles, and it is to a great deal due to John Gilbert's acting that the picture is so soul-stirring. Few actors can play the part of a lover as does John Gilbert. Renee Adoree is womanly and beautiful. Claire McDowell plays the mother very winningly and beautifully."

Stockholms Dagblad: "'The Big Parade' depicts the war as the hell it was. King Vidor has with this picture delivered a masterpiece. The climax is the scene between John Gilbert and the dying German. Two human beings, still panting from the fight. Sympathy takes place of hate and contempt, and around them the din of the battle is heard. It is a scene that late will be forgotten.

"Summer Bachelors" — Fox Films, Capitol Theatre, New York

Evening World: "Madge Bellamy succeeds well. And the credit for 'Summer Bachelors' is largely hers. Leila Hyams did well with her first important role."

Telegram: "The Capitol Theatre is entertaining this week, as a successor to 'Faust,' a sophisticated little comedy steeped in box-office appeal. 'Summer Bachelors' is a Fox production, and it contains such promising material as to warrant some fast thinking among the captains of our premiere motion picture companies. Allan Dwan has directed the picture with a Lubitschean technique. The moral of it all is: Keep your weather orb fixed on Fox."

Journal: "The photoplay is syncopated entertainment. It has good comedy and all the ultra-sophisticated flapper situation one expects of the author of 'Flaming Youth.' Leila Hyams, new to the screen, is very lovely, and ought to stay in pictures. Winninger and Catlett pull their stage gags, and Madge is cute. It's all as light and frothy and bubbling as the cocktails they drink during the entire film."

Times: "By way of contrast, it is perhaps a good thing that 'Summer Bachelors,' an adaptation of Warner Fabian's novel of the same name, is just now defying the cold of these December days at the Capitol Theatre. It is Allan Dwan's first production for the Fox Film Corporation, and it succeeds in dispelling thoughts of the frosty weather. Its scenes treat of summer, and consequently some of the characters are not only beheld enjoying cooling breezes aboard a motor boat, but are also depicted taking a dip in a placid Adirondack lake. Miss Bellamy's vivacity and eharm are distinct assets to this production. She plays with zeal and sincerity, always impressing one with her interest in the action of the narrative."

Sun: "It is one of those flippant, snappy cinema stories about the gay philanderings of 'summer bachelors,' whose wives have been so careless as to leave them in town at vacation time. 'Summer Bachelors' bears a distinct relation to 'Flaming Youth'— ah how well this Warner Fabian (who is reputed to be none other than Mr. Adams, the well-known novelist) knows his public. Flaming middle age, it is, this 'Summer Bachelors.' It will make money. Madge Bellamy represents a sufficiently good time for most of the unsophisticated onlookers. There is much good to say of Mr. Dwan's direction. It is original and human. He holds the interest of an audience. . . Walter Catlett, fresh from the stage, Charles Winninger, fresh from 'No, No Nanette,' and Hale Hamilton, fresh from 'The Great Gatsby' certainly stood out."

Evening Graphic: "If you believe in the power of suggestion and shiver as you dash along Broadway this week. step into the Capitol Theatre where gay folk cavort across the cinema screen; 'Summer Bachelors' mopping their warm brows and summer vamps doing their stuff in airy chiffons. And you will forget the cold."

Favorable Reaction

The constantly increasing use of Eastman Panchromatic Negative Film by producers means more and more pictures with blues, reds, yellows and greens in their true black and white relationship.

Effects unobtainable with ordinary negative are usual with "Pan". And the difference—the superiority—of prints on Eastman Positive from "Pan" negatives is readily apparent on the screen.

Such an obvious—and important—improvement in the art cannot fail to have favorable box office reaction.

Dear Sir:

"The Nervous Wreck" is one of the best ballyhoo pictures ever released.

I used the stunts suggested in the press sheet and added a few of my own and had the whole neighborhood talking weeks ahead. It was a riot, and brought the people in when the picture was shown.

I'm satisfied.

"The Nervous Wreck" is a snap for any real showman. Get behind this picture, with the right kind of ballyhoo, and your box office will tell you the results in big money.

I tied up with merchants in my neighborhood in co-operative ads in a miniature newspaper, and not only made enough to cover my entire exploitation campaign, but made a profit.

Any exhibitor, who doesn't make money on "The Nervous Wreck," doesn't know an exploitation picture when he sees it.

Dear Sir:-

January 10, 1927.

"The Nervous Wreck" pulled them in for a split week, and the increased box-office receipts more than justified the extra exploitation put behind it.

The title offers unusual angles for unique ballyhoo and advertising, and capitalizing on these brought me results.

This is one of the most entertaining comedies of the year and will do business for any exhibitor who takes advantage of its great advertising possibilities.

Dear Sir:

You can't go wrong on the Nervous Wreck. Christie made a real showmens picture when he put this great stage success on the screen, and Harrison Ford is a knockout as the Nervous Wreck. It went big with my patrons and I had them standing up at every performance.

I did plenty of extra bally-hoo and made a lot of tie-ups suggested by the title. This helped, and please give me some more like the Nervous Wreck.

Yours truly,

Dear Sir:-

I found the "Nervous Wreck" to be a natural exploitation picture and that the unique and crowd pulling stunts suggested by the title and the comedy element in the production enabled me to put over an exploitation campaign that had crowds lined up every day we showed it. Featuring strong the comedy element, increased our matinee attendance of women and children considerably.

I cleaned up on the picture doing much more than the average business and every live showman can do the same.

Dear Mr. Dillon:

A showman's picture, with a showman's title, "The Nervous Wreck." I ballyhooed this picture to the limit, and it got me the money. There are some expert stunts in this picture; and I didn't overlook any of them. Made a big flash in front of theatre and in lobby, with novelty cutouts, use street ballyhoo, and unique give away. Public like picture immensely.

The Laemmle Anniversary

TWENTY-ONE years ago, Carl Laemmle entered the film business as the proprietor of a small store show. Last Monday night, in Los Angeles, at a dinner attended by a host of filmdom's elite, he was feted on his sixtieth birthday—the head of a great picture corporation. And there is still another milestone: he rounds out at this time ten years of "Straight from the Shoulder Talks."

The Laemmle career is interesting from many angles. It is glowing testimony to the truism that opportunity is wide-open in America for character and brains.

It testifies also to this: that a hard fighter can be a straightforward and successful business man; and, what is perhaps still more impressive, can be beloved by all. The affectionate phrase, "Uncle Carl," is eloquent evidence of that last assertion.

Carl Laemmle is one of the great pioneers —a personality of whom the motion picture can feel justly proud.

There is another significant lesson, too, we think, in the Laemmle career: man-power is the thing that has brought the industry to its present high position. Man-power, of the sort so well typified by Carl Laemmle, is the thing—and the only thing—that will keep it there and move the industry forward in pace with its opportunities.

The story of all great industries is the story of the man himself. Their greatness is the greatness of man-power.

The lesson of Laemmle, too, is the lesson of all pace-makers. "The industrial situation is never locked," wrote William A. Johnston in a recent editorial on this page. "It simply won't stay locked. No human power is great enough to hold an agent which the whole world aspires to see and reacts to.

"There have been always, there always will be sky-high opportunities in this industry of motion pictures for the right men, whoever they are."

Of the right men, Carl Laemmle has been and is an outstanding example. Universal, coming up through the arduous Patents fight, and the other turmoil of the early days, has been, under Mr. Laemmle's wise direction, one of the pace-makers.

Today the company is in the finest shape of its career. It is strong in production, distribution, exhibition, with an increasing number of theatres at its command. Yet always a fair competitor and mighty popular with the exhibitor.

As Carl Laemmle sought and fairly used great opportunities, so he has always stood for the principle of opportunities for others. He has practised, not merely preached, fair play. It is the nature of the man himself, and a big factor in his own man-power.

A wise leader, surrounded with strong men. The lesson of Laemmle seems to us preeminently the lesson of man-power and real organization.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

BUSINESS up and down Broadway showed something of a decline this week, particularly in the two-dollar houses. Conditions last week showed a falling off and there has been no improvement since. No one has any definite reason to assign for this except unfriendly weather, the after-Holiday lull, and the like. "What Price Glory?" is about holding its own. "The Big Parade" is selling little standing room and matinees are not as strong as they were. "Old Ironsides," which has been something of a disappointment up to now, is apparently building up, although it will probably take some time to make a satisfactory two-dollar stand out of the Rivoli, if ever. "The Music Master" at the Mark Strand is going very well and is much liked; it may do $35,000 on the week. "Fire Brigade," "Tell It to the Marines," "Beau Geste," "Don Juan" and "Better 'Ole" are all somewhat under previous high levels.

* * *

FOR the first time in the highly successful history of the Capitol Theatre in New York City a picture will be held for a third consecutive week—"Flesh and the Devil." We dropped in for the last show on Tuesday of this (the second) week, and the house was full to the last row. The total attendance last week numbered more than 117,000 persons; about 110,000 appears likely for this week; and another 100,000 is hoped for next week. This will probably mean total receipts of about $200,000 on the three weeks. Last week was well over $71,000; and this week bids fair to bring in between $65,000 and $68,000.

* * *

AN exhibitor's first-hand views on the British film situation are presented in a letter from J. Reid, manager of the Empire Theatre at Alfreton, England, one of the Midland Empire theatres. He says, in part: "You in America seem to have a something we don't know how to develop and utilize which makes the difference between success and partial success on the screen. Personally, I am sure Britain has the factors for successful picture production latent within her, but decay of function has brought decay of faculty, and only repetitions in production will bring back that efficiency which we in England wish to see in relation to national motion picture productions. . . .

"It is on the lines of absolute good-will and a fundamentally sound business outlook that we will aid each other in developing by co-operation the most wonderful industry of this wonderful 20th century.

"I give it to you, sure, as you would say, that a Quota will be the first principle of the bill to be introduced in the next session. I predict the quota base will be higher than suggested by the C. E. A. here."

Nearly a year ago, writing in The Cinema, Mr. Reid suggested that a better plan would be for the Government to utilize the proceeds from the Entertainment tax (about $25,000,000 yearly) to subsidize British production for five years, after which it could stand on its own bottom.

* * *

LOUIS B. MAYER, summing up the developments during 1926 in the field of stage presentations, points out that it is still the picture which makes the difference between an average week's gross and a high gross. Presentations, he says, may keep a theatre out of the red, perhaps, but they will not break records, for which reason the manager of such a house must still pick his features just as carefully as though he showed films alone.

* * *

FOLLOWING the excellent handling of what might have been a serious situation at the Fox Audubon Theatre, New York City, recently when fire broke out next door, the following telegram was received by the management from Louis S. Gimbel of Gimbel Bros., department store owners: "The marvelous dispersement of your audience last night shows excellent management for safety first. I congratulate you and your management."

in a series of 6 western features

"How Good" First; Then "What Price"

A picture bought on price alone is rarely a bargain.

A picture bought first because it's GOOD and secondly because the price is right, clicks with your patrons and with your bankbook at one and the same time.

The Buffalo Bill Jr.'s are made for YOUR needs, which means just this; cracking good Westerns that will make a hit with your audiences and with you, for you can get them at a price that will make you money.

It's possible even today to make good features at a relatively low cost and these Westerns prove it. Just ask the Pathe man when you can look at one or two.

THREE great Theatres, New York's most recent, have adopted the Carrier System of Air Conditioning to make "Every day a good day" for their patrons.

Carrier Conditioned

THEATRES

People have learned to recognize immediately the health-giving comfort prevalent every day in the year in Carrier Conditioned Theatres. Theatre owners and Architects have learned that the Carrier Contract is not a sale of individual pieces of equipment but a "Contract for Results", a guarantee to create and automatically maintain ideal atmospheric conditions for comfort within the theatre at all times. The design, the equipment—the results are backed by a responsible corporation.

The complete Carrier System. is now available for the fine small theatres.—. Ask for the book "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning."

There is yet time before next Summer to make your Theatre a Carrier Conditioned Theatre. Ask for a visit from our Engineers.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The first picture to be sent over the new A. T. & T. line from Los Angeles to New York was of J. L. Warner, production manager of Warner Bros.

Eddie Cantor becomes a much harassed postman in his next feature comedy for Famous Players, appropriately titled "Special Delivery"

Mary Ann Jackson, tiny Mack Sennett comedienne in Pathe comedies, realized every child's fondest wish when she got this jar of candy on her fourth birthday

She Liked The Picture

ALICE FIELDS, a 15-year-old girl, in Springfield, Mass., enjoyed the picture at Poli's Theatre so much that she went to sleep on a wardrobe pile when the house closed, with the intention of being ready for the first performance the next day. While the police were making every effort to locate the girl, the night watchman found her at 3 a.m., peacefully slumbering. A patrolman came to the theatre and took her home. Our correspondent fails to state whether or not she came back the next day.

Basketball Tournament Opens

THE first game of the 1927 Motion Picture Basketball League tournament was played on Tuesday evening, January 11, by Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Fox winning by a score of 34 to 30. Al Star, manager and right forward of the Fox five, has been made chairman of the Basketball League. The M.P.A.A. is now sponsoring a variety of athletic activities, which also includes baseball, bowling and tennis. The benefit of the friendly rivalry and good fellowship being built up by this sort of sport cannot fail to be considerable. George Reddy, of Pathe, is getting more exercise than most of the members, since in addition to playing baseball in the summer he has to pound the typewriter the year 'round handling the association publicity.

The second game of the basketball schedule was played on January 13, when Consolidated Films beat United Artists by a score of 20 to 14.

Camera Achievements

PROBABLY no class of workers in the cinema field today is trying more diligently than the cinematographers to bring a touch of originality into their work. Leo Tover, one of the youngest cameramen at the Paramount Long Island Studio, made a scene recently for "Love's Greatest Mistake," which incorporates 18 scenes into one. This was made possible by the use of a camera mounted on a wheeled platform and controlled by weights, permitting movement in three directions. The scene was laid in a night club, and after the atmosphere of the place was registered on the film the camera truck was moved closer to Josephine Dunn and Frank Morgan at their table. Then William Powell and Iris Gray were brought within range of the moving camera, and as the action of the story progressed, 18 scenes were recorded in unbroken continuity, without any use of the lap dissolve.

Charles Van Enger, first cameraman on "The Runaway Enchantress," was likewise presented with a tricky problem recently. This was the taking of action scenes in a storm in a small fishing boat under actual conditions on a rough ocean. Cameras with recoil tripod balancers have been constructed for this, the balancers responding to trigger action to take care of the quick movements of the tiny craft.

Members of the Fox A. C. bowling team, which has won two-thirds of its games to date in the Motion Picture bowling tournament. Left to right, they are: John Mattson, captain; Wesley Wyckoff, John Bondar, Arthur Busch and Al Star

Daniel B. Clark, president of the American Society of Cinematographers, in expressing thanks for recent editorial prominence given his views on the credit title situation, adds a sensible comment when he says:

"While we realize that such titles may sometimes fall into redundancy and ambiguity, we feel that there are certain legitimate limits within which credits may well be kept without harm to anyone concerned—and we believe that the cinematographer has sort of an inalienable right to be included within those limits."

The Paris of America

HOLLYWOOD now sets the styles for the American woman, H. C. Clark, Eastern sales manager of the Endicott-Johnson Corporation, shoe manufacturers, told that company's sales convention recently.

"The influence of the movies in shaping the tastes of the American people has become so strong that when Colleen Moore is seen in a new picture wearing a new style in shoes we immediately have to change our shoe pattern to conform, which means an expenditure of many thousand dollars," he told the salesmen.

"The movie actress may get her original style ideas from Paris, but they are completely revamped in Hollywood and go out to the American woman as entirely new creations. Ultimately they reach Paris and are accepted by the French woman. American-made patterns of styles created in Hollywood today enjoy a bigger sale in Paris than in any city in America. It looks as if the world's style center had now shifted from Paris to Hollywood. The movies are directly responsible for the riot of color and the tendency toward higher heels you now see in the styles going out for early spring."

Why not a fashion magazine edited from Hollywood?

Imported Players

OF the 48 contract stars and featured players at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, exactly one-fourth are foreign born, a recent tabulation shows. The 12 are Renee Adoree, French; George K. Arthur, Scottish; Ralph Forbes and Cecil Holland, English; Owen Moore, Irish, Estelle Clark, Polish; Nathalie Kovanko, Russian; Ramon Novarro, Mexican; Norma Shearer, Canadian; Karl Dane, Danish; Greta Garbo and Lars Hanson, Swedish.

Reversing the Usual Order

JOBYNA RALSTON and Richard Arlen recently announced their engagement and set the date of their wedding as February 10. Just two weeks before that event she will become his sweetheart before the camera in his first dramatic role since she completed her three-year contract with Harold Lloyd. She is now playing opposite Cantor in "Special Delivery," and will appear with Arlen in "Wings," where their screen romance will parallel its predecessor in real life.

Women Directors? Why Not?

WOMEN directors are destined to make their mark in the motion picture industry, according to Agnes Christine Johnston, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer scenarist who spent several days in New York last week following her return from Europe with her husband Frank Dazey and their two-month-old child.

"I'm absolutely for women directors," declared Miss Johnston, when quizzed as to her opinion of the future of women in the film industry—"I should like to try this myself just as soon as possible. I see no reason why women shouldn't make very good directors. They may not be quite as good at inserting spectacular touches, but for photoplays of intimate characterization—and these usually mean the best drama—they should easily equal or surpass men."

The great success achieved by so many women in motion picture work, notably in the scenario field, is due to their ability to handle detail, according to Miss Johnston. Most women, in her viewpoint, take a more direct and sympathetic interest in detail than men, and consequently succeed in translating it effectively as a background for action and drama. Another reason advanced was the fact that a majority of photoplays have one or more women as pivotal characters; and women understand each other better than men understand them—at least, Miss Johnston thinks so.

Ballet Genius En Route

LEO STAATS, master of the ballet of the National Opera of Paris, who has been engaged by S. L. Rothafel as ballet master of the new Roxy Theatre, is a passenger on the S.S. Paris, due in New York this week.

Mr. Staats has produced revues, ballets and sketches in practically all the Paris theatres and music halls, and he has devised and produced numerous ballets famous throughout Europe.

Just before coming to America, Staats completed the mise-en-scene and choreography of "Orphie," a mimodrame ballet in three acts by Roger Ducasse, the title role of which was played by Ida Rubinstein. Besides his more pretentious productions, Staats has also devised and produced the current sensational revues and dance divertissements at the Casino de Paris, the Folies Bergeres, the Scala and the Cigale.

And Still They Advance

EXPERIMENTS with the polygonal mirror, a new type of reflector used on high intensity arc lamps, which is said to eliminate the "nigger" or shadow spot imperfection in the present type of apparatus, are being conducted at the Paramount Long Island studio.

The new reflector, developed by Frank Benford, chief physicist of the illuminating engineering laboratory of the General Electric Company, is made of 16 separate mirror panels reflecting overlapping beams of light. All former reflectors have been in the form of a solid parabolic mirror whose curved surfaces, near the center, have caused a "dead spot" or shadow to be cast on the scene. These parabolic reflectors are also often cracked by the intense heat generated in the lamp, requiring a replacement of the entire reflector at a cost of approximately $350. If individual plates are cracked in the new reflector, they can be replaced separately at a nominal expense.

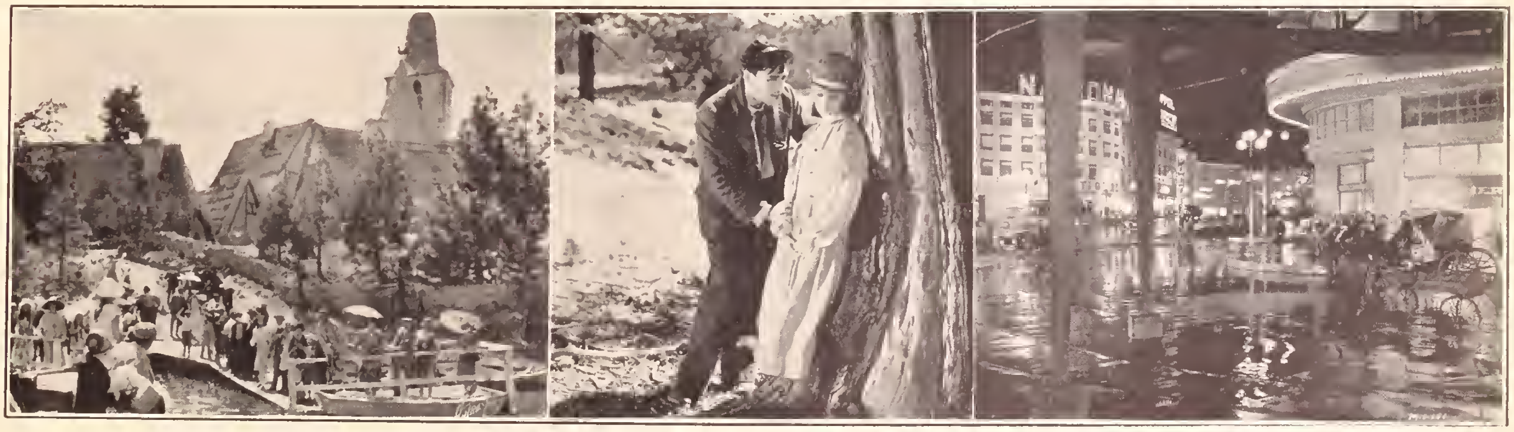
The principle of the polygonal mirror is over 2,000 years old, according to Benford, the assumption being that some such apparatus was used by Archimedes during the siege of Syracuse, when he set fire to the Roman fleet by heat rays reflected from a giant mirror. In spite of its ancient origin, however, the new reflector will be patented on the basis of the proportion of its various segments. If the experiments are successful, the polygonal mirrors will be used on all 36-inch high intensity lamps employed in motion picture work at the Paramount Long Island studio. The German studios have used a reflector of this general type for years.

"Sooner," a dog owned by Jack Hallett, Christie property man, adopted two guinea pigs and a white rat used in one of Billy Dooley's comedies, and refused to give them up when the picture had been completed

Plot vs. Character

GRAHAM BAKER, veteran scenarist of the Vitagraph school, now under contract to Warner Bros., remarks that characterization without a strong plot to which to attach itself is never a basis for a good motion picture.

"Characters are as interesting as plot, of course," he says, "but characters without motivation are no excuse for a motion picture production. I cannot say that characterization is supplanting plot, but I do say that the present trend in pictures is toward a simple plot embellished by strong characters."



F. W. Murnau, German director, and Rochus Gliese, the art director whom he brought with him to Fox Films, have created some remarkable effects for "Sunrise," their first American film. The views at left and right illustrate remarkably the contrast in the rural and city atmosphere of different sequences, while the scene in the centre shows Janet Gaynor and George O'Brien in one of the pastoral bits

In Foreign Studios

TOM TERRIS, director, who has been studying conditions abroad at first hand for some time, sends us a summary of things which he has observed regarding film conditions, which is particularly interesting.

England he found seething with activity, and preparing for 50 to 60 productions, with a quiet search going on for new talent, studios being enlarged, and an increasing recognition of the importance of cinema on the part of the more educated classes.

France is in the midst of a strong production boom, despite fluctuations of the franc. Pictures made for France only, with no attempt at internationalization. Better studios than England, but story material and treatment typically Continental. Great lack of star material.

Germany showed the greatest efficiency and ingenuity of any studios in the world, excelling particularly in trick-mirror work. Director works more closely with cameraman. Production at low ebb. Anglo-German alliance an important future possibility.

Edgar A. Guest signing the contract by which his poetic works will be illustrated in color on the screen as "Poetic Jewels"; left to right: George Matthew Adams, Charles L. Glett (standing), producer; Mr. Guest, Judge Alfred L. Murphy, of Detroit, and A. J. Moeller, president of the American Cinema Association, New York, which will distribute them

Russia he found most interesting of all, and he believes that they will eventually be the greatest motion picture producers in the world. A large number of pictures being made of every description. All artistic resources being utilized. Six new picture theatres recently built, tastefully designed and exquisitely furnished. Salaries in picture industry low, permitting unlimited time, and making cost of production low. Director general, who tried padding payroll recently, sent to Siberia. Shops at night lit up brilliantly. Comfortable motor bus service. Food prices about the same as London, except butter and rice. Clothing very expensive. Night life active.

Are Film People Workers?

FRED L. PORTER, vice-president and production manager of the Christie Film Company, takes occasion to contradict the frequent impression that film making is more play than work. He says:

"Who works harder, theatrical people or motion picture people? The answer to that question would, no doubt, be given by the general public in favor of the former, not because they think theatre people work hard, but because they think that motion picture work is play.

Fred L. Porter, vice-president and production manager of the Christie Film Co.

"Visitors to motion picture studios at first make a polite attempt to restrain their opinion that making pictures must be a lot of 'fun.' After they have watched production for a while and observed the sweating prop boys, electricans, carpenters and laborers, their viewpoint changes. But not enough! For it is not possible to see thought and brain work going on, and that is what the director and his assistants are doing.

"To get down to cases, I remember a visitor to the studio who expressed the wish to go on location with the 'The Nervous Wreck' company. He declined, however, after learning that the company had to be made up and ready to leave the studio at six a.m. He was still further astonished to find out that if he did go along he would not get back until six or seven in the evening, and possibly much later. This man's case is typical, yet he didn't learn the half of it. The actors, including Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Mack Swain, and Chester Conklin, had to rise, have breakfast, go through the intricate process of putting on a make-up, and make the drive to the studio in time to leave for location at six o'clock. Many of them live in Beverly Hills, which is over five miles from the studio, and one lives in Pasadena, which is much further.

"Then, upon returning to the studio after darkness has necessitated putting the cameras away, it would be natural to suppose that the day is finished. It is, several hours later. The director and his cast must look at their 'rushes,' to see how the work of the previous day looks on the screen. This may take more than an hour, and often does. Then the actors have make-up to remove, street clothes to don, either at the studio or at home, and dinner to eat. On some nights that is all. On others there are previews to attend, for about the time an actor is well into one picture the one he has made previously is cut down to eight or nine reels, and he must needs motor to some suburban or country town and attend the test showing. More than that, the director, of course, has to go along with the cutter and other members of his staff. On nights when no previews are on hand, the director in the midst of production must go over his film with the cutter and eliminate, build up and join the story together, doing this each night as he goes along, rather than wait until the camera work is finished and then plunge into a tremendous mass of film unconnected and without a semblance of order."

French Writer Decorated

VALENTIN MANDELSTAMM, French author, who was in Hollywood for some time as a writer and technical advisor at M-G-M, has been awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor by the French Foreign Office for his services in promoting relations between the two countries. He sailed for America on Wednesday of this week, and will announce a new connection after his arrival here.

Joice at Academy

Five Baby Stars at Fox

JAMES RYAN, casting director of Fox Films West Coast Studios, is a good picker of talent. Five of the thirteen girls selected as Wampus Baby Stars for 1927 are appearing in current Fox productions. Sally Phipps is in "Love Makes 'em Wild," and is now working in "Ankles Preferred"; Helene Costello is in "The Broncho Twister"; Gladys McConnell is in "Marriage"; Natalie Kingston has just finished work in "Love Makes 'em Wild," and Mary McAllister was seen in a recent production.

Handing Out the Stars

FIVE asterisks found their way to the mimeograph of the National Board of Review this week. Two features were found worthy of special mention, "The Kid Brother" and 'The Potters," while the other three awards went to Pathe Review, issue Nos. 6, 7 and 8.

New Laurels for Norma

EXCELLENT taste and judgment was shown by readers of the Chicago Tribune in a recent movie star popularity contest, when they elected Norma Shearer, Queen of Movieland, with a total of 2,319 votes—more than any other feminine player. Had we known of the contest, she would have had 2,320.

A New Film Publication

CHARLES J. GIEGERICH, former film publicity man, is now editor and publisher of "Motion Picture Art Portfolio," a new publication, which has a distinct appeal of its own. The magazine is entirely pictorial, carrying beautifully printed full-page scene stills, regular size, from outstanding photoplays. Only such scenes as are worthy of preservation, and, if desired, framing will be presented. On the facing page is a brief article telling about the picture. This should appeal strongly to the discriminating fan, and we wish Charlie all the luck in the world with the new venture.

"Mort" Forging Ahead

MORTON BLUMENSTOCK, formerly a publicity man in New York, who went to the Coast about two months ago on a tentative title writing assignment from First National, after doing excellent work on some of the Eastern productions, while still in the home office publicity department, has been assigned by John McCormick to do the titles on "Easy Pickings." His two most recent efforts, widely commended and widely different, were on "Twinkletoes" and "The Perfect Sap."

A Sad New Year

THOMAS MEIGHAN'S chauffeur had to start the new year off by worrying, which is no way to start any year. Right after the holidays he was informed that he would be expected to hit his employer with the car and knock him down in the middle of a New York street. What was more, it must be realistic enough to get by the revealing eye of the camera for a scene in "Blind Alleys." So he tightened his brake-bands for quick stopping, borrowed a tackling dummy from the studio prop department and practiced knocking it down, and looked for the latest type of very springy bumpers. A chauffeur's life, he opines, is not a very happy one when one's employer is a picture star.

S. A. Film Man to Wed

MAX EHRENREICH, general manager for United Artists in the Argentine, Paraguay, Uraguay and Chile, and Miss Augusta Offer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Offer of Cleveland, will be married on January 30 in Cleveland, with Moe Streimer, manager of the U.A. New York Exchange as the groom's attendant. The couple will sail from New York on February 5 to Buenos Aires.

Neal O'Hara to Hollywood

NEAL O'HARA, the brilliant Harvard graduate, whose work in contributing a humorous column daily to The Evening World, New York, is syndicated to a large number of newspapers throughout the United States, is leaving his home in Boston, February 1, for a year's stay on the Pacific Coast. He goes there to do titling and other work for F.B.O. He has for some time past been doing this work for the Joseph Kennedy organization in conjunction with his newspaper work but doing all the writing in Boston. The exceptions have been when sent to cover for the syndicate a world series, championship prize fight or some other important news event. His trip to the moving picture capital for a year's stay follows a visit some time ago when he spent several weeks working at the Film Booking Office studios.

The work already done for pictures is the best promise of what O'Hara will contribute in the future. With an acknowledged sense of humor his titling has in many instances more than done its part in putting over pictures.

Characteristic is his note announcing his departure for Hollywood. His valedictory is "Yours for titular belly-laughs."

Warming Up the Cameras

SOMETHING new was introduced the other day at the Paramount Long Island Studios to prevent static, the cameraman's bugbear. Throughout the morning Alvin Wyckoff and his assistants had been photographing exterior scenes for "Blind Alleys." The day was cold, and when the men resumed work after luncheon, the cameras were found to be thoroughly chilled, and gave off sparks when touched. Wyckoff ordered work suspended, and placed several Kliegl lights on each side of the cameras. This provided enough heat to warm the cameras slowly, without blistering them, and at the end of half an hour work was resumed without further trouble.

They All Go to the Capitol

FOLLOWING the precedent set by other royal and distinguished visitors, Prince William of Sweden was the guest of J. Robert Rubin at the Capitol Theatre on Friday evening of last week. The Prince was particularly interested in the feature, "Flesh and the Devil," in which two of his compatriots, Greta Garbo and Lars Hanson, play important roles. Major Edward Bowes received him and escorted the party to the State Box, reserved for such occasions, and the program was altered to include the Swedish national anthem.

A.P. Inaugurates Daily Film News

Will Give 1,200 Newspapers Reliable and Interesting Material on Motion Pictures With Illustrations

DESPITE the fact that there was no fanfare of trumpets to herald its inauguration, probably the most important film event of the week was the mailing out by the Associated Press of the first copies of its new daily motion picture news service to its 1,200 newspapers throughout the country.

Every day this vast news gathering organization will send out a film news service, and three times a week it will send mats to accompany it. This is part of a new feature service embracing sports, fashions, the theatre, the screen, and so on, decided upon some time ago by the board of directors of the Associated Press and given six months of preparatory work.

W. R. Gordon, at Los Angeles, becomes movie editor and will gather the material at the studios, just as any other news is gathered. This will be sent on to the New York headquarters, where Lloyd C. Stratton is in charge of the entire feature service, and from there distributed to all A. P. papers everywhere. G. R. Massock will handle the Eastern end of the film news under Stratton's direction.

Kent Cooper, general manager of the A. P., is understood to be largely responsible for this revolutionary move. Cooper, since assuming his present post, has favored a much more progressive attitude toward film news than that which characterized the previous policy of the organization. He created some little astonishment in the newspaper world a few months ago when he stated publicly that motion picture items were not merely publicity but genuine news as well.

Should other news and feature organizations follow the lead of the A. P., which is more than likely, it will mean a saving of about $100,000 yearly to the film industry in mailing and distribution costs. The real importance of it, however, lies in the increased dignity which it gives film publicity. The "bunk" will be weeded out before the material goes to newspapers, and it will come to them as news, edited on its value as human interest copy by one of their own agencies.

Pommer Leaves Famous by Mutual Consent

THE contract between Erich Pommer, former head of the UFA in Berlin, and Famous Players-Lasky, has been terminated by mutual agreement, it was announced on Thursday of this week. Pommer produced "Hotel Imperial" for Famous.

Picking the Ten Best Films of 1927

List of Likely Contenders for Leading Honors Compiled, Based on Past Performances and Prospects

By L. C. MOEN

PICKING the ten best pictures of a past year is, after all, not so very complicated. To be sure, your list may not agree with that of any other critic, but he can't prove that he's right either, and since distributing companies and theatres maintain a discreet silence about grosses it simmers down to the fact that it's all a matter of opinion.

It should be infinitely more exciting, therefore, to try picking the ten best pictures of the coming year—in this instance, 1927—and then to sit back and see how they come in at the finish. This means taking a great many things into consideration—any or all of which may be wrong—so the prudent move would be to jot them down in a pocket notebook and forget the matter until next Christmas—instead of which we are going to set it down here, "black on white," thereby running the risk of batting .000 at the end of the year, if anyone remembers this list at that time.

"The King of Kings."
"Napoleon."
"Wings."
"The Wedding March."
"The Glory Diggers."
"The Circus."
"The Kid Brother."
"Old Heidelberg."
"The Beloved Rogue."
"The Big Gun."

"The King of Kings" is pretty sure of its place on this list. No picture in recent years has had more careful preparation, casting and production.

"Napoleon" is a French film aquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and is the only Europeon picture on our list.

"Wings" should be almost a "natural," if not actually one. Its theme, aviation, has a tremendous hold on the American mind, and the vast scale on which it has been produced, together with the careful preparation, makes us optimistic concerning it.

"The Wedding March" is a worthy contender. Von Stroheim has put everything into this, and those who have seen it in the making predict great things for it.

"The Glory Diggers" is King Vidor's epic of the construction of the Panama Canal. The bigness of the theme, the plans being made, and the chance that King Vidor will make the most of it entitle this to a place among our prospects.

"The Circus" is a pretty safe guess, the only present uncertainty being as to the date of completion. There have been rumors that Chaplin would film the balance of it in New York.

"The Kid Brother" is one of the surest on the list. There are indications that this has everything that has made the biggest Lloyd successes.

"Old Heidelberg," directed by Ernst Lubitsch, seems sure-fire. Perhaps this will be the picture which will give Lubitsch a chance to show that he can do something besides brittle farce.

"The Beloved Rogue" deserves inclusion because of the appeal of the story and the fact that it brings together Barrymore and Conrad Veidt.

"The Big Gun" warrants a place on the chance that the great possibilities inherent in the subject—the part played by the Navy in getting the troops to France—will be adequately dealt with.

Emanuel Cohen Joins Paramount; Ray Hall New Editor of Pathe News

OFFICIAL announcement was made this week by J. E. Storey, assistant general manager of Pathe in charge of Short Subject Production, that Ray L. Hall has been appointed Editor of Pathe News.

Mr. Hall succeeds Emanuel Cohen, who recently resigned to assume charge of the production activities of the newly-formed Short Subjects Department of Famous Players-Lasky. Mr. Hall enters upon his new duties at once.

The new Editor of Pathe News is a newspaper man of national reputation, who has also had wide experience in news weekly work. He was the Editor of the Hearst-Selig News Pictorial; the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial; was active in the organization of the Hearst-International Newsreel and afterwards in charge of technical production of all Hearst screen product.

Publix Asks Sixty-Mile Protection in South, Report; Franklin Doubts

ACCORDING to reports emanating from Atlanta, Publix Theatres has issued an ultimatum to exchanges in that city and Jacksonville demanding protection within a sixty-mile radius of its new Tampa Theatre at Tampa. In a letter said to have been sent to various exchanges F. R. Little, district booker, claiming instructions from Sam Dembow, Southern Publix manager, threatens to refuse to play future product if exchanges persist in serving specified towns within the area ahead of Tampa.

In explanation of the "threat" Little states "you can readily see that we cannot get seventy-five cents admission in a town the size of Tampa and have the picture shown ahead or just behind our run in one of the smaller towns at a twenty-five cents admission."

Harold B. Franklin, vice-president of Publix, said that he doubted if the report was correct. Possibly such an attitude would be taken to enforce existing contracts he said, but not under the circumstances related in the story.

How far the effect of this reported ultimatum would reach, if it is sustained, is not difficult to see. Universal, by the same token, might demand protection for its theatres in Orlando, DeLand and St. Augustine, Florida. Any independent exhibitor would have as much right to demand "protection" against his competitors in smaller adjacent towns.

$100,000,000 for Films

MOTION pictures produced in the United States in 1925 cost very close to $100,000,000, it is shown by figures compiled by the Washington, D.C. Census Bureau in the second biennial census taken of the industry. All along the line, the bureau's records show expenditures for production were materially greater than in 1923, when the first census was taken.

No effort was made to determine the number of films produced during the year, but the expense of producing the negatives was placed at $93,636,348, as compared with $86,418,170 in 1923. A total of 132 producing establishments were listed, against 97 in 1923, of which 72 were operated in California, 18 in New York, 8 each in New Jersey and Illinois, 4 in Ohio, and 3 each in Michigan, Pennsylvania and Washington, the remainder being scattered among eight other States.

A total of 5,945 salaried officers and employees were reported in 1925, whose salaries for the year totaled $35,950,778; these included officers, managers, production supervisors, directors, scenario writers, unit managers and assistant directors, members of technical staffs, wardrobe designers, laboratory supervisors, cameramen, actors, extra talent, auditors, bookkeepers and clerks. The average number of wage earners at work throughout the year was 5,573, their wages aggregating $13,065,756; these included carpenters, painters, prop makers, molders, mechanics, laborers, laboratory workers, wardrobe workers, property men, drivers, etc. The 1923 census showed 3,496 salaried employees receiving $21,824,319 for the year, and 6,408 wage earners receiving $16,601,153, but there is some doubt as to the accuracy of these, as well as other segregations of costs for 1923, due to lack of knowledge on the part of reporting producers as to how various items should be classified.

The cost of materials in 1925 was given as $33,258,368, as compared with $30,656,770 in 1923; this included all materials, raw stock, mill supplies, fuel and power actually used during the year. Expenditures for contract work in 1925 were $5,368,593, against $1,608,866 in 1923, but, as many studios are rented, together with the necessary electric power, stage settings, labor and minor-role actors, it is believed that in the 1923 reports some of the expense which should thus be classified was included under other heads.

Studio and location work in 1925 cost $71,488,457, and laboratory work cost $22,147,891; the corresponding figures for 1923 were $63,517,692 and $22,900,478, respectively.

The 1925 figures show a difference of $5,992,853 between the total cost of production and the sum of the items for salaries, wages, materials and contract work, this difference being made up of miscellaneous items such as story costs, home-office overhead, stars' expenses, insurance, etc., with perhaps a small amount of profit from laboratory work done for others.

Irene Rich Renews Contract With Warner Bros.

As the present Irene Rich-Warner Bros. contract expires this summer, Jack L. Warner has signed Miss Rich to a new long term Warner Bros. contract. It is probable that the next Rich vehicle will be "The Climbers" from the Clyde Fitch play. At present the star is resting after having recently completed "Don't Tell the Wife."

More Companies Incorporate in New York State

Motion picture companies chartered in New York State during the past week included the following: Rosenbrod Holding Corporation, $10,000, Emanuel Stempel, Charles Rabinowitz, Rena Osehever, New York City; Lee-Kendall Productions, Inc., $30,000, Herman L. Feldblet, Harry Hedeman, Lester Lee, New York City; Monroe Theatre Corporation, capitalization not specified, J. Louis Geller, E. Jessie Abrahams, Hester Pruzan, New York City. In addition to the above, papers were filed with the secretary of state during the week dissolving the Callaghan Publicity Film Service of New York City.

Bandits Blow Safe of Spokane Auditorium Theatre

The first important theatre robbery of the New Year in the Washington territory was reported from Spokane last week. Yeggs, who gained entrance through an open window, blew the door from the safe of the Auditorium Theatre in the Eastern Washington city and escaped with approximately $1,700. No trace of the bandits has as yet been found by Spokane police, who are of the opinion that the job was done by the same gang who have robbed two Seattle theatres within recent weeks.

In and Out of Town

OTTO B. MANTELL, United Artists' sales manager at Cristobal, Canal Zones, is en route back to Cristobal following a fortnight's visit to New York. He sailed January 13.

E. B. DERR, Film Booking Offices' treasurer, has left New York for a trip through the West Coast branches and Hollywood studio. It is undetermined at this time as to how long he will stay.

CRESSON E. SMITH, general sales manager, Mid-West division, of United Artists, has returned to New York following a trip of two weeks' duration to Indianapolis, Detroit and Cleveland in the interests of new United Artists productions.

S. MAURICE LIVINGSTON, former head of the Warner Bros. Non-Theatrical department, leaves for Berlin on Saturday, the 22nd, to begin his duties as salesman in the foreign field. He will assist Gus Schlesinger, foreign manager, who is now in New York, having returned from Europe with Herman Starr, but who will sail for his Berlin office the middle of next month.

SAM MOROSS, in charge of the United Artists play date department, left New York Saturday, January 15, on a visit to St. Louis, Mo. Mr. Moross is United Artists' representative to the arbitration boards.

W. G. DUTTON, manager of the Columbia Washington exchange, is conferring with Columbia executives this week at the home office. He, Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn are discussing distribution plans and policies for the new year.

PAUL LAZARUS, general sales manager, Southern and Western divisions of United Artists, left last Monday night, January 17, for a trip of three weeks through the South in the interest of the seven new pictures which United Artists are now selling. He will take in Pittsburgh, Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta and Dallas, returning to the home office about the middle of February.

Thieves Get Away With Receipts of Canadian Houses

Pantage's Theatre, Toronto, and the Tivoli Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, both suffered monetary losses during the past week due to the activities of thieves.

On January 13 an unidentified and unapprehended man snatched the cash box, containing $1,477, from the box office of the Pantage house, late in the evening, and escaped through the lobby into a waiting automobile, which had been left running. According to Manager N. K. Miller the lady cashier was busy selling a ticket to a patron when the door of the cupola was suddenly pushed open from the outside, and the box, which was to have been taken to the manager's office, was grabbed. The police are endeavoring to determine whether the ticket purchaser was an accomplice of the thief, but the belief is held that the crook worked single-handed.

The Tivoli was robbed on the night of January 12, when a bandit held up the employees, and walked off with over $800, or the night's receipts. Despite an immediate alarm the bandit made his escape and has not been captured. Morris Stein is manager of the Hamilton Tivoli.

15,000 Pictures Shown in Birmingham During 1926

According to the annual report of Mrs. Myrtelle W. Snell, city amusement inspector, 15,000 films were shown in Birmingham, Alabama, during 1926, or an average of 1,250 each month. Practically every film, the report states, was officially reviewed and reported to the inspector.

During the year, 464 first-run pictures were viewed in the downtown theatres. The report shows that 369 pictures were endorsed, and 95 were not. Since June 25, 1926, 239 pictures especially selected for children were shown on Saturdays.

An interesting item of the report shows that 72 organizations in Birmingham are affiliated with the Better Films Committee.

John Oliver Signed by Famous Players

John Oliver, playwright, has been signed by Paramount as a member of the East Coast writing department.

Arbt'n Board and Exhib's Reach Agreement

FOR the first time since the dispute two weeks ago between the Kansas-Missouri M. P. T. O. and the Joint Board of Arbitration of Kansas City, a satisfactory arrangement has been reached between the two bodies, the exhibitors being again represented on the board at its meeting this week when the claim, amounting to $500, which L. C. McElroy, of the Kansas City Forty-Fifth Street Theatre, had against the Pathe exchange, was settled.

Although the by-laws of the board provide its president with power to request the Chamber of Commerce or the Mayor to name business men to sit on the board in place of the exhibitors, who declined by instruction of the Kansas-Missouri M. P. T. O., such power was not exercised by E. C. Rhoden, president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade.

"Big Parade" Breaks Long Run Record

M-G-M Production Starts 63rd Week at Astor Theatre, New York; 1,000,000 Attendance

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S production, "The Big Parade," breaks all existing long-run records for pictures as it starts its 63d week at the Astor Theatre, New York City, according to figures supplied by J. J. McCarthy, who is handling the roadshow for M-G-M. It is estimated that nearly a million people have seen this picture at the Astor, and that the attendance at showings throughout the rest of United States and Canada totals approximately five million.

Previous to the advent of this production the engagements of the most important pictures, from a box-office standpoint, in the last decade, were as follows: "The Birth of a Nation," 44 weeks; "Way Down East," 43 weeks; "Ben-Hur," 51 weeks; "The Covered Wagon," 59 weeks, and "The Ten Commandments," 61 weeks, according to the McCarthy statement.

Likewise, it is claimed that the gross receipts to date have been three times greater than those registered for any previous road-show photoplay. Many theatregoers have seen this picture twice, so strong is its attraction, says the McCarthy statement.

"The Big Parade" won the Photoplay Magazine medal for the best picture produced during 1925, and among other facts of interest are mentioned the presentation at the White House, where President and Mrs. Coolidge attended a showing, and the exhibition at the Shubert Theatre in New Haven, with Yale College sponsoring the showing; this was the first picture that Yale ever sponsored.

Editorial comment has been profuse in the leading metropolitan newspapers, and critical analyses have been published in many national magazines. The production has brought fame to King Vidor, Laurence Stallings and John Gilbert, who is starred with Renee Adoree, and it has meant long-term motion picture contracts for other members of the cast.

One of the most important factors in the presentation has been the music score, an original written by David Mendoza and William Axt of the Capitol Theatre, New York. Incorporated with the original love theme are snatches of the marching songs heard so frequently in France nine years ago.

Eight companies of "The Big Parade" remain on tour playing in leading roadshow theatres throughout the country. Each company travels with its own baggage car, and carries a symphony orchestra, and presentation experts, so that the picture is presented exactly as at the Astor Theatre.

Minn. Exhibitor Defendant in Suit Filed by Warners

William Kopp, Jr., an exhibitor of St. Cloud, Minn., has been made the defendant in a suit for $50,000, filed against him by Warner Bros. The complaint alleges that Kopp has been exhibiting "The Better 'Ole," a picture produced by an English company more than five years ago. The rights to this picture terminated five years ago, and were purchased by Warner Bros., who now claim that the showing of the old version works injury to their new production.

All of the old prints were supposed to have been called in, and the plaintiffs aver that the alleged showing of this film by Kopp violates the copyright laws. Kopp is said to have purchased the old print from a man in Red Wing, Minn. Its showing came to the attention of the Minneapolis branch of Warner Bros., and as a result the New York office was notified and took immediate action. Warner Bros. is not only seeking to collect $50,000 from Kopp, but to restrain him from further showings of the picture.

Britain's Films Promising

Schedules for 1927 Show Sense of Showmanship and Utilization of Empire Resources

By L. C. Moen

MORE important to the British film trade than any proposed or threatened quota or subsidy scheme is the fact that the production schedules for 1927, as compiled in a recent issue of "The Cinema," display more sense of showmanship values and, specifically, more tendency to utilize typically British Empire facilities and resources, than ever before. The things which England might do better than any other country are beginning to be taken advantage of, and for the first time there is a genuine effort to develop a technique that will be Britain's own rather than an imitation of any other. New talent is being sought, and men of education and originality are being encouraged to enter production.

The enormous vogue of patriotic and war films is making producers of these subjects independent of outside markets—an important start toward a stabilized output. The big naval film being made with Government co-operation is understood to already have more contracts in the United Kingdom than have ever been given any picture, including American and other films.

The important factor, however, is the growing tendency to utilize British sea traditions, the charming English countryside and the drama and romance of British colonial dwellers, and to seek out the best in story material. But let us see just what the leading firms have in prospect:

Welsh Pearson: "Huntingtower," "Pinklegs," several of the W. W. Jacobs stories, and others to be announced. Tom Douglas and Pat Aherne have been placed under contract. Mr. Welsh recently came to New York to study conditions at first hand.

Wardour: "Tommy Atkins," "Poppies in Flanders," and from four to six others during the year. (Note the war films.)

Gainsborough: "The Rolling Road" (a sea picture), "Blighty," "Downhill," "Easy Virtue" (a Noel Coward play which was highly successful in New York and London with Jane Cowl), "One of the Best," "The Vortex" (another Coward play seen on Broadway), an Ivor Novello starring vehicle and others to be announced. W. & F. will also have "A Sister of Six," starring Betty Balfour and including prize beauties to be chosen in Russia, Sweden, Germany, Hungary, Holland and Switzerland. (Note the rising quality of story material and the increasing sense of exploitation values.)

Gaumont: "London Love," "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," "Hine Moa" (made in New Zealand with an all-Maori cast), "Second to None," "Hindle Wakes" (the remarkable Stanley Houghton play); "Little Devil-May-Care" (starring Betty Balfour and made in Paris in association with Cinegraphie under the direction of Marcel L'Herbier, one of the most original in Europe); "Roses of Picardy," "Robinson Crusoe" (being made in the West Indies on the actual spot); "The Arcadians," "The Glad Eye" (an aerial film starring Sir Alan Cobham); "Sailors Don't Care" (a sea tale); "The Campbells Are Coming" and "Land of Hope and Glory" (based on a strictly Empire theme). This company is reconstructing and enlarging its studios.

New Era: "Mons" (continuing over from last year); "Palaver" (with the semi-savage tribes in Nigeria); "Nelson" (an historical sea picture); "The Somme" (another war film), and others to be announced.

All in all, this would seem the most promising outlook the British production industry has had, and there are indications that the demand for British ideals and aims in British production would bear fruit during the coming year.

How Europeans See Us

Stein, Curtiz and Veidt Give Impressions of American Studio After Working Here

SEEING ourselves as others see us is always likely to be profitable, for which reason the judgments on our production methods formed by European artists who come here are always interesting. Three such were available this week—Paul Stein and Michael Curtiz, directors, and Conrad Veidt, player, giving out frank and rather penetrating statements on the comparison between working conditions in Europe and America.

"The biggest difference between foreign methods of production and American," says Stein, Warner Bros. director, "is in the division of labor. In Germany, for instance, the director chooses his vehicle. He prepares it. He must oversee the construction of sets, supervise the making of costumes, act as technical as well as dramatic director. As he is directing, a thousand and one details are brought to him for verification. He is constantly interrupted.

"In America, we have the production department which takes all these details out of the director's hands. There is a technical director who is responsible for the technical details. There is a costume department, and it alone is responsible for the costumes. The director merely has to worry about making his cast act. That in itself is enough. He should never be worried about all those production matters, and in this country he isn't.

"Another reason for easier production here than in Europe," says Stein, "is the specialization of motion picture actors. In Central Europe most screen actors are also stage stars. After a morning rehearsal and a matinee and evening performance in the theatre, they come to the studio. By bits and snatches between theatre engagements we are able to turn out a feature. This method, with tired actors, impatient director, and little time, is not conducive to the production of masterpieces. The American screen star is a specialist in film work. That alone interests him. This makes directing a thousand times easier for the man handling the reins."

Curtiz, recently arrived from Europe, looks upon his American surroundings with a clear and analytic vision. He is under long-term contract to Warner Bros.

"America has reached perfection in the organization of every industry," says Curtiz; "the director has here at his service a perfect crew of co-workers combining ability, experience and a sense of duty to their work. Every man is in his own place doing his own especial job, yet at the same time laboring in harmony and co-operation with other departments of the studio.

"Another reason why I like to direct in America is that an American director has at his disposal the best of everything money can buy. The film industry here is firmly established and can well afford to draw into service the most valuable representatives of all the different arts. Since this country's film industry has a very remarkable past, this fact resulted in bringing up a new generation with the special understanding and talent that is required by the peculiar and new art of film making. With all these aids the American director has all the facilities to enable him to materialize his thoughts and ideas."

Veidt, after signing with Universal and finishing his work in a Barrymore picture, returned to Germany to wind up his affairs in that country and to transfer his personal belongings to Hollywood. He was eagerly besieged by European trade and newspapers for his observations on American production. Without mincing matters, he told them why American pictures are the most popular all over the world. "Team-work, not money alone, is the answer to America's success," he said. "When a pictures goes into production, everything, everybody is subordinated to the picture and its success.

"It is erroneous," he said, "to believe that only money and plenty of it, is the essential and the main reason why American films are so successful.

"Go to America and learn how to treat the coming generation of players. All over Europe there are to-day a lot of people in the films who still play their roles in the accepted style of yesterday. The younger element with its present-day ideas and methods is purposely overlooked and kept at a distance. How different in America! Every producer and every director of distinction is constantly on the lookout for new faces and new talent. Frequently a star is born overnight through one good portrayal which indicates latent talent.

"The attitude of the American press, whose marvelous system of publicity and advertising makes pictures and players known to millions, is one Europe can hardly fathom.

"I am not saying all this to glorify America or because I have elected to spend the next few years in America making pictures for Universal. I believe in the future of the German film. I believe that Germany has the material to make not only a half dozen good pictures each year but as many as America does. But I also believe that first Germany must learn from America her wonderful methods of production and distribution of pictures."

Ohio Exhibitor "Cans" Film after one Showing

TIM McMAHON, manager of the Park Theatre, Mansfield, Ohio, received the thanks of his patrons when he announced in the local papers why he had closed a certain picture after the first day's showing. "This picture," the notice read, "is what is theatrically known as 'a piece of cheese,' and of such a type that we do not care to have our patrons see."

More Int'l Films Being Produced in U.S., Says Loew

That the desire of American producers to make pictures which will carry appeal outside of the United States has resulted in the production of photoplays that contain a greater appeal to fans within the United States, is the contention of Arthur M. Loew, director of the International Distribution Department of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who is in Culver City, conferring with production officials prior to his return to New York, from where, in company with Ludwig Lawrence, in charge of distribution of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures in Western Europe, he will visit South America and thence proceed directly to Europe.

Mr. Loew further declared that the American theatre-goer invariably found more enjoyment in watching a foreign-locale film because it differed so exceedingly from the average celluloid-hackneyed themes. All hands, jaded fans, directors, stars, writers and producers in general delighted in the change, according to Mr. Loew.

Fire Completely Destroys Isis Theatre, Webster City, Ia.

The Isis Theatre at Webster City, Iowa, was completely burned out on January 12. Three other business houses were burned, together with the bakery adjoining the Isis Theatre where the fire is believed to have started. The blaze was discovered early in the morning after it had gotten a good start. The theatre was insured for $30,000 but the loss is $50,000. All film was rescued from the burning theatre. A. C. Shuneman, who is owner of the Isis, is at a loss to state what his plans will be in regard to his theatre interests. He has been taking losses, having recently lost $25,000 in a bank closing, and finds himself unable to definitely state that he will be able to rebuild his theatre.

Saxe's Strand Theatre in Racine Again Robbed

Saxe's Strand Theatre, at Racine, Wis., was robbed on Sunday by a bandit who forced three men who were counting cash in the manager's office to hand over between $1,500 and $2,000. At the point of a gun, J. W. Haweck, manager, R. L. Hanck and L. M. Ross, employees, were requested to pack the currency into a bag which the bandit thoughtfully provided. The man then escaped through a long, well-lighted corridor into the street. This is the second time within the last few months that the Strand has been relieved of the day's receipts by robbers.

Carl Laemmle Birthday Celebration on Coast

Executives, Stars and Directors Who Started With Universal President Present

APPROXIMATELY seven hundred executives, stars and directors in the motion picture business gathered in the ballroom of the Biltmore Hotel, Los Angeles, on January 17, to congratulate Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures, on his sixtieth birthday, the start of his twenty-first year in the picture business, and his recovery from a serious illness contracted while abroad last Spring.

Mary Pickford, who was associated with Mr. Laemmle in the early days of moving pictures, was honorary hostess, and Douglas Fairbanks had a prominent place at the speakers' table; Rupert Hughes, author and picture director, acted as master of ceremonies, and paid a wonderful tribute to the Universal president. Addresses were also made by Will Hays, Marcus Loew, Jesse Lasky and Donald Ogden Stewart.

The banquet was arranged by members of the Universal company at Universal City who had served with Mr. Laemmle ten or more years ago. This alumni association invited as guests all film folk in Hollywood who had been with Universal a decade or more ago. A novel feature of the entertainment was the erection of an exact replica of Mr. Laemmle's first motion picture theatre, the White Front, which he opened in Chicago more than thirty years ago. In this theatre, constructed at the end of the ballroom, was shown a picture starring King Baggot and Mary Pickford, made fifteen years ago.

Among the guests attending the banquet were:

Rogers Denies Rumor of Gotham-Col. Merger

IN a statement issued from the Lumas-Gotham New York office, the story prominent in the press last week which concerned the rumor of a merger of the Gotham interests with those of the Chadwick and Columbia organizations, met with emphatic denial from Budd Rogers, vice-president of Lumas and Gotham, who declared that "under no consideration would we consider the submerging of the identity of the Gotham trade mark under any merger."

Designating the recently announced arrangement whereby Gotham pictures are to be distributed throughout the Washington, D.C., territory through the Washington Columbia exchange as the source of the rumor, Mr. Rogers declared that although Lumas might make a distribution deal with Columbia with regard to some specific locality, such a deal had no more effect on the status of Gotham than if any other firm had made a similar contract because both Lumas and Gotham are individual units even though they are controlled by the same stockholders.

Famous and Liberty Magazine Tie Up on "Love's Greatest Mistake"

PARAMOUNT and Liberty Magazine are cooperating in a comprehensive campaign of advertising to be launched February 14 on the motion picture and serial story, "Love's Greatest Mistake"; fifty-three of the leading newspapers in 51 of the principal cities will publish advertisements which are expected to be read by 10,000,000 readers. In addition to the advertising, exhibitors will have the benefit of the publication in Liberty of this Frederic Arnold Kummer story which will appear in ten installments, beginning February first.

The newspapers which will participate in the advertising drive are: Birmingham "Age Herald," Los Angeles "Times," San Francisco "Examiner," Oakland "Tribune," Denver "Post," Hartford "Times," Washington "Post," Jacksonville "Times Union," Atlanta "Constitution," Chicago "American," Chicago "Tribune," Peoria "Journal Transcript," Indianapolis "News," Des Moines "Register & Tribune," Louisville "Herald Post," New Orleans "Times Piccayune," Portland "Express & Press Herald," Baltimore "Sun," Boston "Post," Detroit "News," Grand Rapids "Press," Duluth "Herald," Minneapolis "Star," Minneapolis "Journal," St. Paul "Dispatch," Kansas City "Star Times," St. Louis "Post Dispatch," Omaha "World Herald," Newark "News," Buffalo "News," Rochester "Times Union," New York City "News," New York City "Times," Cincinnati "Times Star," Columbus "Citizen," Cleveland "Press," Toledo "Blade," Oklahoma City "Oklahoman & Times," Portland "Oregonian," Philadelphia "Bulletin," Pittsburgh "Press," Providence "Journal Bulletin," Memphis "Press Scimitar," Nashville "Tennessean," Salt Lake City "Tribune," Dallas "Times Herald," Houston "Post Dispatch," Norfolk "Ledger Dispatch," Richmond "News Leader," Seattle "Post Intelligencer," Spokane "Chronicle," Milwaukee "Journal," Montreal "Star," Toronto "Star."

Massicotte Is Fire Hero

Saved Many Lives in Laurier Palace Panic; Three Held on Manslaughter Charge

ONE of the heroes of the Laurier Palace disaster, and a man against whom no criticism has been raised, was the projection machine operator of the theatre, Emile Massicotte, 6787 Boyer Street, Montreal. Maintaining the traditions of the theatre, Massicotte kept running the comedy, "Get 'Em Young," which was being shown when the cry of fire was raised, until the balcony of the ill-fated theatre was practically empty.

According to the evidence at the Fire Commissioner's Court, Massicotte then discovered that many little children were caught in the jam on the one stairway. He forced a window opening out over the entrance marquee, and, groping about in the smoke and darkness, he shoved more than twenty-five children out to the open air, thus saving their lives. Firemen raised ladders to the marquee, and carried the children down, later assisting Massicotte himself from the theatre.

Massicotte declared that no fire occured near the projection room, and that he did not see any flame at any time, although dense smoke belched from the front of the balcony. The smoke was terrible, he said.

Ameen Lawand, proprietor, Michel Arlie, house manager, and Camille Bazzy, doorman, all Syrians, are under arrest on a charge of manslaughter as a result of the coroner's verdict, reached at the inquest on January 14, which held the three criminally responsible for the death of the children. They were released on bail, Lawand providing surety of $5,000, and the others lesser amounts.

James McIsaac, chief fire prevention commissioner of Montreal, recommended to the Montreal fire chief on January 15 that three local theatres be closed, and the civic officials, at a council executive meeting, instructed the chief to enforce all requirements sternly and strictly.

The three theatres affected were the Ouimetoscope, Casino and Arcade, all owned by Joseph Cardinal. Commissioner McIsaac reported that Mr. Cardinal had refused to discontinue the presentation of vaudeville at the three houses despite the local order that no theatre could give special presentations, ballets or prologues unless it had a regularly equipped stage. This meant that the theatre would have to have a proscenium wall, asbestos curtain, automatic sprinkler system over the stage, stage exit and other equipment.

It was announced that about 10 Montreal theatres were affected by the order, all but one being of the smaller neighborhood type. The Ouimetoscope is one of the oldest moving picture theatres in Canada, having been established by L. E. Ouimet, of Montreal, pioneer exhibitor and distributor.

Stanley Building Two More Houses in New Jersey

Announcement was made this week by the Stanley Company of America of the completion of plans for the building of two theatres in New Jersey to be located one in Jersey City and the other in West Orange; in addition, it is stated that the company has acquired control of the Rialto Theatre in Pleasantville.

The Jersey City theatre, which will be situated on a site on Journal Square, will have a seating capacity of 5,000; actual construction is planned for the very near future. A site on Valley Road in West Orange has been secured for the erection of a theatre with a seating capacity of 1500.

The Rialto Theatre, Pleasantville, was purchased from Cal Zimmerman. It is planned to remodel the house which seats a thousand. Pleasantville is the nearest city to Atlantic City, and it has a large permanent population, which is augmented during the summer by vacationists.

Harry Langdon's Five-Reeler Soon to Be Issued by Pathe

In "His First Flame," a five-reel feature comedy starring Harry Langdon, which Mack Sennett produced for Pathe, the comedian essays the role of a bashful fireman.

Appearing as leading lady to Langdon in this production is Ruth Hiatt, one of the featured members of the "Smith Family" series released by Pathe, and Natalie Kingston, just elected one of the Wampus Baby stars of 1927. Vernon Dent, Bud Jamieson and Dot Farley are others in the cast.

Harry Edwards, who guided Langdon through his Sennett comedies, and who is now directing Johnny Burke on the lot, was the director of "His First Flame," which is promised for release by Pathe in the near future.

"His Rise to Fame" Set for February 10 by Excellent

"His Rise to Fame," the forthcoming Excellent feature starring George Walsh, has been scheduled for release February 10. This is Walsh's fourth starring production under the auspices of Excellent Pictures Corporation.

Ontario Censors Remove Ban on German Films

PRACTICALLY without notice or warning, the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors, Toronto, removed the ban which had existed for more than 10 years against German film productions with the result that German films are now being seen officially in Ontario for the first time.

The change brought about an interesting situation in Toronto when two outstanding features were presented during the week of January 17. "Variety" was the attraction at the Uptown Theatre, the leading house of the Famous Players chain in Canada, while "Faust" was presented at Loew's Theatre during the same week, Emil Jannings being the star of both productions.

Two Mass. Theatres Visited by Flames During Week

The Empire on South Street, Fall River, and the Blanchard at Southbridge, both in Massachusetts, suffered severe damage as the result of flames, which wrought havoc with both houses. The Fall River house, owned by the Fall River Consolidated Enterprises, and leased by the Rialto Amusement Co., will have to be practically rebuilt, the loss to the building and its contents being placed at $100,000. For five hours all the available fire apparatus of the city wrestled with the fire, which, its origin unknown, began early Wednesday morning, not long after the completion of the Tuesday evening show.

The Blanchard catastrophe occured the following evening, and also followed close upon the finish of the last performance. The fire, which did $150,000 damage, ravaged the Blanchard block immediately adjoining the house where smoke and water did excessive damage. Several persons were rescued from the Blanchard block, and it was not until two in the morning that the flames were brought under control. Just how extensive repairs will have to be made has not yet been determined. The Regional Chain Theatres Operating Co. have leased this house from the Blanchard Bros., owners.

Alphonso Sardino, New York Exhibitor, dead

Alphonso Sardino, one of the best-known exhibitors in New York State, and at one time manager of a film exchange in Syracuse, but who has more recently been handling a theatre at Old Forge, died last week following an illness of a considerable period. Mr. Sardino was one of the old timers in the business and was obliged some years ago to seek higher altitudes in the quest of health. Looking around for some employment, he ran the Strand Theatre at Old Forge with marked success, and his death will be regretted by both exhibitors and exchange managers in the State.

James Inducted Lieut. Governor of Pa.

AT 11 o'clock on the morning of January 18, at the hall of the Senate in Harrisburg, the capitol of Pennsylvania, Arthur H. James, of Wilkes-Barre, a pioneer motion picture exhibitor in Luzerne County, and a right hand man of M. E. Commerford, head of the Commerford Theatre Circuit, was inducted into the office of Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania. At the same time he automically became presiding officer of the Pennsylvania Senate.

In his new position, Mr. James is regarded as an invaluable ally to the industry, insofar as important contests involving bills unfavorable to the motion picture business are expected to be introduced n the biennial session of the Legislature.

Among the motion picture men present at Mr. James' induction were Mr. Comerford, of Scranton; Martin J. O'Toole, former head of the M.P.-T.O.A., of Scranton; Fred J. Herrington, secretary of the Pittsburgh exhibitors' organization.

Lieber Phones London F. N. Meet; States New "Names" for 1927

ROBERT LIEBER, president of First National, sat as his desk in the Home Office of the company in New York last Friday and made the keynote address which opened a convention of First National salesmen in London. Spoken into the regular desk telephone, the speech was clearly and distinctly heard by foreign executives of First National.

At the conclusion of his ten-minute talk, the first speech by transatlantic radiophone from New York to London, Mr. Lieber replaced the receiver on its hook and addressing a group of trade press representatives who had gathered in his office to witness the event, said: "I don't mind telling you gentlemen that my arm trembled j-u-s-t a little as I held that receiver and listened to the responses—so rapidly and clearly transmitted—of Mr. Brockliss, Mr. Skirboll and the others to my greeting. It was a thrilling experience."

It was perhaps an even more thrilling experience for the 200 salesmen assembled in the auditorium, 37 Oxford Street, London, for they were unaware that the address which would open the convention for which they had just assembled would be made to them by the president of their company. Their meeting, it was said, had just come to order, when the telephone at the speaker's desk rang and Mr. Brockliss taking the call turned from the instrument and said: "Gentlemen, Mr. Robert Lieber, president of First National, is calling from New York and will address the convention."

The call lasted about ten minutes, and cost $250. It was worth many times that cost for thrills alone—thrills which were enjoyed by two hundred men in London and Mr. Lieber in New York.

In his address Lieber said that in the First National line-up for next season will be found promising new names and new faces.

Sunday Shows Optional?

Blue Law Revision Committee Makes Recommendation in Report to Jersey Legislature

IN its report made this week in the New Jersey Legislature the Blue Law Revision Committee, appointed last year by the Legislature, recommended amendment of the ancient New Jersey Sunday law to grant local option throughout the State so that each community might make its own Sunday ordinances.

If the recommendation is adopted, the State law, known as the vice and immorality act, will be amended to permit recreations on the Sabbath, which are lawful on the other days of the week, providing that indulgence in them on Sunday does not disturb others in their observance of the day. It is pointed out in the report that the county park act of 1920 legalized Sunday recreations in county parks, although the same recreations were illegal on private grounds on Sunday.

"This is the most practical method," it is said in the report, "of meeting the present deplorable situation wherein a law of the State is continuously and unnecessarily violated in one part or another throughout the length and breadth of New Jersey."

Senator Henry A. Williams, chairman of the commission, immediately introduced a bill to enact the recommendations of the body, to take effect April 1.

Louis N. Strike, of the Kinema Theatre, of this city, reports that the L. N. Strike Company has finally succeded in their efforts to have the theatres of Southern Utah remain open on Sundays. This took an expenditure of a great deal of time, effort and money, and the objections were finally overcome after taking the case to the Supreme Court a short time ago.

Worcester Corp. Offering $800,000 1st Mortg. Bonds

First Mortgage 6 1-2 percent bonds totaling $800,000 are being offered in the New England market by an investment house this week for the new theatre to be built by the Worcester (Mass.), 261 Main Street Corporation. The theatre, when completed, is leased to the Loew interests, and will house Loew's Plymouth Theatre. The property has been appraised at $1,333,000. The theatre will seat 2700.

$3,000,000 Detroit Theatre Third in United Artists Chain

DENNIS O'BRIEN, acting for United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., and Joseph M. Schenck closed a deal this week for a 2,000 seat house to be erected at the Northeast corner of Bagley Avenue and Clifford Street, Detroit, at an estimated cost of $3,000,000; the theatre will be housed in an 18-story office building. The Detroit house is the third in the chain of 20 presentation houses originally announced by Mr. Schenck, the other two being located in Los Angeles and Seattle.

A bond issue of $2,800,000 for the project, handled by Lawrence Stern & Co., of Chicago, has already been approved by the State Securities Commission. O'Brien closed the Detroit deal with Edward A. Loveley and other officers of the Detroit Properties Corporation, representing the Detroit syndicate.

S'West 1927 Outlook Good

Motion Picture Journal Analysis Indicates Prosperous Business Conditions

ACCORDING to a survey made recently by the Motion Picture Journal published in Dallas, Texas, as unusually prosperous year is looked forward to in the Southwest, embracing Oklahoma, New Mexico, Arkansas, Louisiana and Kansas, for the coming year. A general trade analysis indicates plenty of money available for amusement purposes, as the economic foundation is more secure in every line than ever before.

It is a matter of definite record that the Southwest produced its largest and best output of corn during the past year, and practically the same result obtained in every product in every State.

Fruit and vegetable output far outdistanced all expectations, the cattle industry showed intense activity and maize, hay and cane were bountiful. Arkansas and Louisiana produced their best rice crop in some time, and it sold at high price. Sugar, both beet and cane, came up to expectations, and lumber from Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas was active, and in steady demand.

Labor was well employed, and at good wages; add to these facts that building operations in the Southwest lead all other parts of the country, and it will be easily seen that money will be plentiful during 1927.

In its survey the Motion Picture Journal published the names of leaders in the business world who predict a prosperous year. They are J. Edgar Pew, president of the Sun Oil Company; J. Perry Burrus, formerly president of the Texas State Manufacturers' Association; E. L. Flippen, president of the Armstrong Packing Company of Dallas; W. C. Lemmon, manager of the Case Threshing Machine Company; M. J. Norrell, general manager of the Dallas Chamber of Commerce; Joseph F. Leopold, manager of the Southern-Central division of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and W. J. Evans, assistant Federal Reserve agent of the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

"Newlyweds" Series as "U" Junior Jewels

"THE Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies, the first thirteen of which are now being released, will be one of the principal offerings on Universal's short subject program for next year when they will occupy the highest niche—that given "The Collegians" and the most praiseworthy that can be given a short subject by Universal—the rating of Junior Jewels.

This second series of the Stern Brothers will be made on a greater scale than heretofore and to this end great extremes of preparation are being made at the comedy producers' studio. Gus Mein, director of the first batch of "Newlyweds," will direct the new group, which will total twelve in number. George McManus, the cartoonist from whose strip these comedies are adapted, is engaged to visit the comedy plant this winter to cooperate in the production of this series and "Let George Do It," another of his strips that serves as the basis of a Stern series of comedies.

Keaton Plans Early Production on Second U.S. Comedy

Buster Keaton's second comedy for United Artists embracing an entirely new angle of university life is to go into work soon after two months of preparation. Supporting Keaton in this new comedy, as yet untitled, will be Ann Cornwall, Harold Goodwin, Grant Withers, James Mack and Florence Turner. James W. Horne is director, Bryan Foy and Carl Harbough, comedy constructors, and Devereaux Jennings, chief cameraman. The picture will be produced at the Keaton Studio in Hollywood.

Hatton Featured as Comic in "Fashions for Women"

Raymond Hatton will play a featured comedy role in "Fashions for Women," Paramount's first Esther Ralston starring vehicle, which has just been put in production under the direction of Dorothy Arzner, first woman director ever employed by Paramount. Einar Hanson is playing opposite Miss Ralston.

"Let It Rain" Sequence in Technicolor

Douglas MacLean, Paramount star, plans the filming of one episode in his latest picture "Let It Rain," in Technicolor as he has always believed that color photography has its place in comedy as well as in the more dramatic efforts. The result of this experiment will be closely watched and, if it proves successful with the public it will open an entirely new vista for comedians and producers of screen comedy.

Discussing the innovation, MacLean declares that while he agrees with the critics who hold that force and slap-stick comedy might suffer in departing from black and white photography, yet he believes that in the field of light comedy color can be used effectively.

Imported Pic. Comedies Seen During Nat. Laugh Month

Two feature-length comedies from European sources are being released during National Laugh Month by Imported Pictures Corporation. These subjects, "On the Boulevard" and "Misplaced High-Brows," are now showing in various key cities.

"On the Boulevard" is a product of the studio of the Richard Richberg Films of Berlin. Lillian Harvey, the British actress, is starred with a prominent European cast in support. "Misplaced High-Brows," produced by the Dansk Film Industri of Copenhagen, Denmark, co-stars the European screen comedy team of Harold Madsen and Karl Schenstrom.

Wallace Beery to Make "Taking the Air"

It has been definitely announced by B. P. Schulberg, associate Paramount producer, that Wallace Beery will shortly make "Taking the Air," a high-speed aviation comedy. Upon the decision to produce the film Larry Semon was immediately assigned to do the story as his first major job since his signing of a long term Paramount contract.

Ricardo Cortez Has Lead in New Pola Negri Film

S.S. Franconia to Show Warner Pictures

TWENTY Warner Bros.' productions will form the bulk of the cinema fare of the itinerary theatre aboard the S. S. "Franconia," which left New York on January 12 for a world's cruise of twenty weeks under the auspices of the Cook organization. This floating cinema house will present de luxe motion picture entertainment with all the eclat of a Broadway presentation, it is said. A comedy will also be shown as part of the weekly programme.

S. M. Livingston, of the Warner Company, and Harold White, of Cooks, closed the negotiations for the materialization of the round-the-world theatre which is under the direction of Warner Bros. Frank Heatley, professional projectionist, accompanies the cruise.

Fox Starts Production on "Carmen" and "7th Heaven"

"Carmen" and "7th Heaven"—two outstanding productions on the Fox Films list of coming releases—have been put into work at the West Coast Studio of the company, the former under the direction of Frank Borzage and the latter under the guidance of Raoul Walsh.

Dolores Del Rio will portray the title role of "Carmen," while Don Alvarado will be seen as Done Jose, and Victor McLagen as the toreador. Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are the leads in "7th Heaven," the John Golden play, which ran for four seasons. Prominent in the cast are David Butler, Albert Gran, Ben Bard, George Stone, Emile Chautard and Gladys Brockwell. Director Borzage spent several weeks in France taking notes and photographs for this production.

Murnau at Work on Comedy Scenes for "Sunrise"

F. W. Murnau, after having completed the major portion of dramatic sequences in "Sunrise," is now engaged in directing comedy scenes for this, his first American picture. George O'Brien and Janet Gaynor as country folk on a visit to the city become enmeshed in a number of amusing situations. Ralph Sipperly portrays the role of barber, and he is aided in the comedy by Jane Winton as a manicurist. J. Farrell McDonald appears as a photographer, and Arthur Housman contributes a sketch of a city loafer. William Counselman, comedy writer, is producing the comic situations for this Fox Films picture.

"The Unknown" Final Title of Lon Chaney's New Picture

Lon Chaney's next Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, temporarily called "Alonzo the Armless," has been definitely titled "The Unknown." Chaney will play the head of a Spanish side show in this film, an original by Tod Browning, who will direct the production. Joan Crawford will portray the feminine lead. Production on the story will start soon.

Eugene O'Brien in Columbia's "The Romantic Age"

Eugene O'Brien has been placed under contract by Harry Cohn, Columbia general manager of production, for a forthcoming production, "The Romantic Age."

"Two Arabian Nights," New U.A. Film for 1927

A CADDO production supervised by John W. Considine, Jr., general manager of the Joseph M. Schenck organization, and called "Two Arabian Nights," is an extra United Artists release for 1927. Lewis Milestone is directing it. James T. O'Donohue is adapting Donald McGibeny's magazine story of two American soldiers' adventures in present-day Arabia. Thus far William Boyd and Estelle Taylor have been chosen to head the cast. Camera work is in progress at the United Artists studio in Hollywood.

Denny Vehicles Lifted to Universal's Super Class

THE four Reginald Denny productions on next season's schedule of Universal Pictures will be marketed separately as super releases. Nine supers in all are scheduled, the four Denny vehicles, the titles of which have not yet been announced, "Love Me and the World Is Mine," "The Man Who Laughs," "Uncle Tom's Cabin," "The Big Gun" and "Show Boat." The Denny productions will receive the same concern in production that is accorded the other major productions.

The Universal scenario department has been instructed to diligently comb the stage and literary field for Denny stories. Steps have also been taken to reorganize the star's producing unit so that it will be a larger and somewhat more comprehensive working body. William A. Seiter and Melville Brown, who alternately direct the Universal farceur, are enlarging their immediate staffs and engaging technicians and gag men. "I'll Be There," a new Denny opus, is now in work under Seiter's direction. "Fast and Furious," written by the comedian in collaboration with Brown, is now being cut by that director.

Virginia Lee Corbin Signed for "Quarantined Rivals"

The first player in the cast of "Quarantined Rivals," the Gotham production of George Randolph Chester's farce of that name, is Virginia Lee Corbin. Sam Sax is now on the Gotham lot in California supervising production. He will announce the balance of the cast next week.

Lawrence Gray Gets New Paramount Contract

Lawrence Gray, Paramount leading man, who has just arrived in the East, was presented with a new contract prior to his departure for the West. His first role under this new agreement will be in "The Telephone Girl," Herbert Brenon's new production for Paramount, on which Brenon began work this week. Gray is replacing Neil Hamilton in the cast because of the latter's illness.

Territories Being Sold for "The Slums of Berlin"

Following key city runs in various parts of the country, territorial sales on "The Slums of Berlin," have increased during the past few weeks, according to Walter W. Kofeldt, president of Imported Pictures Corporation, which is releasing this production of National Films A-G of Berlin in the United States.

Territories recently closed on the film, according to Mr. Kofeldt, are as follows:

Connecticut and Rhode Island to C. R. Stadler of South Norwalk, Conn.; Michigan to Joseph di Lorenzo, Insurance Exchange Building, Detroit, Mich.; Illinois and Wisconsin to Osborne and Haroke of Premiere Imported Attractions, Chicago; California to the Paul S. Wolfer Company; and Oregon, Washington, Montana and Northern Idaho to the Western Film Corporation, with offices in Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Oregon.

"The Slums of Berlin" was directed by Lamprecht Gerhardt. Leading roles are played by Egade Nissen and Bernard Goetzke. Mady Christians, star of "The Waltz Dream," has a prominent supporting role.

New Comedy Trio for "Red, White and Blue"

The original comedy duo for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Red, White and Blue," has been reenforced and now three principals, Karl Dane, George K. Arthur and Tom O'Brien will comprise the comedy team for this drama based on life at a citizen's military training camp, instead of the first two as previously announced. Marceline Day, Lincoln Stedman, Gene Stone, Capt. E. H. Calvert and others have roles in the picture, which is being directed by Sam Wood, from an original by Byron Morgan.

Lloyd Comedy Opens Rialto Engagement Saturday

Harold Lloyd's new comedy "The Kid Brother," opens its extended engagement on Broadway at the Rialto Theatre, Saturday of this week. The D. W. Griffith work "Sorrows of Satan" concludes its Rialto run of three weeks on Friday night.

February F. B. O. Releases

Five Features, Four Two-Reel Comedies and Four Cartoons Scheduled; New Thomson Picture

DURING the month of February Film Booking Offices will release a total of thirteen pictures comprising five features, four two reel comedies, and four cartoon subects. The features star Alberta Vaughn, Viola Dana, Fred Thomson and "Ranger," the dog star.

First on the list is the Alberta Vaughn Vehicle, "Uneasy Payments" in which the star is supported by Jack Luden, Gino Corrado, Eugene Stone, Victor Potel and Betty Francisco. David Kirkland directed. It is a story of a small town girl, stagestruck, and her struggles during her first few months in the city.

"Salvation Jane" is the title of the Viola Dana starring vehicle which was directed by Phil Rosen. The supporting cast includes Parks Jones, Fay Holderness, and Erville Alderson. "Tarzan and the Golden Lion" is the Gold Bond release for February. It is based on a story by Edgar Rice Burroughs and was directed by J. P. McGowan from an adaptation by William E. Wing. James Pierce plays "Tarzan" and Jad-Bal-Ja is the name of the Lion in the story. Fred Peters, Edna Murphy, Dorothy Dunbar, Harold Goodwin and Liu Yu-Ching make up the supporting cast.

Fred Thomson and Silver King are featured in the next release for this month, titled "Don Mike." Ruth Cifford, Noah Young, Albert Frisco and William Courtwright make up the principal support, with Lloyd Ingraham directing.

The last of the full length features for February is "When A Dog Loves," featuring "Ranger," the canine star. Harold Goodwin, Helen Foster, Frank McGlynn, Jr., Dorothy Dunbar and Irvin Renard are in the supporting cast. J. P. McGowan directed.

On the short subject list is "Turkish Howls" and "Love at First Fight," both from the humorous stories by H. C. Witwer. In this series are featured Lorraine Eason, Thelma Hill, Al Cooke and Kit Guard. Direction is by Del Andrews.

The balance of the short subject releases for February is made up of one Bowers Novelty Comedy titled "He Couldn't Help It," one Standard comedy called "The Unsocial Three," featuring the three men, "Fat" Carr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander, two Alice Cartoons and two Krazy Kat Cartoons. The Alice Cartoons are titled "Alice at the Carnival" and "Alice's Rodeo." The titles of the Krazy Kats are "Kiss Crossed" and "A Fool's Errand."

Expansion at F. N. Plant

Nine Productions in Work and Seventeen Others in Preparation for Screening

THE immediate construction of two stages to cost in excess of $200,000 has been ordered by Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, at the Burbank studios of the company to take care of increased production scheduled for the coming months. The stages will be ready in two months and will bring the total amount of stages at the Burbank plant to six in number.

At the present date eight productions are in work at the Coast studio, and Robert T. Kane is completing another at the Cosmopolitan studios in New York City, bringing the company's February total to nine.

In addition seventeen productions are in preparation for screening in the near future. This group includes four John McCormick productions, two of which will star Colleen Moore. The Colleen Moore pictures are "Naughty But Nice" and "Oh! What a Life" The two other McCormick productions are "The Tender Hour" and "The Rose of Monterey."

The remaining productions now being prepared for filming are "Diamonds in the Rough," "Help Yourself to Hay," "Glitter," "The Sunset Derby," "The Country Beyond Law," "The Road to Romance," "The Stolen Bride," "Hard Boiled Harrigan," "The Poor Nut," "The Butter and Egg Man," "Lily of the Laundry," "Broadway Nights," and a production starring Richard Barthelmess.

Productions now in work on the Coast are "Camille," starring Norma Talmadge; "Naughty Carlotta," starring Constance Talmadge; "The Sea Tiger," starring Milton Sills; "Long Pants," starring Harry Langdon; "All Aboard," starring Johnny Hines; "See You in Jail," featuring Jack Mulhall; "The Notorious Lady," featuring Lewis Stone and Barbara Bedford; and "Bayo-Eats," featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney. The Kane production carries the title "High Hat" and features Ben Lyon and Mary Brian in the leading roles.

Sheehan Signs New Faces for Fox Films Productions

Before leaving for Hollywood, Winfield R. Sheehan, signed John Hilliard and Edna Conway, both native New Yorkers, who left this week for the West Coast.

Mr. Hilliard's first stage experience was in "Stop, Look and Listen," a Dillingham production. He made his motion picture debut some years ago in "For the Honor of the Crew," with Antonio Moreno. Until a year ago he had not seriously espoused the films, but since then he has appeared in many films produced in the East, among them several Richard Dix vehicles.

Miss Conway was discovered while playing a bit in "The Music Master," under the direction of Allan Dwan.

Schulberg Predicts 1927 Banner Year for F.P.-L.

VOICING the opinion that 1927 will be a motion picture year, B. P. Schulberg, Famous Players-Lasky West Coast executive, has declared that the film industry now faces a more decisive forward sweep than any other of America's industries; also that during this year Paramount will overshadow by a considerable margin everyone of its previous years.

The company has distinctive plans for its stars during the coming twelve months. The year 1926 saw five Paramount players elevated to the roster of stardom, Clara Bow, Eddie Cantor, Esther Ralston, Florence Vidor and Wallace Beery. Five new players were also discovered during that period and are now being developed for starring positions, Ann Sheridan, Sally Blane, Fay Wray, Gary Cooper and James Hall. Cooper has already been named to star in the immediate future.

Asserting that Pola Negri's future vehicles will be of a better type, such as "Confession," "Vanity Fair" and "Rachel," Mr. Schulberg stated that it was not Paramount's intention to make of Eddie Cantor a comedian, but rather to give him stories wherein the pathos and humor are combined with the human element predominating. It is confidently anticipated by Mr. Schulberg that Cantor will be one of their best bets before the eclipse of 1927.

Tiffany Opens Exchanges in St. Louis and Kansas City

Edward J. Smith, general sales manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., upon his return to the Tiffany home office in New York on Friday after a ten days' business trip to the Middle West, announced his opening of Tiffany exchanges in St. Louis and Kansas City, both of which were formerly handled by Tiffany franchise holders. Roy Dickson was appointed manager of the St. Louis office, located at 3311 Olive Street. Mr. Dickson was formerly feature sales manager of Pathe in the St. Louis territory. In Kansas City W. P. Bernfield was placed in charge of the branch at 113 West 18th Street. Mr. Bernfield was formerly with Warners and Universal.

Alice Day and Jack Mulhall in F.N.'s "See You in Jail"

First National has signed Alice Day to play opposite Jack Mulhall in "See You in Jail" instead of Dorothy Mackaill, originally east for the role. The picture, a Ray Rockett production, has been in work for several days with scenes in which the feminine lead does not figure. In the supporting positions are Crauford Kent, John Kolb, William Orlamond, Lew White and Carl Stockdale. Many of the scenes of "See You in Jail," will be taken in busy spots of downtown New York and the Los Angeles City Jail.

Marion Jackson Preparing Story for Ken Maynard

The next feature in which Ken Maynard will be presented by Charles R. Rogers for release through First National is now being prepared by Marion Jackson, author of "The Overland Stage," a recent Maynard stellar vehicle. Following the completion of "Somewhere in Sonora," Maynard's March release, the cowboy star took a short vacation. He is now prepared, however, to begin work on his next production, which has been tentatively called "The Country Beyond Law."

Warners to Open Special in N.Y. Selwyn, Feb. 3

"WHEN A MAN LOVES," Warner Bros'. new John Barrymore film with Dolores Costello, will have its world premiere at the Selwyn Theatre in New York on Thursday, February 3. This arrangement culminated a fortnight of financial negotiations in which Warner Bros., George Taylor and the Selwyn management participated. The Warners lent their aid in securing the Cort Theatre for "The Constant Nymph," the attraction now at the Selwyn, thus enabling Mr. Taylor to listen to their plans.

The Vitaphone will play a large part in the Warner presentation at the Selwyn. The score of the musical accompaniment will be furnished by Henry Hadley, late guest conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and composer. In the Vitaphone concert programme preceding the Barrymore opus there will be a number of grand opera and musical comedy artists featured.

Columbia Has Only Five More to Complete

CO-INCIDENT with the casting for "The Romantic Age," Columbia Pictures has but five productions yet to be filmed on its schedule of twenty-four release for 1926-27. There have been no periods of depression at the Columbia studio since the beginning of the season and this in the face of frequent threats of labor trouble in other sections of Los Angeles. Columbia pictures now in the course of filming include "Poor Girls," "Pleasure Before Business," "The Wreck," "Birds of Prey." Recently finished were "The Bachelor's Baby," "The Price of Honor" and "Paying the Price."

Samuel J. Briskin, erstwhile president and producer of Banner productions, is a recent addition to the producing staff at the Columbia studio on the West Coast. His immediate activities are concentrated on "Poor Girls," featuring Dorothy Revier with support from Ruth Stonehouse, Edmund Burns, Lloyd Whitlock and Marjorie Bonner.

Fitzmaurice Will Direct Dove and Lyon in "Tender Hour"

In "The Tender Hour," George Fitzmaurice's initial First National picture under his contract with the organization, the director will guide Billie Dove and Ben Lyon, the co-featured players, through a story by Winifred Dunn, who is also doing the scenario. Some of the most imposing settings that have ever been constructed at the First National studio are being prepared for this John McCormick, it is said.

Frank Strayer to Direct Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie"

Frank Strayer, director of the Columbia picture, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," has been engaged by Paramount to direct Clara Bow in "Rough House Rosie," her second starring feature for Paramount. In this production Miss Bow, who has been appearing in "Children of Divorce," will return to light comedy.

A.C.A. Announces Titles of Three Guest Jewels

Beginning February 1 and following their respective order, the American Cinema Association single reel Poetic Jewel releases of Edgar A. Guest, will be "Bill and I Went Fishing," "Ma and the Auto" and "The Yellow Dog." A trip to Lake Placid will be made this week by Charles L. Glett, producer of the Guest series, and Walter K. Scott, who is illustrating them for the screen. This location calls for work on a Guest poem with a wintry setting.

"God's Great Wilderness," the fifth David M. Hartford release through A.C.A. was released on January 15. Lillian Rich and Joseph Bennett are the leads, while Mary Carr and Russell Simpson are prominent in supporting roles. Hartford is now filming "Rose of the Bowery," also destined for A.C.A.

Fox Films to Release Wells' Novel Under Original Title

The Fox Films Corporation, on February 13, will release its screen version of H. G. Wells' novel, "Marriage," under its original title instead of "The Wedding Ring." It was decided to use the original title because the novel has become so widely known under that name as to have a noteworthy box office value. Virginia Valli plays the wife, and Allan Durant the husband. Gladys McConnell has the role of the younger sister. James Marcus and Lawford Davidson have supporting roles. Production is nearing completion under R. William Beill's direction.

Change of Policy for Fox's Academy of Music

The management of the Academy of Music, a William Fox house on 14th Street, near Irving Place, New York, announces a change of policy which becomes effective Sunday, January 23. Two features will be exhibited instead of one as heretofore, together with a stage bill with a new program each Sunday instead of Sunday and Thursday. The concert orchestra will be augmented to forty, while the scale of prices will be reduced.

Blondes Guests at Premiere Show

See "Just Another Blonde" Free at Modjeska, Augusta

All blondes were admitted free to the opening performance of "Just Another Blonde," when that film showed at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

This fact was made known two weeks in advance of showing of picture by running slides in both the Modjeska and Imperial theatres and ads appearing in the local newspapers.

Quite a few availed themselves of the opportunity of taking in a free show, while the publicity derived from this stunt proved very beneficial to the theatre.

A tie-up with one of the local beauty parlors allowed the most beautiful blonde to have a free facial and a marcel. Three members of the local Woman's Club acted as judges in this contest and the theatre got a lot of good publicity on the stunt.

"The General" in Person Ballyhoos Keaton Film

A ballyhoo marked for its cleverness was introduced in Bridgeport, Conn., with the first run of "The General." On the street, a man dressed very gaudily as "The General" was accompanied by another man dressed as an orderly. The latter continually brushed off "The General" with a whisk broom and paid him other very ostentatious attentions. At the same time he continually addressed him as "The General," while offering to do many little services for him. The ballyhoo carried no placard, but the constant repetition of the word "General" put over the idea very effectively among the crowds downtown.

ADMISSION cards good for five admissions and similar to that illustrated on this page are an adaptation of the coupon-book plan of selling tickets in blocks which proved a welcome box office enterprise at the Greenwich Theatre, East Greenwich, R. I., according to B. G. Desmarais, manager of the house.

Mr. Desmarais—who, by the way, is perhaps better known in the trade as B. G. Salvini, the name under which he became famous as a circus bareback rider—informs this department that the admission ticket idea registered as one of the best stunts he has tried out at the Greenwich Theatre.

"The cards were sold at one dollar apiece," he writes. "The regular admission price is twenty-five cents. Thus the purchaser of the ticket enjoyed a reduction of twenty-five cents on each ticket bought.

"I placed the tickets in every store in the town, and made personal calls at factories and business houses in East Greenwich. In this way I disposed of eight hundred tickets in the week before Christmas, which was a very big help during the dull pre-holiday season.

"At first I was under the impression that the sale of the five-admission card might have a tendency to hurt business after Christmas, but, as a matter of fact, I am getting people who never came to our show before. Moreover, there are many cases in which people come in family groups and who use more than one ticket in an evening.

"I offered the tickets as an especially appropriate and practical gift for Christmas, and a great number were purchased by people to send to their friends. Evidently many of these went to people who are not regular patrons of the Greenwich—an added inducement for the use of these tickets, for I feel confident of making 'regulars' of a good percentage of these newcomers."

Town Band Turns Ballyhoo for Circus Feature

A. E. Canley, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Cobourg, Ontario, used members of the town band, dressed in freak uniforms, in a decorated truck as a street ballyhoo for "Greater Than Barnum's" and secured good results largely because it is only once in a great while that he stages any outside stunt in Cobourg, so that the novelty has not worn off.

Two Northwest Houses to Add Presentations

Announcement was made from the general offices of Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., in Seattle, last week to the effect that immediate improvements will be made in the Liberty Theatre at Portland and the Liberty in Wenatchee. Presentation stages will be added to both houses, in addition to the remodeling and redecorating to be done.

Says Posters Lag Behind Other Accessories

More Suggestion and Less Detail Will Improve Selling Power of Picture Paper

By LEON ROSENBLAT

Lyceum and Plaza Theatres, Bayonne, N. J.

Motion pictures have advanced. Technically and artistically, the screen dramas of today are quite as far ahead of the photoplays of ten years ago as those early productions were ahead of the first attempts at moving pictures. Moving picture theatres have kept pace with the progress of their entertainments.

Motion picture accessories, the all-important tools of the exhibitor, have been improved, too. Realizing that motion picture theatre advertising presented new and different problems from those of the so-called "legitimate theatre," the producers have met these requirements with the materials they required.

The motion picture lithographic posters, alone, have not changed. With only a few exceptions producers are offering today posters that are in nearly every respect exactly the same as those that came with the birth of the industry. In the main, the lithographic posters of the motion picture industry detail in colors—and always the same four colors—scenes from the productions they aim to advertise.

In the early days of the picture theatre nearly all houses used the lithographs furnished by producers in the one and three sheet frames in their lobbies and in front of their theatres. Today, most theatres that can afford to do so have specially prepared posters painted for them. We know that colored photographs are not posters, but colored photographs are about all we get in most lithographs.

Perhaps this lament has come too late. It may be that the unusual posters on "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which recently played at my theatres, indicate the arrival of a new era of motion picture lithographs.

The Germans have set the pace in poster art. The French have not been far behind. Producers of commercial posters in the United States have followed suit, so that today our posters compare favorably with any in the world.

The Chadwick posters on "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," which I mentioned above, gain their effects by means of the elements which are accented in commercial posters. Masses of solid colors and suggestions, rather than details, tell their story effectively and forcefully. And they give us quite the effects that are so costly, when we have to have them painted especially for our lobbies.

Essay Tie-up Sells "The Temptress"

Dallas Paper Features Stories About Temptations

Manager Barry Burke, with the help and co-operation of the "Dallas Dispatch," ran a story contest on "The Temptress," when that film showed at the Palace Theatre, Dallas, Tex.

Each contestant was asked to name his or her ten greatest temptations and comment upon each one.

A local jeweler came in on the tie-up and offered a wrist watch for the best story. Ten dollars in cash and a month's pass to the Palace were the other two prizes. In view of the "big" prizes offered, the contest attracted a world of attention.

Reports Good Results With "Blue Boy" Color Stunt

The Lyric Theatre, Dover, N.H., conducted a highly successful coloring contest among the school children of Dover when "The Blue Boy" played that theatre. The electro supplied by Educational was obtained by the exhibitor and a supply of the outline drawing of "The Blue Boy" was printed for distribution.

There were two prizes offered for water color work and three prizes for the best coloring of this drawing to be drawn by crayon. A framed reproduction of "The Blue Boy" was the most elaborate prize, the four others being a large drawing book, box of paints, box of stencils, and an unframed reproduction of "The Blue Boy."

Essays on Prohibition Win Turkeys at "Old Soak"

The America Theatre in Denver stirred up the population of that city when "The Old Soak" was playing there by offering prizes for the best 100-word essays on the prohibition question. There were hundreds of essays turned in. "The Old Soak" played the America just before Thanksgiving and so the prizes were turkeys.

Start "Scout" Drive Month in Advance

Des Moines Strand Opens Campaign for February Attraction

ADVANCE exploitation approximately two months before the date of showing has been launched in Des Moines by the A. H. Blank Enterprises in behalf of "A Regular Scout," the F.B.O. production booked for showing at the Strand Theatre in that city on February 9th. The opening of this unique campaign occurred December 20th, with an invitation showing of the picture before an audience which included Boy Scout Masters, heads of the Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Boy Work Committee and other organizations. The private showing was held at the Strand after the regular performance on that day.

The "Scout Monthly Magazine," published by the local council and also the "Weekly Bulletin," issued from the same source, is being utilized in securing publicity.

The local Scout Council through the Scout Executive is making arrangements with the Ministerial Association to announce the picture's play dates at the Strand, from their pulpits on Sunday, February 6th.

An eyeful for the passerby and sales value in every glance, distinguish the frontal displays which exploit attractions at the Victoria Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa. The displays are designed and executed by Manager F. K. O'Kelly of the Victoria which is operated by Wilmer and Vincent. The display shown above featuring Paramount's "The Ace of Cads" was made with stock materials, stills, window cards, poster cut-outs, etc., and illustrates the fine lobby effects which may be obtained when good accessories are provided by distributors.

Facsimile Tickets Used As "Midnight Sun" Heralds

Louis Gans, general manager of the Belmont, New York, nearly caused a riot in the Bronx when he was showing "The Midnight Sun" in the Belmont and Crescent. He had boys on the street giving out familiar bits of pasteboard on one side of which was printed "Colony Theatre, Seat X 11, Orchestra, $5," and on the reverse side "'The Midnight Sun' will be shown at popular prices—Belmont, (Crescent), Sat., Sun., Mon."

Dance Establishment Ties Up with Bobbed Hair Contest

MUTUAL benefits for a picture theatre and a dancing establishment resulted from a tie-up recently arranged between the America Theatre and the Broadmoor Country Club in Denver, Colo. The exploitation centered about Laura La Plante as the star of "Her Big Night," the feature advertised as the attraction at the America. The tie-up was carried out with a "bobbed hair contest" featured by the Country Club. To the girl with the prettiest bob resembling that worn by the star of "Her Big Night," the dance hall presented a silver loving cup.

The dancing establishment advertised the contest for a week in advance, and then the stunt, itself, lasted another week, the week the Laura La Plante picture was showing at the America.

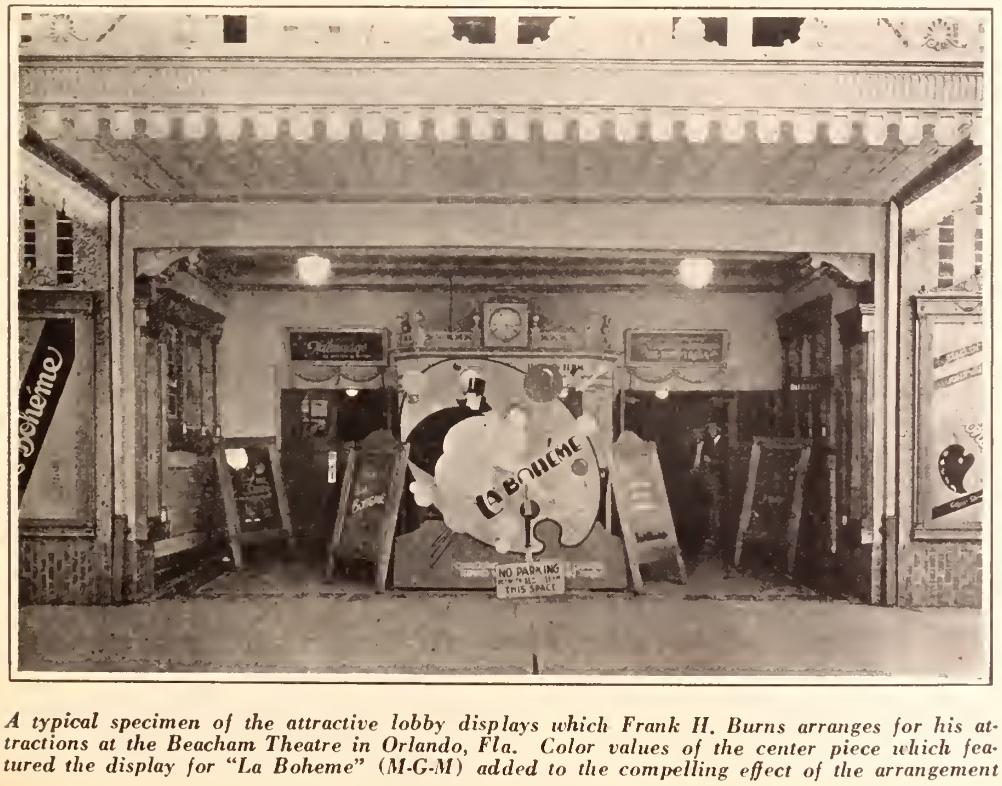
The success of the stunt was proved on the night of the finals, after a full week of preliminaries, when the dance hall was packed to capacity. Practically every girl present decided that she would take off her hat that night in order that she might be in the running.

The judges were Betty Craig, picture critic of the "Denver Post," and Josephine Atkinson of the America staff. B. D. Hooton, manager of the theatre, presented the prizes and told the crowd plenty about the next week's show.

Unique Herald for "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em"

Manager Walter League distributed 4,000 wedding rings to help advertise "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," when that film showed at the Rialto Theatre, Denver, Colo.

The rings were attached to a yellow card by a string, and the card carried copy on one side reading "You won't need this if—You 'Love 'Em and Leave 'Em.'" The other side of the card read as follows: "If you want to know what this is all about and if you want to learn all the tricks of modern love-making—SEE 'Love 'Em and Leave 'Em' at the RIALTO."



A typical specimen of the attractive lobby displays which Frank H. Burns arranges for his attractions at the Beacham Theatre in Orlando, Fla. Color values of the center piece which featured the display for "La Boheme" (M-G-M) added to the compelling effect of the arrangement

University Night F & R State Feature

Baby Dorothy Johnson, star saxaphonist who appeared on the program with F. B. O.'s "Kosher Kitty Kelly" at the Marion Theatre, entertained the boys and girls of Marion, O., at a Yule party given in the lobby of the house of Manager G. H. Foster

"Alimony Martyr" Writes Prize Essay Exploiting Picture

AN exploitation idea which developed into one of the most interesting newspaper tie-up stunts attempted in San Francisco for some time was engineered by Frank Galvin, of Producers Distributing Corporation, for that company's release, "For Alimony Only." Galvin arranged with the "Oakland Tribune" for an essay contest on the subject, "Do You Believe in Alimony, and, If So, How Would You Control It?" The "Tribune" and the State Theatre in Oakland offered cash prizes for the best essays.

In connection with the contest, Galvin took a trip up to The Willows, in Glenn County, Cal., where Sam W. Reid is in jail for refusing to obey a court order to pay alimony to his divorced wife. Reid is known as the "Alimony Martyr," and he has been in jail since July, 1925, for contempt of court.

He told the judge that, as a further mark of his contempt for the court's justice, he would not shave nor have his hair cut until his release.

The famous "martyr" agreed to write his views on alimony, divorce, etc., and the result of his literary labors was an article which won a featured place in the columns of the newspapers, the publicity directly tying up with the showing of "For Alimony Only" at the State.

Amateurs Rehearsed in Advance Act in Film Made on Stage

MANAGER J. P. HARRISON of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Tex., tried something different when he staged home-made movies on the stage in conjunction with the showing of "Everybody's Acting" when that film played the Hippodrome.

Harrison worked the stunt with the aid of the Baylor University Chamber of Commerce. Twenty-five students from the university were chosen to take part in this "movie" act and were planted in different parts of the house and were called to the stage by the director.

The movie act went over big, the people in the audience fairly howled with delight at the funny antics of the would-be Mary Pickfords, John Gilberts, Gloria Swansons, etc.

Of course, the act was rehearsed several times before presentation to the public, but as far as the public was concerned, it looked as if all the actors coming upon the stage were just volunteers who merely happened to be in the audience on that particular night.

American Exploitation Idea Successful in Peru

A pirates' ball, attended by five hundred members of Lima, Peru, society and official life, was the unusual form taken by a special preview of Douglas Fairbanks' "The Black Pirate."

Gustav Mohme, United Artists' manager for the territory, sponsored the idea, and sandwiched the screening of "The Black Pirate" between dances.

Minnesota Men Take Possession of House During Special Show

THE State Theatre in Minneapolis staged a novel University of Minnesota program Wednesday night, January 12. The night was designated as "university pledge night" and members of 36 fraternities and about 23 sororities were invited to attend. The box office closed at 7 P.M. on that night, and at 9 P.M. the university program began.

Eddie Ruben, of the firm of Finkelstein & Ruben, a former University of Minnesota football star, was in charge. Motion pictures of some of the famous football games which Minnesota has played with its traditional rival, Michigan, were shown, in addition to the regular films.

Special musical numbers were arranged by William Warville Nelson and his State Concert Orchestra, and by Eddie Dunstedter, organist. At 11 o'clock the students joined with the organ in a community sing featuring Minnesota and fraternity songs. This feature was broadcast by WCCO, the big Twin City radio station.

F. & R. considers the program an excellent way of creating good will among the university students.

Ex-Ball Player's Speech Publicizes Theatre

Fred S. Meyer, managing director of Universal's Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, obtained front page publicity for his house recently through taking advantage of a current news topic, the Ty Cobb-Tris Speaker ruling. Meyer discovered that an actor on his vaudeville bill was a former ball player and had the latter make a speech which pleaded for a fair trial for Cobb and Speaker. The Milwaukee News gave the incident a story on page one.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

That his forthcoming First National vehicle, "All Aboard," should have the flavor of the sea about it, Johnny Hines and his supporting cast, including Edna Murphy, Dot Farley and others, boarded the steamship "Yale" at San Diego for the purpose of filming an ocean-going sequence.

Ruth Stonehouse has been given a prominent part in the cast of "Poor Girls," a future Columbia production. Lloyd Whitlock also has an important role.

Donald Keith and Jack Dougherty were recently added to the company of players supporting Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery," wherein Cantor enacts the role of a mail carrier. Appearing opposite the comedian is Jobyna Ralston, who is making in the Cantor opus her debut as a free-lance player. Others in the cast are William Powell, Victor Potel and Paul Kelly. William Goodrich is the director.

Sam Hellman, humorist, is to do the titles for "A Kiss in a Taxi," Bebe Daniels' new Paramount picture. Hellman arrived in Hollywood from the East on December 31.

Casting has started on "Poor Girls," a Columbia Pictures drama. Edmund Burns will be seen in support of Dorothy Revier.

Harvey Gates, scenarist of "The Barrier" and other films, has been placed under a long term contract by the Warner Brothers. His first assignment will be Monte Blue's starring vehicle, "The Brute." Director Herman Raymaker will start casting as soon as the scenario is completed.

One of the roles in Columbia's comedy, "Pleasure Before Pleasure," will be played by Henry Menjou, brother of Adolphe. Frank R. Strayer will direct.

Charles Emmet Mack has been signed by Warner Brothers for a featured part in "A Million Bid," one of the forthcoming Dolores Costello starring productions on the Warner schedule. Other players who will support the star are Warner Oland, John Miljan, Sojin, Josef Swickard and Anders Randolph. Anthony Coldeway is writing the scenario and Alan Crosland has been chosen for the directorial post.

Osgood Perkins, last seen in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," has been cast for an important role in "Knockout Reilly," Richard Dix's next Paramount picture. Prominent in supporting roles are Mary Brian, Jack Renault, Lucie B. Seger and Myrtland La Varre. Malcolm St. Clair is directing this picturization of Albert Payson Terhune's story which Pierre Collings and Kenneth Raisbeck adapted to the screen.

Jobyna Ralston is portraying the leading feminine role in Eddie Cantor's second Paramount starring film, "Special Delivery." Sally Blane, previously assigned to this role, is to play opposite Wallace Beery in "Looie the Fourteenth."

Mona Palmer, one of the Paramount junior stars, who played her first role, that of leading woman, opposite Thomas Meighan in "The Canadian," has been cast for an important part in Paramount's "Cabaret," starring Gilda Gray.

With Sally O'Neil heading the cast and portraying the title role, William Beaudine has started work on "Frisco Sally Levy," his first picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer which deals with Jewish-Irish life in San Francisco. Charles Delaney has been signed for the masculine lead and will portray the part of a young traffic officer. Roy D'Arcy will appear as a dapper sheik and Delaney's rival in love. Tenen Holtz, Kate Price, Turner Savage, Helen Lavine and Leon Holmes complete the cast.

Leon d'Usseau has joined the Paramount editorial and production departments at the Long Island studio. d'Usseau assisted in the choice and preparation of scripts for Marion Davies and Mae Murray for a number of years. At present he is searching for W. C. Fields' next comedy vehicle.

Holding the opinion that the year of 1927 will be a banner year for exponents of masculine beauty, Johnny Hines has signed a number of good lookers for his "All Aboard," now in production. The latest to join his supporting cast are Bull Montana, Sojin, Frank Hagney, James Leonard, Charles Reed, Henry Barrows and Fred Kelsey.

Players thus far engaged for the cast of "The Broken Gate," a Tiffany production, include Dorothy Phillips, William Collier, Jr., Jean Arthur, Gibson Gowland, Florence Turner, Charles A. Post, Caroline Rankin and William R. Walling.

Warner Baxter has jointed the cast of Herbert Brenon's next Paramount production, as yet untitled. Others featured are Holbrook Blinn, Alice Joyce and Neil Hamilton. The story is one of political intrigue.

Vera Lewis, Phillips Smalley and Jack MacDonald have been added to the cast of "The Broken Gate," a Tiffany production now in the process of filming. Others in the cast are Dorothy Phillips, William Collier, Jr., Jean Arthur, Gibson Gowland, Florence Turner, Charles A. Post and Caroline Rankin.

Rolfe Sedan is another player added to the cast of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the picturization of the Harriet Beecher Stowe novel, which Harry Pollard is making for Universal. The large cast now includes John Roche, Vivien Oakland, Gertrude Astor, Virginia Gray, Mona Ray, Adolph Milar, J. Gordon Russell, Seymour Zeliff, Aileen Manning, C. E. Anderson, Lassie Lou Ahern and others.

Centennial Pictures, recently organized for the purpose of producing "The Liberty Boys of 76," a series of two-reel historical pictures depicting the early days of American history, have leased the World Peerless Studio at Fort Lee, New Jersey, where all "interiors" will be shot. The company will make use of the entire plant. Included in the list of players are George Du Count, Starr Jones, Rusty Lane and Al Hart.

Judy King, former Fox contract player and a former member of the legitimate stage, has been added to the cast of King Vidor's unnamed production, which he is directing from his own original. Miss King recently appeared in "A. W. O. L." and "Upstream."

Hale Hamilton has joined the cast of Herbert Brenon's next Paramount picture. Featured in this story of politics are Holbrook Blinn, Alice Joyce, Warner Baxter and Neil Hamilton. In the supporting cast are Hamilton Revello and William E. Shay. Elizabeth Meehan adapted the story.

Franklin Pangborn, who was signed last week by Metropolitan for a role in a forthcoming picture, was notified the other day of his assignment to the E. Mason Hopper producing unit, which will make "The Night Bride," Marie Prevost's next Metropolitan vehicle. In the Prevost number Pangborn will be seen with Harrison Ford and Robert Edeson, also cast for important roles.

Owen Moore, now completing the featuring role opposite Pauline Starke in "Women Love Diamonds," has received a new contract whereby he will be seen exclusively in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions. Owen has played important roles in M-G-M pictures during the past few months, some of them being "The Road to Mandalay," "The Red Mill," and "The Taxi Dancer."

Two new names were affixed the other day to Warner Bros. contracts. Johnny Grey, comedy constructor and scenarist, one of the signers, "gagged" "The Red Mill," "Tell It to the Marines," "Red, White and Blue" and scenarized "The Understanding Heart" and Buster Keaton's next comedy. Ray Enright, cutter, signed the other contract. He will direct "Tracked by the Police," which Grey will scenarize.

Robert Z. Leonard, director of Norma Shearer in her two latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicles, "The Waning Sex" and "The Demi Bride," will next direct an original prepared by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, the co-authors of the two Shearer stories and entitled "Smarty." "The Grey Hat," also by these same secnarists, was to have been made by Leonard, but it will now be directed by Harry Millarde with Lew Cody and Renee Adoree heading the cast. Production on it will start some time next week.

Earle Foxe, who enacts the title role of the Fox Films series of "Van Bibber" comedies, essays the role of an artistic villain in the company's screen version of "The Secret Studio," produced under Harry Beaumont's direction on the West Coast.

Eddie Cantor is already planning his third picture for Paramount, although production on his second, "Special Delivery," has not been under way very long. The name of his next opus is "Good Service."

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe's "Crimson Flash" Unit Leaves for Charleston

Headed by Cullen Landis, and supervised by E. Oswald Brooks, the Patheserial unit making "The Crimson Flash," left New York City, Tuesday, January 11, via the Pennsylvania Terminal for Charleston, South Carolina, where three or four weeks will be spent on location. The company numbered twenty-five players and technical men, and it included in addition to Messrs. Landis and Brooks, Paul Fairfax Fuller, scenarist for this George Gray story; Director Arch Heath, Assistant Directors Tom Goodwin and Willard Vander Veer, and the entire support, among whom were Thomas Holding, J. Barney Sherry, Walter Lewis, Ivan Linow, Mary Gardner, Tony Hughes, Gus DeWeil and Ed Roseman.

Eugenia Gilbert will go directly from California to the Southern location to play the feature role. Upon completing her Patheserial role she is expected to return to the Leo Maloney studio to support the Western star in his next feature.

Beauchamp Directing "Little Lena"

Clem Beauchamp, who has been cast in supporting roles in Mermaid and Cameo comedies, has again turned to directing. He has just turned out "Listen Lena," a forthcoming Educational comedy of the Mermaid brand.

Dramatic excerpts from the first chapter of "On Guard," the new Patheserial, which was made in cooperation with the United States Army

Mabel Normand and Ben Turpin Comedies Head List of Releases; "On Guard" Number One Included

PATHE'S releases for the last week of Laugh Month, January 30, include two two-reel comedies starring Mabel Normand and Ben Turpin, the first chapter of "On Guard," starring Cullen Landis and "Tit for Tat," an Aesop's Film Fable, Pathe Review Number 5, Topics of the Day Number 5 and two issues of Pathe News.

"Should Men Walk Home?" is the title of the Mabel Normand starring comedy in which she is supported by Creighton Hale, Oliver Hardy and Eugene Pallette; Leo McCarey directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. It is described as a crook comedy with Miss Normand and Hale as thieves trying to steal a diamond brooch from a billionaire. The usual comedy mix-up ensues as the detective in the case turns out to be the real thief.

Ben Turpin is starred in "A Hollywood Hero" with Bud Jamieson, Alma Bennett and others in support under direction of Harry Edwards, supervised by J. A. Waldron. The action revolves around a man and wife traveling East from California with a screen "sheik" among the passengers. Wifie falls for the "sheik" and the usual complications arise, with Turpin getting the wrong end of the bargain.

"On Guard" is the current Pathe serial and deals with army life, with Cullen Landis in the role of a private. He is supported by Muriel Kingston, Louise DuPre, Walter Lewis, Tom Blake and many others. All the military scenes are by courtesy of the U. S. Army. The story was written by Major Robert Glassburn of the U. S. Army and scenarized by Paul Fairfax Fuller. It was produced by Schuyler Grey Productions and directed by Arch Heath.

"Tit for Tat" is the animated cartoon comedy release of the Aesop's Film Fables Series. Pathe Review Number 5 offers: "The Little Niagara of New Zealand"—a camera study of the tumbling waters of Huka Falls; "An Enduring Defender"—Shrewsbury Castle in Wales, a site of ancient and modern battles, which has survived the onslaught of the greatest foe of all—Time; "Hunting a la Mode"—"shooting" wild game by camera in the Canadian Rockies—deer, bears and Rocky Mountain sheep "brought down" by the unerring eye of the lens. Topics of the Day Number 5 presents the latest wit and humor culled from the press of the world, and Pathe News, issues Nos. 12 and 13, offer optical views of the outstanding timely world events garnered from the four corners of the earth.

Educat'ls Laugh Releases

Six Two-Reel, Two One-Reel, Four Cartoon Comedies Listed for Distribution in February

EDUCATIONAL will release during February a total of twelve short-length laugh subjects, which include six two-reel, two one-reel and four cartoon comedies; in addition, the usual issues of Kinograms. "Wedding Yells," starring Johnny Arthur, a Tuxedo comedy, will start the month. Charles Lamont directed and Arthur is supported by Anita Garvin and Kathryn McGuire.

Bobby Vernon will be seen in "Duck Out," a comedy directed by William Watson, and in which the star is supported by Frances Lee. "Listen Lena," the Mermaid mirth comedy for the month, features Al St. John at the head of a cast comprising Lucille Hutton, Jack Lloyd, Clem Beauchamp, who also directed. "Drama De Luxe" is the title of Lupino Lane's newest starring vehicle, with Kathryn McGuire as his leading lady, and Glen Cavendar and Wallace Lupino in support; Norman Raurog directed.

Billy Dooley's latest is "Sailor Beware," with Vera Steadman as his new leading lady and Max Asher, Eddie Baker, Bill Blaisdell, George Towne Hall and George Burton in the east. Anne Cornwall, featured commedienne, will be seen in "Chicken Feathers," the Christie offering for the month. Lewis Sargent plays the feature role in "Ask Dad," a one-reel Cameo comedy, which has Audrey Ferris in the leading feminine role; "Quiet Please," the other Cameo comedy for February, features Phil Dunham.

Lyman H. Howe's release for the month is "The Wise Old Owl," "Fiddlesticks" is the newest Curiosities release, a Bruce Scenic is titled "The Joys of Camping" and "The Wide Open Spaces" is said to present many unusual outdoor scenic shots.

Two Felix the Cat animated cartoon comedies, "Felix the Cat in Icy eyes" and "Felix the Cat Stars in Stripes," and two Life Cartoon Comedies, "The Heavy Date," and "Hitting the Trail," complete the program of comedy subjects for the month.

Success of Laugh Month

Accessories Supplied Theatres and Campaign Entries Received Exceed Previous Totals

BESIDES the stimulus given short subjects in every particular, National Laugh Month, now ending its third week, has shown results that of themselves make it rank with the biggest showman ideas in the motion picture industry.

Not only has Laugh Month promoted the advertising by exhibitors of short subjects; not only has it developed special comedy periods for theatres, but it has caught on with exhibitors, press and public alike to a point where it must now be reckoned as an important annual event.

Suppliers of Laugh Month accessories report that orders for exploitation aids this year far exceed those of last year. While there are no definite figures as yet available, from the amount of accessories already ordered as against last year, and as compared with the estimated number of theatres participating last year, it is calculated by the Laugh Month Committee that upwards of 4,000 theatres will have participated in the celebration this year.

The eve of the fourth week of January finds the National Laugh Month Committee already in receipt of scores of entries in the Laugh Month exploitation campaign. These entries include modest campaigns put over in the smallest of small towns as well as elaborate plans promulgated by bigger theatres in key cities.

The entire country is reading and hearing about Laugh Month, it is said. For instance, many newspaper columnists and cartoonists whose writings are syndicated to hundreds of newspapers have given Laugh Month a play. Among some of the more important of these are Arthur Brisbane, in his column "Today"; K.C.B. in "Ye Towne Gossip"; Helen Rowland; S. E. Kiser in "More Truth Than Poetry"; Lucy Lowell's "Big Sister Talks"; Damon Runyon's column; F.P.A.'s column, "The Conning Tower"; Eleanor Schorer's "The Courtship of Judy;" "Dib's" "Danny Dingle" comic strip, T. E. Powers, and many others.

Fifteen radio stations have broadcast or are broadcasting special Laugh Month programs. It is estimated that the radio audience alone that is hearing about Laugh Month numbers upward of 20,000,000.

Pathe Gets Rogers Films

Secures Release of "Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad" Series of One Reel Features

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchanges, of the acquisition of the film version of Will Rogers' trip abroad which has become national knowledge through Rogers' "Letters of a Self-Made Diplomat to His President," published in the "Saturday Evening Post." These films, which will be released by Pathe as one-reel features under the general title of "Will Rogers, Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad," will be put on the market, starting March 6th.

Rogers acts as guide, commentator and philosopher in the series, carrying his audience with him on the journey, pointing out with his own particular brand of humor scenes, personages and events throughout the journey, which takes in Ireland, England, Germany, France, as well as other countries.

The titles for the series were written by the humorist. The first country visited in the film version is Ireland where, in Dublin, Rogers makes the acquaintance of President Cosgrove and other notables in the official family.

These short features will, according to Mr. Pearson, prove to be the greatest attraction that has been offered to motion picture theatres in years. "Rogers," Mr. Pearson states, "is the most famous American in the world. Every word he utters is broadcast, published and quoted. He is known and loved by millions.

"His lecture tour, now in progress, is attracting the largest audiences in every city and town he visits and the public is paying the highest price to hear him. His syndicated articles have the widest circulation and his famous series of letters in the "Saturday Evening Post," which will be continued throughout the coming year, as well as his radio talks, which demand the highest fee ever paid an artist, all contribute to the success that this group of short feature pictures will enjoy.

"Rogers, it should also be recalled, has just been elected Mayor of Beverly Hills, California, an event that was not only a great tribute to a great humorist but a news event that has and is receiving thousands of columns of editorial comment."

Churchhill Ross Will Make One-Reel "U" Comedies

Churchill Ross, screen comedian, who is now playing in Universal's "The Collegians" series, is to be starred in a special series of one-reel Universal comedies for the next season. A humorous writer is being engaged to prepare a series of original stories for Ross. Work will begin on the series as soon as Ross has completed his work in the new "Collegians" series.

New Johnny Arthur Educat-Tuxedo Is "Wedding Yells"

Charles Lamont has just finished directing Johnny Arthur's latest Educational-Tuxedo comedy entitled "Wedding Yells," and scheduled for release February 6.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Little Journey"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York

Telegraph: "It must be admitted that 'A Little Journey' is generously entertaining and refreshingly simple in its appeal. The delicacy with which the situations are handled, the directorial technique of Robert Leonard, and especially the work of Harry Carey are masterful. William Haines, the hero, takes the remaining honors. A nice looking young man with an infectious smile, he is pre-eminently suited to play the part of a flirt. 'A Little Journey' is well worth an evening's time and a fat admission price."

News: "It ought to entertain 98 per cent. of the Capitol patrons. William Haines is the chief reason. There is no question of Haines' ability and popularity in this type of characterization. He is adored by the women and envied by the male timid souls in his audiences. 'A Little Journey,' taken from Rachel Crothers' stage play, is a deftly-handled picture. Harry Carey is excellent in his role."

Graphic: "Anyway you take it, 'A Little Journey' is worth the trouble. The theme is light—but the story is clever. It should be, since it is from the successful stage play by Rachel Crothers. Robert Z. Leonard did a good job at directing, as he usually does when not taking too many directions from the star. And last, but most important, William Haines is his own interesting self. Miss Windsor played her part capably, and Harry Carey, one of our old favorites, got all the wealth but none of the love in the film. There are many humorous entertaining incidents—for Haines causes them with the flicker of an eyelash. As we said before, 'A Little Journey' is worth a long trip to the Capitol this week."

Times: "A genial production known as 'A Little Journey' is to be seen at the Capitol. This picture jogs along merrily. Miss Windsor is charming as Julie and Mr. Carey begets sympathy for the charitable and self-sacrificing Mr. Smith."

Journal: "'A Little Journey', at the Capitol this week, is a pleasant bit of film fare, well acted by Claire Windsor."

American: "There is an amusing movie dialogue being enacted at the Capitol by Claire Windsor and William Haines."

"Flesh and the Devil"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York

Herald-Tribune: "We arrived at the Capitol after the picture had been running about ten minutes. We were so enthralled by the remaining six reels that we sat through the program, eager to see the beginning of the picture. And then we saw it all over again. That is the test of a picture. Without once sacrificing his story for freak bits of direction or unusual camera shots, Mr. Brown has done things we never saw on the screen before. Never before has John Gilbert been so intense in his portrayal of a man in love. Never before has a woman so alluring, with a seductive grace that is far more potent than mere beauty, appeared on the screen. Greta Garbo is the epitome of pulchritude. If you miss seeing 'Flesh and the Devil,' we do not believe there ever will be another picture like it."

American: "'Flesh and the Devil' is as rare as the proverbial day in June, and you cannot afford to miss this fine bit of film fare. It combines entertainment with artistry, fine direction with splendid acting and beautiful photography with interesting settings. Everyone concerned with the production of 'Flesh and the Devil' comes in for his share of praise. Clarence Brown, who wielded the megaphone, has turned out a picture that he may point to with pride for many years to come. John Gilbert plays the young man who loves not wisely but too well. His portrayal adds another characterization to his long list of perfect performances. Lars Hanson is so convincing that I am sure it will result in his establishing a firm hold on American film fans. Miss Garbo possesses charm, ability and that which Elinor Glyn calls 'It'."

World: "'Flesh and the Devil' is one of those motion pictures so alluring in the mould of its personalities that one is inclined to wonder how in this world it ever avoided being accorded that eloquent type of introduction to this city which can come only with a 'special world premier.' Clarence Brown has taken this story and played it before the camera with a fine feeling for warmth and lightness and visual beauty."

Mirror: "The virile, impassioned presence of John Gilbert and the tingling allure of Greta Garbo filled the vast Capitol Theatre, its lobby and its entrance yesterday with an eager army of motion picture goers. We never sensed such nervous pleasure in a crowd as we did among those viewing or waiting to view these two popular M.-G.-M. players in their initial picture together, 'Flesh and the Devil.' They were not disappointed. They saw the best cinema of the new year. 'Flesh and the Devil' presents John Gilbert and Greta Garbo at their blazing best, than which no greater praise can be given. It is Jack's finest work since 'The Big Parade'. It deserves the sensational success it is scoring at the Capitol."

Journal: "The gorgeously dazzling Greta Garbo and the darkly impetuous John Gilbert appear together in 'Flesh and the Devil'. Clarence Brown directed and a combination like that is something to write home about. If you want to see a picture that is superlatively romantic, magnificently directed and acted, go to the Capitol this week."

Brooklyn Eagle: "John Gilbert, I believe, gives his best performance since 'The Big Parade'. Greta Garbo is cast perfectly in the role of Felicitas, in which she makes the most of her natural charm. Lars Hanson, who will be remembered for his splendid work in 'The Scarlet Letter,' again scores brilliantly at the far corner of this triangle. At yesterday afternoon's performance the Capitol was crowded to its farthest reaches, and on Sunday the police had to be called to keep order in the long line."

Telegram: "This is Miss Garbo's third American picture, and in it she fulfills in rare measure the promise of golden talent she brought with her out of Sweden. Gilbert merits such glowing praise as was his in 'The Big Parade'."

Times: "Produced with admirable artistry, 'Flesh and the Devil' is a compelling piece of work—a story of passionate love for a woman and a friendship of two men. There are scenes in this film which one will not readily forget."

Evening World: "I would advise every lover of good acting and good cinema to see 'Flesh and the Devil'. . . . It brings together John Gilbert and Greta Garbo in roles admirably suitable."

"The Eucharistic Congress"—Fox Films, Illinois Theatre, Chicago

Daily News: "A presentation almost as vivid as life. . . . The characterization of the film as a super-picture, however, holds good."

Herald and Examiner: . . . "Anyone with feeling for demonstration of any sort will find the film absorbing. In the immensity of the crowds, pouring in and out of the stadium, or spreading across the lawns of St. Mary's by the Lake, there is a thrill. The Fox cameramen did a fine job. . . ."

American, Chicago: . . . "So realistically did it grasp the audience that filled the theatre last evening that at its close the thousands of men and women burst into the 'Te Deum' with a spirit as devotional and fervent as might have been registered had the actual ceremonial of the final benediction at Mundelein been enacted before them. . . . Full of impressive ceremonial and full of spectacular scenes. . . . Anyone seeing the picture once will want to see it again to study it and analyze it."

Daily Tribune: ' . . . "Everybody knows that the Cardinal Archbishop of Chicago was a great churchman, a great diplomat, a great builder, a great organizer . . . But now it comes out that Cardinal Mundelein is also a great motion picture producer. . . . He launched on the Lord's Day at one of the few remaining Chicago play houses that possess a distinguished tradition, a corking good show which was also a series of tableaux richly fraught with poetry, splendor and spirituality. . . . All that the Congress held of the spectacular and much that it held of devotion are revealed in the Cardinal's show. . . . A great historical document."

"The Eucharistic Congress"—Fox Films, Boston Opera House, Boston

Evening American: . . . "The audience is held spellbound at the sheer magnitude of the succeeding spectacle. . . . A panorama never to be forgotten by the audience that sees it unrolling on the screen. . . . Perfect continuity and well written explanatory sub-titles."

Herald: . . . "The religious fervor . . . is the most impressive quality of the motion pictures of the Congress."

Post: "A new record for motion pictures was established when the film of the Eucharistic Congress was shown for the first time at the Boston Opera House. . . . The crystal clearness of the pictures, their life-like brilliancy, wonderful perspectives and immense crowds have never been equalled by any spectacle staged for the screen before. From the point of view of technical skill they are well nigh perfect. . . The picture is not only wonderfully clear and gigantic, it is enthralling and beautiful in the extreme, holding the spectator spellbound to the last."

Globe: . . . "A very finely selected rotation of the numerous events . . . aroused applause . . ."

Evening Traveler: . . . "An opportunity to live over in delightful fashion that great dramatic and human spectacle . . . a marvel of carefully chosen scenes . . . transferred to the screen with a brilliancy and accuracy that must be most pleasing . . . worthy to go down in history as an unusual achievement."

"The Better 'Ole"—Warner Bros., London Hippodrome, London, England

Daily News: "Syd Chaplin as 'Old Bill' is as funny as anything his brother has ever done."

Daily Mirror: "'The Better 'Ole' proved to be an amusing production."

Daily Mail: "'The Better 'Ole' amusingly recaptures the war-time charm of Mr. Bruce Bairnsfather's 'Ol Bill' and 'Alf.'"

Sunday Express: "Syd Chaplin easily demonstrates that he has no superior as a screen farceur."

Empire News: "'The Better 'Ole' is one of the greatest comedies yet seen on the screen."

Referee: "Good fun 'The Better 'Ole' certainly is, and we all of us enjoyed it immensely."

World: "The film 'The Better 'Ole' with Syd Chaplin as 'Old Bill' is a masterpiece of merriment."

Reynolds Illustrated News: "The film, 'The Better 'Ole' is bound to be a success."

Dispatch: "Chaplin plays the principal character in this excellent British-story film."

Star: "The audience merrily enjoyed Syd Chaplin as 'Old Bill.'"

Morning Advertiser: "The film is an excellent production."

Westminster Gazette: "The picture is a long series of comic incidents."

Morning Post: "'The Better 'Ole' is packed full of laughs."

Illustrated Sunday Herald: "If you know of a better 'ole than your local kinema when they are showing this one, go to it!"

"While London Sleeps"—Warner Brothers, B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, New York

American: "'While London Sleeps' should appeal to far more people than most of Rinty's pictures—'While London Sleeps' need not worry about its popularity."

Mirror: "'While London Sleeps' offers Rin-Tin-Tin in a melodrama that will delight the youngsters. One sat back of us with his eyes popping through the picture."

News: "Lovers of Rin-Tin-Tin will like this picture. The dog gives his usual fine performance and never overacts."

World: "A fair detective story with some good work by the dog."

Journal: "Rinty is dramatic, modest and never barks up the wrong tree. He does his usual acrobatic stunts with his usual finesse."

"The Better 'Ole" — Warner Bros., Regent Theatre, Toronto Canada

Telegram: "There are those who say that Syd Chaplin is a cleverer comedian than his brother Charles, and the production of 'The Better 'Ole' at the Regent Theatre this week should furnish them with additional argument. Syd as 'Old Bill' is priceless. It is a characterization that is real, human, and somehow sticks in one's mind. As for the picture itself, it is absolutely hilarious. The adventures of the trick horse when the Germans suddenly descend on the town are positively riotous. Probably you have gathered by this time that I am recommending 'The Better 'Ole.' I am, highly. (Of course, if you know a better one, go to it!)"

Globe: "Syd Chaplin, as the leading character, does a splendid piece of work. In the film production, 'Old Bill' is funnier, more original and more true to type than ever. Keeps his audience in spasms of laughter at his antics."

Mail and Empire: "There was more laughter and real low-down fun Christmas Day at the Regent Theatre than we have ever heard or seen. The cause of all the merriment was of course Syd Chaplin as 'Old Bill,' quaintest and most humorous of all the funny Tommies in 'The Better 'Ole.' There is no question but that this wonderful screen production is funnier than both cartoons and play. Syd Chaplin's work in this role should place him on the top of the highest peak of screen artistry—his acting is perfect."

Daily Star: "The film is an improvement on the play, which stamps it at once as the best Syd Chaplin has done."

"Don Juan"—Warner Bros., Rialto Theatre,, Newark, N.J.

Ledger: "A pageantry of sound and a sumptuous cinematic spectacle. 'Don Juan' and Vitaphone, which drew alternating responses of awed surprise and appreciation from a keenly expectant audience, formed the inaugural attractions at the Rialto Theatre Christmas Day. There the Vitaphone and 'Don Juan' with John Barrymore in the title role, had their Newark premieres, constituting what was unquestionably the finest motion picture program ever placed before a local audience. This Vitaphone, this perfect synchronization of sound and motion, this amazing blending of each gesture of the screen character with the volume of sound from an unseen source—distinctly stunned its opening audience. As the amorous hero of agelong legends, Barrymore plays 'Don Juan' with all the completeness of his dramatic artistry."

Star-Eagle: "The miracle of one year becomes the matter of course of the next. Now that the Warner Brothers' Vitaphone has not only synchronized vision and sound, but brought the tone quality to perfection. . . Newarkers who have not seen and heard it on Broadway will find the thrill of their lives at the Rialto. It is so amazing and absorbing a performance that adjectives super-superlative fail the reviewer. 'Don Juan,' with John Barrymore in the title part, is a fascinating story of Rome under the Borgias, and the photoplay and action are of the best."

Newark Evening News: "Seldom have audiences in a Newark film theatre seemed more impressed by a program than were those gathered at the Rialto Christmas Day and yesterday for the first showing here of the Vitaphone. Not only did those spectators sit in deep interest as the achievements of the new invention were brought to their attention, but they showed no hesitation in warmly applauding at numerous intervals during the performance. The picture 'Don Juan' is so alluring, lavishly dressed and full of beauty. Barrymore brings his prowess as a screen lover to a successful climax in the story unfolded, portraying the philandering Spaniard with charm and dash."

Sunday Call: "Absolute synchronization of picture, words and music is attained in the Vitaphone, to a degree which at times appears uncanny."

"Tell It to the Marines"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Embassy Theatre, New York

Herald-Tribune: "The perfect marine comedy. This picture opened at the Embassy Theatre last night and we can't remember when we have had a better time in the theatre. 'Tell It to the Marines' held two big surprises for us. In the first place, after all these years one could not expect to find Lon Chaney without a single false attachment. Back, arms, legs, nose, teeth and even complexion seemed to be his own exclusively. Then, even after having seen William Haines in 'Brown of Harvard,' we were not prepared for such perfection as one finds in this performance. It is one of the finest things we ever saw on the screen. Lon Chaney and William Haines share honors in the finest film they ever made. Joe Farnham has fitted the pictures with a set of titles that is little short of superb."

World: "'Tell-It to the Marines' is a noble, amusing and beautiful motion picture play. Here is one so fine and moving and true that it may very justifiably boast of a parentage which gave us also that great screen drama of the World War, 'The Big Parade.' . . . The sea scenes, the battle reproduction, the marching and contact with enemy troops are managed with utter brilliance by Director George Hill. To me this performance by Mr. Haines, already recognized as a good actor, is near perfection. Mr. Chaney is superb as the hard-boiled, human, disillusioned Sergeant of Marines, and Miss Boardman's romantic episodes were lovely in the extreme. It is a grand show, if you ask me."

Graphic: "'Tell It to the Marines' is in a class by itself; a film masterpiece. What George Hill with his megaphone, a few cameramen, a handful of actors and the Marine Corps—with the Navy in the offing—did to several reels of celluloid should make New York sit up and take notice. 'Tell It to the Marines' is marvelous. This new picture is a Rolls-Royce of the films, and it rides as smoothly through a long evening, with not a rough spot in the direction, not a dull moment. We recommend 'Tell It to the Marines' without any reservation."

American: "'Tell It to the Marines,' Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest, taken in co-operation with the United States Marine Corps, is great entertainment, a rollicking film, filled with laughs. George Hill, the director, did an excellent piece of work, for the picture gives one the impression of swinging action. Lon Chaney, as the hard-boiled Marine sergeant, is perfect, and Haines, as the breezy pride of Kansas City, puts himself definitely on the movie map with this characterization. . . . You'll get a great kick out of this picture."

Daily News: "A rousing good picture. There are thrills, plenty of them, some great views of our battleships turning loose tremendous broadsides and steaming majestically along. There are some applause-stirring bits of fade-ins and super-imposed photography. But the players take the picture. As for Bill Haines, he is 'Brown of Harvard' become a leatherneck. Lon Chaney acts as though he really had been a hardboiled Marine sergeant for years."

Evening World: "An unusually good film. Characterizations by Lon Chaney and by William Haines are excellent. Sergeant O'Hara and Private 'Skeets' Burns are real people. It is an excellent picture."

Sun: "It will be a goodly success. Lon Chaney's name means showers of gold at box offices, and the familiar ingredients that audiences love—comradeship, sentimental, pleasing love, romance and adventure, spectacle—are present and accounted for. . . . I have nothing but praise for the acting of Lon Chaney as the grizzled Marine sergeant, and William Haines as the hero. 'Tell It to the Marines' may be a box office smash."

Times: "Astutely drawn. Lon Chaney gives a trenchant performance, true to life of one of the 'backbones' of the celebrated fighting corps. . . . William Haines does a clever piece of acting in the role of Burns. Miss Boardman is the sort of nurse who would be apt to turn any Marine's head. There is a generous supply of comedy in the film."

"The Eucharistic Congress"—Fox Films, Jolson Theatre, New York

Evening World: "For Catholic audiences this picture cannot fail to recreate something of the spiritual significance of the Congress. To a non-Catholic it proved to be a moving panorama of humanity and more effective than I supposed possible. To a newspaper worker it is obvious that the motion picture camera is a top-grade reporter of such an event."

Daily News: "A keenly appreciative audience watched and applauded the unreeling of this most unusual of motion pictures . . . the ceremonies bring a reaction that no ordinary film could bring. . . There are, happily, occasions for honest and harmless laughter, the close-ups of some of the children who formed the gigantic choir of 62,000 voices stirred sympathetic chuckles here and there, and other incidents which only the camera could catch and record brought laughter of a subdued sort. It is a remarkable record of a remarkable gathering well worth seeing."

Times: "An impressive pictorial record. . . . The camera was skillfully used. . . . Not only were the scenes interesting, but the numbers set forth in the captions are staggering."

Sun: "The film constitutes a real document . . . and is interesting pictorially as well as sociologically."

American: . . . "The realization of Will H. Hays' hope to interest the world at large in the importance of the screen as a religious and educational factor."

Morning Telegraph: "The audience manifested its appreciation by resounding rounds of applause . . . faithful and inspiring . . . is one of the most impressive spectacles the human eye has ever witnessed . . . stupendous and magnificent . . . truly this film brings home the message of what a marvelous medium is the motion picture for there is no other agency within the reach of man that could so graphically depict the wonders of this gorgeous and soul-stirring event."

Brooklyn Daily Eagle: . . . "It does, I believe, succeed in capturing a measure of the spiritual significance of that entire holy procedure. . . . The magic of the camera, more than in the average photodrama of this day, became indisputably apparent. . . . Aside from any religious interest in this picture . . . the film is unquestionably a beautiful cinematic creation. It is, as seen through the nonpartisan eye, not without an element of drama. As mass effects go in the cinema, not even D. W. Griffith, I think, could have achieved so tremendous a tableau. Certainly, no preconceived spectacle could have been half so magnificent."

Opinions on Current Productions

"Ye Movies in Ye Olden Days"

When You and I and the Movies Were Young

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

DESPITE the youth of the cinema there is a pronounced tendency to resurrect the films of the early days of the industry so great have been the advances in so short a time. And invariably these are extremely interesting because they show the crudity of the first animated pictures. At the Hippodrome, New York, during the week of January 10 Producers Distributing Corporation released the earliest Leroy pictures of this kind. They supplemented the regular program picture and the accompanying vaudeville bill. Leroy, a pioneer in the game, has probably one of the most valuable collections of these pioneer films.

In the Hippodrome release which will be booked throughout the country are films which will recall the early days to the so-called older generation but will be of equal interest to those to whom the present day perfection is the usual and accepted standard. "The Charge of the Light Brigade" was the first film to be shown on the screen of any Keith theatre in this country. This was at the Union Square, New York, on June 29th, 1896. "The Seventy-first Regiment Drill in 1897" is of unusual interest because of the part this regiment took in the Spanish-American war the following year. "The Morning Bath," a pickaninny being washed by his mammy mother, made by the old Kinetoscope at the Black Maria studios in Orange, N.J., in 1893, is the earliest of this type of pictures revived.

"A Brush in the Park" shows sleighing in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, and is contemporaneous with the Edison picture in Orange. A test shot taken fourteen years ago at the old Keystone studios shows the comedian who was afterwards to become world famous, Charles Chaplin, coming down a railroad track toward the camera with the walk that is now known all over the world, with the same type of shoes, moustache, derby, etc.

P.S.—He got the job.

"My Lady's Stockings"

(Fox-Variety—One Reel)

THIS is an extremely interesting and well done series of pictures showing the start and finish of that commodity so much in evidence in these modern days, my lady's stockings. The start quite logically is with the silk cocoon. Then the process by which the silk is taken from the worms by machinery and transposed into the completed object that you love to look at if not to touch. How runs occur just because a fair motorist might remove her stockings and dip her poor, weary feet in a stream (how they could get tired in an automobile is not told) or more logically how the incessant dancing of the present day might and does wear out the silken coverings for legs and thus make the poor silk worm work overtime. These are the things which are shown. Even though it is a variety and not a program picture, we have our cabaret or night club sequence for good measure. This picture should offer an added incentive (as though one were needed) for using your masculine eyes hereafter and studying the silk covering for feminine legs on the street or stage. Unlike virtue, it will bring its own reward.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Pass the Dumplings"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

INTERESTING especially to me because it means seeing the work of a man who had a desk next to mine many years ago on The Evening Sun, is this two-reel farce comedy by Larry Semon. He was a cartoonist at that time, subsequently going on to the Telegram and then into the moving picture game to make a name and a fortune for himself as a comedian in his own plays. And just recently he has signed to work for Famous Players-Lasky. In this Mack Sennett slap-stick he is credited with the direction but unquestionably also his writing or editorial supervision.

The story is the romance of a boarding-house with Alice Day starred. She is the hired girl of the household. Danny O'Shea is a police officer with the best room in the house. Eddie Quillan is a correspondence-school pugilist. With these ingredients the reader can possibly imagine just the type of fun provided and with the three well-known players to interpret it and Semon to direct, how fast and furious it is.

Quite appropriately it is released January 16th, the third week of so-called "Laugh Month."

"On Guard"

(Pathe's Army Life Serial Starts)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

CULLEN LANDIS for weeks to come will be involved in plots and counter-plots all centering around the United States Army. The latter co-operated with the young star in the taking of the various scenes so there is no question about the authenticity of the backgrounds. Moreover the story was written by an army man, Major Robert Glassburn. Arch Heath directed the scenarization by Paul Fairfax Fuller, Schuyler Grey Productions, Inc., doing the producing. The supporting cast includes well-known movie players, among others Muriel Kingston, Louise Du Pre, Walter Lewis, Tom Blake, Charles Martin and Edward Burns. Walter Strenge did the camera work. The serial will run for ten chapters.

The story is of a gang of international crooks wanting to get possession of a formula for a high explosive. Landis has enlisted under an assumed name because after his return from the World War as a captain, his father has been disgraced and Cullen has been a drifter. About to commit suicide on the West Point Ferry he is saved by the arch conspirator, Walter Lewis, who promises him twenty-five thousand dollars if he will go into the army and carry out his, Lewis' orders. But he is never to do anything that he himself knows is dishonest.

That is the premise of the serial and you can see its possibilities! Landis makes a very effective soldier. His two leading women are attractive and the comedy is taken care of by a hard-boiled sergeant who served with him in France. And for real villainy commend me to Walter Lewis.

"Tit for Tat"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

THE indubitable profit in doing a generous act is the lesson this fable teaches. Also the value of good table manners. Tom Kit is sent breakfastless from the house because of his lack of the latter. He makes friends with a bird being taught to fly. Then a truly foxy fox kidnaps the bird but Tommy effects a rescue. In return in gratitude the bird saves Tommy, who has been captured in turn. The fox is defeated in his dastardly intent and the little bird compensated by Tommy's father with a can of worms when Tommy is brought back. Thus little children of all ages in movie audiences can learn a moral lesson while they are being entertained by this Pathe Fable (crediting Æsop with an assist). What could be fairer? —PAUL THOMPSON.

"Howdy Duke"

(Educational-Lane Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANNE NICHOLS, author and producer of "Abie's Irish Rose," decided to spend some of the millions made by the perennial "Abie" in promoting "Howdy King," by Mark Swan. For what evidently is to be a series of comedies featuring the English musical-comedy acrobat, Lupino Lane, one step down in the social scale was made by having the salutation directed to a duke rather than a king. A peer seeking a matrimonial alliance with a socially ambitious American family comes to this country. While locked in his room by the American suitor for the girl's hand (he has served as a committee of one at the pier) a newsboy with a striking resemblance to the incarcerated duke takes his place. Lane, of course, plays both roles.

At the home of the nouveau riche all sorts of complications ensue. A swimming pool affords the various characters opportunity to do involuntary dives. With trick photography Lane is presented in both roles (of course, the duke escapes from his hotel room to put in appearance at the house) at the same time.

His acrobatic skill naturally serves him well in a farce of this kind. A number of mildly amusing situations are contrived for the exploitation of his ability as an acrobat and as an actor. Supporting him are Wallace Lupino (some sort of relative—the names Lane and Lupino are seemingly interchangeable in England), Kathryn McGuire, Glen Cavender. Directed by Norman Taurog, who wrote the story.

"Hot Cookies"

(Educational-Cameo Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN poking fun at the Scotch, my own remote ancestry. Wallace Lupino, "Toy" Gallagher, Jack Lloyd, George Davis and Elfie Fay are the players working under the direction of Nate Watt who interprets the adventures of one Sandy McNabb. He starts in a restaurant and ends in a boarding house, food being the apparent motif of the classic. Also the weakness of the Scot for pretty women, for it seems that always he is making love to pretty waitresses, or with homelier ones, if food can be obtained thereby.

A school for mechanical suckers gets Sandy in between but only long enough for him to disrupt the school and provide him with a suction sweeper. With this he practically wrecks a passing bus until again he is removed from the scene.

There is enough roughouse involved in this Cameo comedy to satisfy the most exacting.

"Steamer Day"—"Tropical Twilight"

(Educational-Bruce Scenic—One Reel)

YOU arrive with the cameraman at Honolulu and thus see the approach of the land from the steamer's deck. Airplanes and swimmers who come out to greet the tourists, and all the other usual things. A native celebration held most opportunely at the steamer's arrival entertains the travelers and then causes the departure.

And to complete the picture some more of the tropical night scenes. These latter are beautiful but deadly monotonous after you have seen about 'steen hundreds. It is physically impossible to differentiate them, so why try? When the first ones were shown they were novel, and because of their beauty, scored.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Huka Falls-Wales-Animal Photography

(Pathe Review No. 5—One Reel)

"THE Little Niagara of New Zealand" is what the Huka Falls are called and justly. Shots taken at different angles give some idea of the force and sweep of the water. There is no comparison otherwise as they lack the grandeur and majesty of our own most famous falls at Buffalo and many others in the Far West.

"An Enduring Defender" is how the Pathe poet designates Shrewsbury castle in Wales. Taken in Pathecolor the views are most impressive and beautiful. Some idea of the antiquity of the castle may be gained from the fact that in 1283 King Edward I held a parliament there to grant Wales independent government.

"Hunting a la Mode" embraces a series of excellent camera shots in the Canadian Rockies. These are some of the best animals shots I have ever seen. Rocky Mountain goats, deer and bear are caught with telephoto lenses so that they appear as though they were 'on location" within a few feet of the cameraman. Recommended most highly with the balance of this January 30th Pathe Review.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"High Sea Blues"

(Educational-Mermaid Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

INGREDIENTS, a honeymoon couple, another couple, the husband of which is insanely jealous, a drunk, and an irate aunt of the first husband; scene, ship-board; there you have the Educational-Mermaid comedy featuring Al St. John. All the things that you might imagine do happen and others. As though the jealous husband were not sufficient the genial dipsomaniac always manages to gum things up at the psychological moment. For a fitting finale the blowing up of a small boat in which the principal characters have put off from the liner. Unfortunately they carried with them the stick of dynamite which they thought still on the ship.

Whether you are happily married or not this should amuse you. The farceurs are Al St. John, Lucille Hutton, Estelle Bradley, Phil Dunham, Clem Beauchamp, Eva Thatcher. Director, Stephen Roberts. Supervisor, Jack White.

"Felix the Cat in Zoo Logic"

(Educational-Cartoon—One Reel)

PAT SULLIVAN draws a most inspiring moral in this animated cartoon with his cat hero or heroine (like Herriman's Krazy Kat the sex seems to be indeterminate). He releases the inhabitants of a zoo who are lamenting their fate and subjects them to the annoyances that humans are afflicted with. They decide their lot is not such an unhappy one at that and joyously and joyfully trek back to the zoo. Thus even animated cartoons can teach a lesson or point a moral. Such modern blessings as traffic cops (alright and unimportant unless you belong to the elect and own a car), stick-up-men, night-club overcharges, etc., teach the discontented zoo inhabitants that they are by comparison quite well off.

It is good satire and effectively driven home through the drawings, situations and lines.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Thanks for the Boat Ride"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WHILE this is one of the "What Happened to Jane" series it concerns itself more with what happened to Al than to Jane. After getting his license to marry Wanda Wiley they have just time enough to make the boat for their wedding trip, planning a ceremony at sea by the ship's captain. Before this is finally arranged any number of things happen because of the jealousy of another husband, of Wanda, of the ship's captain, etc. Various staterooms with enough doors to equip a French marital farce-comedy are employed for the exit and entry of the characters.

It is filled with an unusual number of laugh-provoking situations from the start to the finish and is played with a dash. Charles Lamont directed the piece, which is scheduled for release February 15th. It is one of the best of the recent releases in this series.

"Big Business"

(Fox-Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FOR the sake of Harold Austin, an umbrella salesman, and his porter, Charles Conklin, the rain came just in time. If it had not there would probably have been no Fox Imperial comedy called "Big Business" but rather "Bad Business" because the two itinerants struck a town that had had no rainfall for two years and they were trying to sell umbrellas. Imagine? Before the heavens opened up and poured forth relief to the parched town, its inhabitants and the "young visitors," things looked pretty bad for the adventurers. Many things happened to make them pessimistic about their immediate future. The negro had no business while posing as a mystic to predict rain. That got the goat of the townspeople. Fleeing in a captive balloon from the infuriated citizenry, the explosion of the balloon brings the rain. And all because Conklin, finding himself in the gas-inflated envelope of the balloon, lights a match to find out where he is.

The sale of the umbrella stock of Harold is only part of the tale. Sally Phipps, falling for the stranger in town, is of equal importance and even greater heart interest.

Many men had a hand in the creation of the farce. First, George Marshall supervised the direction of Mark Sandrich and Leslie Selander. They in turn did what they pleased with the script of another team, Murray Roth and Zion Myers, scenarists and story writers. Jasper Blystone appears as assistant director and all five, presumably, bossed cameraman Jay Turner. Sally Phipps, Harold Austin, Charles Conklin, Grace Goodall and George French "were among those present" as actors of the leading roles.

It is an amusing picture, filled to the brim with bizarre situations and actions.

"High and Dizzy"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY, the stout Universal comedian, has a chance to justify his name in this Stern Brothers-Bluebird comedy. As a justice of the peace who has married Elsie Tarron to a youth illegally, because he has not been sworn in, he pants to the top of the mountain with the girl's father to marry them legally so that there may be no immorality in their mountain-top love-nest. First with a hand-car, which is worked by father and justice, then, when that slides down to the bottom, on an inclined railway car they attain their objective. Morality is saved—on that particular California mountain, anyway.

D. Smith directed the piece, scheduled for February 14. Charles Puffy and Elsie Tarron are featured. The idea is original and the execution rather amusing. It will score.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Should Men Walk Home?"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE obvious answer to the question asked in the title of this comedy crook drama is "Yes, if the man or men have not the chivalry to do what the fair auto driver asks." In this case it is Mabel Normand who asks for and gets the lift and then proceeds to hold up the obliging crook who is driving. But he thwarts her by overspeeding and getting overhauled by a motor-cycle policeman. Mabel gets out of that scrape by vamping the cop. The two crooks decide to join forces. Evidently they admire the manner in which the other has tried to put it over in the auto.

For their first job they invade a reception to steal a valuable brooch. All their time is spent in getting this and sidestepping a movie-comedy detective. They fail at the end and threaten to go straight. But I have my doubts of the reformation which followed the fade-out.

Mabel as the female crook is supported by Creighton Hale, Oliver Henry and Eugene Pallette. Leo McCarey directed; F. Richard Jones supervised and Lambert costumed the same. It has the merit of having a real plot even if it is pretty thin but not much originality is shown in the development of the same. The funniest thing in the whole piece is the preventing the fat man from getting a drink of punch because the conspirators think the brooch may have been scooped up in that particular drink.

"A Hollywood Hero"

(Pathe-Sennett-Turpin—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BEN TURPIN is on a train bound from or to Hollywood (it doesn't matter much which direction he was going if we can believe his eyes). On the train is a woman with a jealous husband and a flair for movie heroes. Ben is one of the latter. The dame discovers he is on the train and invades his compartment; so do other women but their excuse is that the sign over his quarters reads "Women." Their visits accordingly are presumably physiological rather than social. Whatever their motive the train ride ends in a general melee.

By one of those rare coincidences, wife and husband stay in the same hotel as Turpin. Of course he finds his way to their apartment and gives the wife a tenderly inscribed photograph of himself (without the customary dollar fee being asked). Need I go on? In any case Turpin does one of those twenty-story dives from the apartment to the street below. The fall does not straighten out his eyes nor affect him any other way so another two-reeler may be expected within a month.

Bud Jamieson plays the heavy husband and Alma Bennett the philandering wife. Harry Edwards directed under J. A. Waldron's supervision.

It is an amusing Turpin offering and will score with his admirers and others.

"Constantinople"

(Fox Variety—779 feet)

CONSTANTINOPLE is the subject of this Fox variety, released January 23. Few cities lend themselves as readily, both because of historical interest and pictorial effectiveness, as this city of the Turks does to the moving picture camera. Every scene in the city and the surrounding country is of interest. It really marks the place where the Orient and the Occident meet, so that there is a kaleidoscopic scheme of types and colors in the people and the city. Architecturally, also, its possibilities are unlimited, showing the influence of different periods and races on the buildings, including the world-famed mosques.

It should make an acceptable addition to almost any moving picture theatre program.—PAUL THOMPSON.

F.B.O. Will Handle Standard Cinema Comedies

The Film Booking Offices and the Standard Cinema Corporation have entered into an agreement whereby the former has the exclusive distribution rights throughout the entire world to the Standard and Micky McGuire comedy series. In the case of former series, the new agreement is a renewal of the present contract, which provided for twelve 2-reelers in the current season's line-up. These two series will be important factors in the company's short product scheduled for the season of 1927-28, F.B.O. states.

Home Struck

The Chorus Girl with a Domestic Complex

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

PETER MILNE once wrote a story for a magazine's fiction contest; Fanny Hurst's "Mannequin" won the prize and the publicity. The Milne story now re-appears in Evart Adamson's continuity as a moving picture vehicle for diminutive Viola Dana under the F.B.O. aegis. It is a simple but convincing story of the chorus girl who wanted a home rather than a career. Her choice was not a happy one because the young bank clerk whom she married hypothecated a bond to finance one of many jazz parties and she was compelled to return to the stage to win belated stardom. Alan Brooks as an impressionable but at all times human and convincing press agent in love with Viola plays the role of the god-from-the-machine in her storm and stress period. His self-sacrifice even extended to the point of bringing back the errant husband whom the heroine, as is the illogical way of women, continued to love despite his bond theft and his drinking.

At all times holding the spectator's interest with a simple but convincing little story that is plausible, "Home Struck" is well directed and well acted. It is really a play with the evil effects of the "jazz" age as a moral. Miss Dana is unusually well fitted with a role and is admirably supported. It is really one of the best of the recent F.B.O. releases.

The Cast: Viola Dana, Alma Brooks, Rom Gallery, Nigel Barrie, George Irving, Charles Howard. Director, Ralph Ince. Story, Peter Milne. Continuity, Evart Adamson.

THEME: Chorus girl's abdication of stage career for a home. Her disillusionment and return.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Dana and Brooks' interpretations of characters. Simplicity yet convincing character of story. Domestic sequence scenes of star.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Unusual twist to stage story; from stage to home, reversing usual plot.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, 5,613 feet. Released January 23, 1927.
Produced and distributed by F.B.O.

Interesting moments from a current Pathe feature, "The Long Loop"

The Auctioneer

The First of the Belasco-Warfield Plays

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

INTERESTING to the student of the drama because it marked the alliance of David Belasco with that other David—Warfield—after his graduation from Weber and Fields' Music Hall Company and his first starring vehicle is "The Auctioneer" by Charles Klein and Lee Arthur. Followed the even greater success, "The Music Master," with its then record run at the Bijou Theatre in New York. Both have now been made into pictures. L. G. Rigby did the picturization of "The Auctioneer" and Alfred E. Greene directed. In the Warfield role is George Sidney, well known on the legitimate stage and in the movies. You realize seeing the silent drama version how much of the success of the spoken play was due to the charm and personality of Warfield. As a play it is of the most tenuous and elemental, with a plot that is almost negligible. A Jewish immigrant adopts the child of a woman dying at sea. He builds up a successful pawnbroking-auctioneering business on the East Side. The girl falls in love. Her fiance is admitted to a bond-brokerage firm when his prospective father-in-law invests his entire fortune in the firm

An interesting picture has been fashioned from the play, although it does lack the Warfield quality which made it a success originally. Sidney plays convincingly, as do his supporting players; Marion Nixon as the adopted waif, Doris Lloyd as his wife, and Gareth Hughes as the boy. The humor is rather strained with the introduction of a boxing kangaroo, and a Charleston-dancing pawn-broker's clerk and is possibly more apt to create laughs in the hinterland than on Broadway.

The Cast: George Sidney, Marion Nixon, Gareth Hughes, Doris Lloyd, Ward Crane, Sammy Cohen, Claire McDowell. Director, Alfred E. Green. Authors, Lee Arthur and Charles Klein. Scenarist, L. G. Rigby.

THEME: Comedy-drama. East Side (New York) pawnbroker loses fortune invested in bond-house for future son-in-law and regains same.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: East Side atmosphere. Sidney's convincing portrayal of Simon Levi. Excellent supporting cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Belasco, Warfield, Sidney, names and fame.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 5,500 feet. Released January 16.
Produced and distributed by Fox Film Corp.

The Cyclone Cowboy

Slightly Better Than Average Western

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

COUNT this among the better Westerns because, in addition to the usual he-man stuff, there is a slight twist to the plot that brings the cowboy hero to the city for a few sequences where his awkwardness at a social function should draw a few chuckles from your audiences. This jazz-party occurs in the opening reel, but after it is over and friend hero returns to the ranch, the usual stereotype action takes place with the rustlers rustling the cattle, the virago who owns the ranch rustling the help.

It seems Ma Tuttle didn't want her daughter to marry a city slicker, so she, in company with Wally visited the city where daughter is raising high-jinks. Of course Wally falls for the daughter. Mother drags daughter back to the ranch, but with Wally's co-operation daughter holds clandestine meetings with her lover although she begins to doubt whether it is he or Wally in whom she is most interested. Meanwhile the cattle are rustled and Wally effects their recovery only after considerable riding and fighting. He returns and enables the lovers to elope, but at the crucial moment the girl decides Wally is her man.

The action leaves nothing to be desired and the performances of the principal members of the cast are creditable, with especial mention going to the star and Raye Hampton.

The Cast: Wally Wales, Violet Bird, Raye Hampton, Richard Lee, Ann Warrington, George Magrill. Director, Richard Thorpe. Cameraman, Ray Reis.

THEME: Usual Western type of story with slight plot twist in that hero wins girl from city slicker with whom she was infatuated.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Scenes in home in city. Wally Wales riding and fighting. The performance of Raye Hampton.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Wales' popularity. The fact that the whole family can see it.

DRAWING POWER: For the small houses. Should be great treat for the children.

Produced by Action Pictures, Inc., and presented by Lester F. Scott. Released by Pathe.

Length, 4,447 feet. Released January, 1927.

The Long Loop

Leo Maloney Thwarts the Double-Crossers

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

TWO disconcerting things occur in this picture which are apt to distract the reviewer's attention. The first is the appearance for the first hundred feet or so of Leo Maloney, the star who is his own director, wearing a beard that suggests General Ulysses S. Grant. The second, also a hirsute distraction, is afforded by Frederick Dana as "Bobcat" Arnold. He looks so much like Charles Evans Hughes, President for a night, that you think ex-Secretary of State has "gone movie." Disregarding this hairy handicap you discover that Leo Maloney has an interesting Western with some refreshingly new ideas. A gang of crooks has set two adjoining ranches at odds with each other to profit by their mutual misunderstanding. Always notes are being sent signed "The Long Loop" threatening all sorts of reprisals on the other. Each thinks his theoretical enemy is the signer of the notes. Maloney unearths the double-crossers and reconciles the two men, incidentally winning Arnold (Frederick Dana's) daughter's hand. Eugenia Gilbert is worth any amount of hard riding, rough and tumble fights and even a few bullet wounds to win.

Having established his reputation for speed on the draw, the finish is an ingenious one.

The Cast: Leo Maloney (star), Eugenia Gilbert, Frederick Dana, Albert Hart, Tom London, Bud Osborne, Chet Ryan, William M. McCormack, Robert Burns, Dick La Reno, Murdock MacQuarrie. Director, the star. Author, W. D. Hoffman. Scenario, Ford I. Beebe. Cameraman, Vernon Walker.

THEME: Cowboy hero who solves mystery of gang double-crossing two ranchmen, rescues latter and wins daughter of one.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Novelty of plot. Ingenious finale. Good photography. Convincing acting by the players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Same as "different" Western. Maloney's fame and popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 5,934 feet. Released January 9, 1927.

Produced and distributed by Pathe.

Blonde or Brunette

Fair Enough Though Not a Rib Tickler

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A FIRST-RATE farcical idea is treated lightly enough here to pass muster with most anyone who hasn't gone hard-boiled. True, it doesn't carry much of a plot and if it was weighed on the dramatic scales it wouldn't tip any more poundage than a feather. Considering its slight structure it has been made into a fairly enjoyable film—what with its play of "give and take" between the principal characters—all of whom are involved in a triangle.

It is an interior picture with practically all of the action taking place on studio sets—particular attention being paid to a bedroom or two. The original was a French farce and doubtless it has been trimmed of its spice. Yet the carryings-on indicate that not too much of a sop has been tossed on the side of censorship. The central figure is a chap with matrimonial inclinations. He marries a rather sedate blonde who goes modern after the ceremony. And with a divorce on his hands he turns to a strait-laced brunette. Thus he wishes he had stuck to the goldilocks. It is her playful grandmother's job to bring them together again.

The Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Greta Nissen, Arlette Marchal, Mary Carr, Evelyn Sherman, Emile Chautard. Director, Robert Rosson.

THEME: Farce-comedy revolving around a domestic triangle with husband divorcing his blonde wife to take up with a brunette only to go back to the fair charmer in the end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The sparkling performance by Greta Nissen. The easy acting by Menjou. Mary Carr's playful bit. The settings. The incident in the bedroom. The tone of the production.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Affords excellent teaser possibilities around the title. Use snappy campaign in all publicity and advertising. Play up the contrast of feminine leads. Cash in on Menjou's popularity.

DRAWING POWER: For high-class houses. For sophisticated audiences. Title and star should pull 'em in.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, six reels. Released January, 1927.

Heroes of the Night

She Didn't Know What She Wanted

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ALLOWING for a lack of plausibility in the premise—and not allowing it you destroy the whole picture—that two brothers in love with the same girl do not discover for weeks that it is the same girl, "Heroes of the Night" is a mighty interesting melodrama. It seeks to glorify both the police and fire department heroes. To this end the brothers, one serving in each service, do all kinds of brave and meritorious things that would justify Marion Nixon in selecting either for her husband. Unfortunately and femininely she does not seem to be able to make up her mind. They discover that both are in love with the same girl only when they meet at her birthday party when she has agreed to give her answer to the two proposals. And yet they have been courting the same girl for weeks and have taken their mother into their confidence. That is where the lack of plausibility does partly destroy its value. But that possibly is being captious.

Cullen Landis and Rex Lease the brothers, Marion Nixon the girl, and Sarah Padden the mother, all do convincing characterizations. Curiously the two men bear a striking resemblance and could easily be taken for brothers in real life. For backgrounds there are two thrilling fires, the raid on a political club and the capture of a desperate burglar.

The Cast: Cullen Landis and Marion Nixon (featured), Rex Lease, Wheeler Oakman, Sarah Padden, J. P. Lockney, Robert E. Homans, Lois Ingraham. Director, Frank O'Connor. Supervisor, Renaud Hoffman. Story, James J. Tynan. Continuity, F. Oakley Crawford. Cameraman, Ray June.

THEME: Love of two brothers, fireman and policeman, for same girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good acting by principals. Spectacular fire scenes for backgrounds. Elemental but interesting heart-throb story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Double-barrel (police and fire department) picture. Tie-ups with both possible all over country.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,500 feet. Released January 15.
Produced by Gotham. Distributed by Lumas Film Corp.

Wolf's Clothing

Another Arthur Somers Roche Mystery

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IF the movie fan or exhibitor wants a melodrama filled with action, suspense and thrills here it is. Darryl Francis Zanuck has taken Arthur Somers Roche's mystery story and converted it into a moving picture in which Monte Blue is starred and Patsy Ruth Miller featured. It is melodrama that is worthy of the old Bowery classics which made fortunes for Sullivan, Harris and Woods and for industrious playwrights such as Theodore Kremer and Owen Davis. "Something doing every moment" could easily be the slogan, for the scenarist and the director have added to the innumerable situations in the original.

A subway motorman struck by a motor truck and his adventures in his delirium as the insane son of a rich man with blackmailers, pirates, etc., figuring in every reel. Then the awakening to find himself in a hospital and the girl of his dreams a nurse instead of a Park Avenueite. It is rather ingeniously contrived, even though it is anything but high-brow or intellectually stimulating. The star is good, as are most of his support. It will prove good entertainment for the less exacting and surely their number is truly legion. Thus the purpose of the picturization of the Roche mystery should be realized.

The Cast: Monte Blue (star), Patsy Ruth Miller, John Miljan, Douglas Gerrard, Lewis Harvey, Ethan Laidlaw, J. C. Fowler, Walter Rodgers, Arthur Millet, John Webb Dillion, Lee Moran, Paul Panzer, Charles Hasgeli, Jack Cooper, Kala Pasha, Jack Curtis, Edwin Sturgis. Director, Roy del Ruth.

THEME: Melodramatic mystery of an unconscious motorman masquerading as a millionaire (a dream).

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Extravagance of scenes, including New Year's Eve party, and the subway sequence. Well maintained mystery. Amusing twist at end making the whole a dream.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Roche and Blue and Miller's respective fame. Play it up as a "thriller."

DRAWING POWER: Good in the second run houses for family consumption.

Length, 7,068 feet. Released January 15.
Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.

The Sensation Seekers

The Long Island Set Again Shown Up

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AVERY HOPWOOD and Frederic and Fanny Hatton have no monopoly on showing up the "fastness" and iniquity of the Long Island set. Ernest Pascal once wrote (this is program, not personal knowledge) a story called "Egypt," Lois Weber made it into a picture and that her scenario should have full justice done to it directed the same. It deals with Billie Dove, beautiful, spoiled, rich girl, member of Long Island's fast set, who runs counter to Raymond Bloomer, the new, good looking, young pastor of her mother's church. Their falling in love with each other while the parishioners seek for his demotion forms the theme of the drama. For a smashing finale there is a rescue at sea.

Lois Weber has done a good job in both departments and the result is an at all times interesting story well acted by the beauteous Billie, and Gordon and Bloomer. Universal has staged the piece well with convincing sets for the smart country club, the small town church, the parsonage, home of the wealthy chatelaine and the scenes at sea on the private yacht and the rescue at sea in a driving rain storm. While it is a flashy melodramatic story it does hold your interest because the people are all human beings

The Cast: Billie Dove, Huntly Gordon, Raymond Bloomer, Peggy Montgomery, Will Gregory, Helen Gilmore, Phillips Smalley, Edith Yorke, Cora Williams, Sidney Arundel, Clarence Thompson, Nora Cecil, Frances Dale, Lillian Lawrence, Fanchon Frankel, Hazel Howell. Director and scenarist, Lois Weber. Author, Ernest Pascal. Cameraman, Benny Kline.

THEME: Society girl in fast set falls in love with the local minister and reforms.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Many. Convincing story, acting and settings. Latter unusually good. Night club, country club, parsonage, scenes at sea on yacht, thrilling rescue, etc.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the melodrama phases, the scenes at sea, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent in second run and neighborhood houses.

Length, 7,015 feet. Released March 20.
Produced and released by Universal.

Regional News from Correspondents

New York & New Jersey

SINCE the recent action taken by a committee in the New Jersey legislative body to undertake to clarify a chaotic situation brought about by an ever increasing number of alleged violations of the State vice and immorality act, several who are in close touch with the existing state of affairs, seem to be of the opinion that the move for local option will surely go through, and that "it won't be long now" before every community in the State will be deciding for themselves as to whether they want Sunday amusement, or not.

As predicted in these columns last week, there has been a general tightening up of the laws governing the admission of minors to motion picture theatres, and those pertaining to fire exits, film rooms, etc., several infractions having been reported through the medium of the daily newspapers. The S. P. C. C. is also actively engaged in checking up local conditions and a strict enforcement of the rules may be looked for.

The following may cause a general stampede to the local offices of the Merit Film Corporation but here it goes; certainly, it's one for the book!

Morris Epstein, New York and Westchester County sales supervisor of Merit Film Corporation, New York and Northern New Jersey distributors of Chadwick First Division Pictures, is announced by Harry H. Thomas, vice-president and general manager of the company, as the first bonus winner of the current season. The bonus system, which has been in vogue with Merit for several years, provides one thousand dollar bonuses for every sales supervisor who attains his territorial quota of sales. In addition to this bonus, all winners share in a percentage of receipts above their quotas.

Morris Epstein, one of the best-known salesmen in the New York territory, has adopted an unique plan of disposing of his bonus. Believing that it has been possible for him to attain his quota so early in the season only through the hearty cooperation of every associate in the exchange, he has arranged to distribute the major part of his thousand dollars with his workers. All territorial supervisors, salesmen, bookers, stenographers, poster room workers and other employees will share in the distribution of seven hundred twenty-five dollars. Epstein, who won the thousand dollars, is two hundred seventy-five dollars richer for his remarkable record.

Invitations have been issued by the Somerset Theatre Corporation, 12 Hamilton Street, Bound Brook, N.J., for the premiere performance of the Brook Theatre, Wednesday evening, January 19, at 7:15 P.M.

A special guest train will leave the foot of Liberty Street, New York City, on Wednesday at 5:50 P.M., in order to provide accommodations for those who live in Manhattan and nearby points.

Arriving at the Bound Brook Theatre, guests will be welcomed by a committee consisting of Mayor Charles F. Fetterly, Horatio Negus, Samuel Gottlieb and Stephen O'Higgins.

The first night of the Bound Brook was originally set for January 12, but had to be postponed for unavoidable reasons.

Caught between two trucks purported to be disputing the right of way on Seventh Avenue last Thursday in the neighborhood of Film Row, New York City, Eddie Seider of the firm of Moley & Seider, engaged in the business of supplying acts to neighborhood theatres, was painfully bruised and has since been confined to his home. However, at the offices of the Prudential Film Delivery, it was reported that Mr. Seider was doing nicely and would soon return to his duties.

Charlie Stombaugh, manager of the Pathe-New Jersey branch exchange, is said to have made especial preparation for the accommodation of his New Jersey friends who will attend the Pathe Ball at the Hotel Roosevelt on Saturday evening, February 12, when a midnight buffet supper will be served. Vincent Lopez and his orchestra will supply the music.

When Stanley Sobelson opens his new Elmora Theatre, El Mora, N.J., on the night of February 12, or thereabouts, he will undoubtedly spring something new in that neck of the woods in the way of entertainment for the younger element. An unusually large foyer has been provided and with the additional space on the stage, these two places will be utilized for dancing between the hours of six and seven and eleven and twelve P.M. The theatre orchestra will provide the music.

Damage sustained by the Universal Theatre (sometimes called the Hertz), Bowery, near Canal Street, New York City, in a film room blaze on January 10, was not as serious as reported, that house having opened again on Saturday last.

Two of the A. H. Schwartz circuit managers have figured in a recent shift of positions. Harry Lewis, of the Albemarle, Brooklyn, has moved to the new Mayfair, while the Mayfair's former manager, M. A. Cooper, will look after things at the Albemarle.

A recent theatre sale in Brooklyn has to do with the Newkirk, Newkirk Avenue and East Sixteenth Street. J. Benas, owner, has turned it over to Exhibitor McCormack who also operates the Miriam Theatre, Coney Island Avenue and Avenue U.

A theatre manager over in the Broadway section of Brooklyn is said to be on the eve of folding his tent and seeking another neighborhood where life will offer something different than a competitive program of high-class vaudeville and pictures at matinee prices of ten, fifteen and twenty-five.

Although reported as still being at his post as manager of the Filmland Theatre, Church and Nostrand avenues, Brooklyn, it is now reported that Fred Dollinger has resigned from his duties at that house.

H. Roth, one of the Roth Brothers of Morristown and Summit, N.J., is in order for congratulations these days. The report is, that an eight-pound boy has arrived in the Roth household.

Friends of Herman Silverman, assistant booker at the Pathe exchange, will regret to hear that he has recently lost his mother.

Two other motion picture theatres which will open during the month of January are the Prospect, Flushing, L.I., and the Stanley-Fabian company's new Hudson Theatre, Kearney, N.J.

The Flushing house seats 2,000, main floor and balcony, and will probably include vaudeville in its program. This house is scheduled for January 27. The Kearney theatre will open on January 22.

Looking back over his records for 1926, Joe Hornstein, Eastern division manager for the National Theatre Supply Company, reports that over 112 new theatres opened in this district. Included among equipment furnished to these houses were, 327 Simplex projectors, 450 Peerless lamps, 190 Hertner transverters and 175 Dalite screens.

Joe Cifre, manager of the Boston National Theatre Supply branch, paid a recent visit to Joe Hornstein.

After being closed for the past eight months, during which time extensive alterations were made, Henry Suchman's Golden Rule Theatre, 121 Rivington Street, New York City, will be reopened.

When Matthew Chrystmos, of Chrisedge Theatres, Inc., opens his new Wakefield Theatre, White Plains Avenue, Bronx, on Friday evening, January 28th, the headquarters of this circuit now located at 1650 Broadway, will be moved to the new house.

Quite a sensation recently occurred in the local Pathe branch exchange when Miss Hulda Greske, who officiates as secretary to Manager William Raynor, greeted her sweetheart on his return from Florida. The entire personnel showered congratulations upon the atractive Miss Greske.

William Shields, for the past several months connected with the Pathe feature sales department in New Jersey territory, has recently resigned and will shortly announce a new position.

Debates on the whys and wherefores of the Eighteenth amendment have ceased to be a novelty except when two such authorities as Secretary Cronin of the Film Board of Trade and Al. Sawtelle, Pathe non-theatrical manager get together. Mr. Cronin is known to have unusually positive ideas on the subject, while Mr. Sawtelle's business associations have not entirely restrained that gentleman from gathering a few facts for the opposition.

Al Moley, of Moley and Seider, and the Prudential Film Delivery, is all pepped up these days over a new "tab act" now in the process of rehearsal. It will be ready in about a week.

David Lustig, well known among local exhibitors as a capable manager, has been transferred from the Mecca Theatre at Avenue A and 14th Street to the Apollo Theatre, Delancey and Clinton streets. Blinderman and Steiner own and operate both houses.

Chas. Trippi, who recently disposed of his Washington-5th Avenue Theatre, Brooklyn, to A. Abramowitz, will continue to be associated with the local motion picture trade and will look after the booking for the Park, Palace and Navy theatres, all in the Borough Hall section of Brooklyn.

STORAGE OF MOTION PICTURE FILMS

Albany

WILLIAM SMALLEY, of Cooperstown, N. Y., one time an employee of a milk station and today the owner of fifteen or sixteen motion picture theatres, has been presented with a beautiful Masonic ring set with a large diamond, the gift coming from employees of the entire circuit. To even up matters, Mr. Smalley has presented to the 381 employees of his circuit, gold pieces ranging from ten to twenty dollars.

Following his usual custom, Mr. Smalley entertained the staff at the headquarters in Cooperstown with a recent dinner with covers laid for eighteen. There were present: Mr. Smalley, Miss Hazel Smith, Mrs. Mary Elsworth, Mr. and Mrs. William Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Rose, and son; Kenneth Woodbeck, Larry Doran, L. A. Fontaine, Kermit Armstrong, Miss Florence Holmes, Mrs. A. Mauduit, Miss Marjorie Barrett and Albert Bothner.

Maurice A. Chase, president of Chase Pictures Corp., and Red Seal film exchange of Buffalo, has installed a new manager in his Albany office now located at 1046 Broadway. Boris Samsanoff took up his new post on January 10 and although a new man in this territory, in the short space of time has made many friends among the exhibitors.

There was a real welcome in Albany last week for Julius Singer and his white carnation. Mr. Singer arrived in town and took over the management of the Universal exchange, although it is quite possible that later on someone else may be named and Mr. Singer will return to New York.

Sternberg and Sobal, who run the Avon in Boonville, made their first appearance along Film Row last week on a buying expedition. They are newcomers and were obliged to introduce themselves at nearly all the exchanges.

H. O. Worden, the new manager at the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, has created a very favorable impression among exhibitors. Mr. Worden is planning to move his family here as soon as he can find a suitable apartment. Alec Weismann, who resigned as local manager, is now doing special work for the company in the Buffalo territory.

L. J. Hacking, of Boston, district manager for the Producers Distributing Company, and C. W. Sawin, also of Boston and district representative, dropped off in Albany during the week, on their way West for a conference with Alec Herman, the local representative.

George Seed, brother of Harry, resigned last week as shipper at Warner Brothers' exchange, and is said to have returned to New York.

Ed Hochstim, salesman at the First National exchange, and very well known over the territory, will be married on January 23 at Hudson, to a young lady residing in that city.

While Harry Lazarus, of Kingston, was visiting several of the exchanges along Film Row last week, he imparted the information that the theatre he is erecting in that city, will be formally opened on May 15, if present plans hold good.

John Bulwinkel, local manager for First National, journeyed up to Syracuse during the week, meeting F. J. McCarthy, manager of the Buffalo exchange, and going over a number of matters with him.

J. W. Mann, who owns the Hollywood Theatre in East Arlington, Vt., has spent considerable money of late in remodeling his house, and the theatre will reopen in the very near future.

Northern headquarters of the Schine circuit will continue to be located in Ogdensburg, despite the fact that one of the Watertown newspapers carried the story last week to the effect that that city would shortly house the headquarters of the circuit.

The State Theatre in Middletown, observed its fifth anniversary last week, and did it in a way that attracted capacity audiences every afternoon and evening. The theatre uses a fourteen-piece orchestra and is one of the best managed houses in that part of the state.

Al Bothner, formerly of Troy, who went with Bill Smalley a year or two ago, and later with the Schine circuit, is once more back with the Smalley interests, assisting with the booking and incidentally looking after the exploitation of all houses.

Kenneth Mosher, assitant manager of the Quirk in Fulton, is quite some orator, according to all reports. Mr. Mosher presided as toastmaster at the annual dinner dance given by the Quirk management to the employees of the theatre, and made a distinct impression.

George A. Toupin, a business man of Saranac Lake, has succeeded Dave Seymour as manager of the Pontiac Theatre in that village.

Charles Sesonke, of Watertown, was called to New York City recently through the death of his father-in-law, who had been ill for some little time at his home in the Catskills.

Rae Candee and Howard Miller are no longer connected with the Robbins' circuit in Utica, owing to the acquisition of the houses by the Schine brothers.

Samuel Dean, who runs the Hotel Majestic in Utica, is a great favorite with the film salesmen these days and as a result his hotel has become the meeting place not only of the salesmen but exchange managers whenever they hit the city.

Sam Goldstein, of Springfield, Mass., was in town last Saturday, booking for his Utica house.

Congratulations to George Dwore, who has just forsaken the ranks of bachelorhood, and who, with his bride, is snugly ensconced in a little bungalow in Schenectady. Mr. Dwore and his father handle the Cameo and the Capitol theatres in that city.

A. S. Thornton, of Williamstown, was in town last week.

A large electric sign is being erected in front of the Smalley Theatre in Johnstown, the sign spelling the name "Smalley" and at the same time presenting in color the name of the current attraction.

Mrs. Sequin, owner of the New Liberty Theatre in Rouses Point, is recuperating in a hospital from an operation.

Under a recent arrangement, all publicity from the Albany Film Board of Trade will henceforth be given out by H. H. Goldstein, who has been named as chairman of the publicity committee, succeeding Alec Weismann.

According to reports, the Kallet boys of Oneida are now negotiating with A. W. Goodman, of Utica, for the Orpheum Theatre as a subsequent run house.

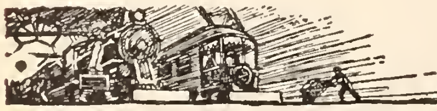
Joe Schleiger has resigned as booker at the F. B. O. exchange in Albany, and has accepted a similar position with Jack Krause, the new manager of Tiffany's Albany exchange.

Mrs. Mary Omelia, booker at the Bond exchange, has been confined to her home several days with a hard cold. John Marshall, owner of the Bridge Theatre in Ausable Forks, was in Albany last week, dating up pictures, stopping over on his way to New York City.

Howard Morgan, Albany manager for Educational, will leave in March for the West Coast with other branch managers. Max Stehl, from the home office of Educational, stopped over in Albany one day last week and spent the afternoon with Mr. Morgan.

H. H. Goldstein, local manager for Paramount, has been presented with a beautiful traveling bag by his office employees.

Henry Frieder, of Hudson, has been a busy man of late, now that Walter Suckno is no longer doing the booking and his advertising. The other day Mr. Frieder was up to his neck in work laying out his cuts and mats for his newspaper advertising, and at the same time trying to look after his theatre.



Kansas City

THE steel work of the new $4,000,000 Loew's Midland Theatre at Thirteenth Street and Baltimore Avenue, Kansas City, is nearing completion. The house, when completed, will seat 4,200. Daily newspapers this week featured stories on the fact that several of the steel workers, by working over-time on Sundays, made their week's pay amount to $230 each.

Mrs. Myra Williams Jarrell, who last year was appointed inspector of the Kansas Censorship Board of Motion Pictures by Governor Paulen, resigned Monday. She found the travel over the State irksome and decided to quit, she said.

For the first time in the history of the event, the Kansas inaugural and reception was filmed this week and the films will be shown over the State.

The Indiana Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, has been purchased by George A. Costa from Harrison G. Daly and James H. McGrath for $24,500. Mr. Costa formerly operated the Mayfield Theatre, suburban house of Kansas City. The Indiana Theatre seats 800 persons.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: J. D. Ebersole, Hamilton, Mo.; I. W. Maple, Ridgeway, Mo.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kans.; Glenn Dickinson, Dickinson Enterprises, Lawrence, Kans.; G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kans.

Jack Langan's "Movie Row Atheltic Club" at Kansas City, which consists of a set of boxing gloves, a punching bag and other equipment, is gaining clients steadily. More than one bloody lip and black eye has made a hasty exit towards the street in the last week.

F. P. Hill, home office auditor for Fox, was a Kansas City visitor this week, as was A. H. Fischer, divisional manager for Warner Bros.

Film Row extended its sympathy this week to C. A. Schultz, P.D.C. branch manager, and Mrs. Schultz, whose 3-day-old baby died unexpectedly.

Ed Solig, booker at the Warner Bros. branch, has issued a general ultimatum to the effect that exhibitors who have been accustomed to calling on him at wee hours of the night will not find him in his room in the future. He has moved to the Mayfair Hotel.

Both E. C. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., and "Red" Jones, Educational manager, were hustling for more contracts in the territory this week.

Arthur Schmidt, First National exploiteer in the Kansas City territory of late, has returned to New York.

The fact that Russell Borg, Educational booker, is leading all bookers of the Educational organization, keeps him busy explaining daily to friends "How I do it."

South East

FRED POLLOCK has resigned as manager of the Metro-Goldwyn branch at this point and has been succeeded by Mr. Drew, of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Pollock and his wife left for New York immediately after his severing connections with the Metro branch.

J. W. Kerr, owner of the Elco Theatre, Charleston, S.C., was a Charlotte visitor the past week. Mr. Kerr stopped over on his return from Boston where he had been purchasing shoes, as Mr. Kerr, aside from being a theatre owner is one of the largest shoe merchants in Charleston.

C. Prosser, of the Prosser Theatre, Johnsonville, S.C., paid Charlotte a visit the past week.

Charles Roth, of Asheville, who is owner of the Eagle Theatre, colored, was along Film Row the past week.

N. L. Royster, general manager of the Piedmont Amusement Company's Auditorium Theatre, Winston-Salem, N.C., also secretary of the M.P.T.O. of North Carolina, was taken suddenly ill enroute from Winston-Salem to Charlotte to attend meeting of the arbitration board. On arrival of the train in Charlotte, Mr. Royster was immediately moved to St. Peter's Hospital. He has not been able to leave his bed up to the present time. Nat has been in a very serious condition, but is mending very fast.

The arbitration board of the Charlotte territory has arranged to hold one meeting a month. The members feel they can handle all the cases coming before the board at this time at one meeting each month. This sounds good for the Charlotte territory, when an arbitration board does not have sufficient cases everyone must be behaving themselves.

E. F. Dardine, manager of the Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., Charlotte, has been called to Atlanta for a sales conference.

The Royal, a new colored theatre in Charlotte, has opened its doors. F. A. Abbott, formerly manager of the Broadway for R. D. Craver, and who afterwards was connected with the Exhibitors Supply Company, is manager. This is an up-to-date theatre, seating about 400.

H. F. Kincey, general manager of the Piedmont Theatres, Inc., states the new theatre, the Almo, will open its doors to the public on January 15th.

Mrs. C. A. Anderson, wife of Mr. C. A. Anderson, salesman for Universal, is spending six weeks in Chicago visiting her parents.

Exhibitor Sears, of the Palace Theatre, Winnesboro, S.C., was a Charlotte visitor the past week.

Rudolph Berger, manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office at Washington, D.C., was a Charlotte visitor the past week. Mr. Berger came here in the interest of installing Mr. Drew, the new manager of the Charlotte branch. Berger was formerly manager of the Charlotte branch.

Seattle

THE annual banquet of the Northwest Film Board of Trade of Seattle attended by all managers, salesmen and bookers of the National and State Right offices, was held last week at the Gowman Hotel in the Northwest city, and with the exception of two managers who were out of town it represented a 100 per cent attendance from Seattle's Film Row. George M. Ballantine, Fox branch manager and president of the Film Board, acted as toastmaster, and a special guest of honor was Frank Harris, special representative for Harold Lloyd, who was visiting in Seattle at the time.

During the evening, various phases of the industry were discussed by branch managers. George P. Endert, Famous Players-Lasky executive, spoke on "Clean Salesmanship"; A. H. Huot, Northwest division manager for F.B.O., discussed "The Credit Committee"; Dave Frazer of Producers' Distributing Corporation explained "Arbitration and the Functioning of the Board of Arbitration"; Jack Bower, First National manager, spoke on behalf of all exchanges relative to "Damaged Prints"; Charles W. Harden of United Artists discussed "Accessories as Aids to Exploitation"; and Clarence Hill spoke on "The Salesman's Angle."

Following the banquet, the guests contributed a substantial sum of money to the benefit performance being given for A. B. Carter, owner and manager of the Rose Theatre, Rosalia, Wash., who has been seriously ill for several months.

John Hamrick, owner and general manager of the Hamrick circuit of motion picture houses in Seattle, Portland and Tacoma, returned to his local headquarters last week after a brief trip to his Blue Mouse Theatres in the distant cities. It was Hamrick's first jaunt around the circuit since his return from New York some weeks ago, and his first trip to Portland in several months. During his visit in Portland he conferred with the Portland Board of Motion Picture Censors relative to the exhibition of several pictures which have played the Washington territory but were held up in Oregon. The pictures, with a few eliminations, have since been passed by the Board.

B. F. Shearer, manager of the Interior Decorating Department of the National Theatre Supply Company in the West, left last week for the East Coast where he was to confer with National officials. He will return via Salt Lake City and Denver, where he will establish offices. General headquarters will be maintained in this city.

Mat Aparton, manager of the local Universal exchange, and Jimmy Beale, Universal salesman, last week had the pleasure of splitting a substantial check from the home office, the prize for winning the Western Division's Laemmle Celebration contest. Not to be outdone, Billy Green, another of Mr. Aparton's road men, received a gold button from Universal headquarters in recognition of his feat of topping the quota list of salesmen for three weeks.

Frank Harris, former Western district manager for Pathe, and now a special representative for Harold Lloyd productions, spent last week in this city conferring with Manager George P. Endert of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange. Mr. Harris is at present on a tour of the entire Pacific Coast territory.

Two visitors from Portland were welcomed by the inhabitants of the local Film Row last week. Bill Drummond, Pathe's feature sales manager in the Rose City, visited Manager L. A. Samuelson's local Pathe office, and F. W. Talbert, booker at Manager George E. Jackson's Portland Universal branch office, renewed acquaintances with many of his friends at Universal here.

Frank Hewett, formerly connected with the American Theatre at Hillman City, last week opened his new Wildwood Theatre, located at 7919 Rainier Avenue, in this city. The Wildwood is a very small suburban house, seating only 350 persons, but it is said to be remarkably complete in every detail and caters to a thriving neighborhood.

Ed Hallberg, manager of the Mt. Vernon Theatre at Mt. Vernon, Wash., spent a short time on Film Row last week, hobbling around with the aid of a cane. He has just recovered from a broken ankle, a result of a ball game at Mt. Vernon several weeks ago, when he accidentally stepped into a hole in the ground.

Another invalid who made his first appearance on the Row for some time was Waldo Ives, the popular young owner of the Empire Theatre in Anacortes. Mr. Ives, formerly connected with the Famous Players-Lasky exchange here, has been confined to his home in this city for several months, but is very much improved at present and hopes soon to be able to return to active duty in Anacortes.

Edwin Hitchcock, former manager of the Liberty Theatre in Portland, was expected to arrive in Seattle this week to perfect plans for the opening of the United Artists Theatre, formerly the Liberty Theatre, the latter part of this month. He is at present enjoying a brief honeymoon trip. following his marriage in Portland a few weeks ago.

A. E. Ralston, manager of the Film Booking Offices exchange in Vancouver, B.C., was a visitor at Manager Art Huot's local F.B.O. branch last week.

Frank Graham, formerly connected with the theatre industry in Centralia and Chenalis, last week announced that he had purchased the Mission Theatre and Washington Theatre in Auburn, Wash., from Walter Kraft. The purchase included the house, equipment and property in the case of the Mission, and the house, equipment and lease in the case of the Washington Theatre. The deal was handled by Paul Aust, former Selznick manager in this territory, and now in the theatre brokerage firm of Aust and Black.

Central Penn

TWENTY-TWO members of the Pittsburgh organization of motion picture projectionists, accompanied by four Pittsburgh exhibitors, hired a special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad and went to Harrisburg, a distance of 200 miles, and back, to be present at the State capitol on January 4, when Clayton A. Dietrich, business agent of the projectionists' union, took the oath of office as a member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. This took the majority of the regular machine operators out of Pittsburgh for the day, but crippling of the Pittsburgh theatres was avoided by obtaining the service of substitutes.

A farewell dinner was given in the Elks' Club, Pottstown, in honor of Luke Gring, who relinquished the management of several theatres controlled by the Bennethum interests in Pottstown, about the first of the year, to move to Chambersburg where he is part owner and manager of a new $200,000 motion picture house. During the dinner, Mr. Gring and Ralph Binns, manager of Educational's exchange in Washington, and who was one of the dinner guests, were "arrested" as a joke, by the city police and taken to the Pottstown jail, despite the protests of the other diners. They were promptly released through a side door of the jail and were found seated at the table again when the others returned to the banquet hall.

Construction work is being rushed on the new 3,000-seat theatre which the Chamberlain Amusement Company is erecting in Pottsville. About the first of the year the contractors obtained a ninety-day permit to obstruct several streets with building material, in the neighborhood of the new structure, as a means of speeding building operations. It will be one of the largest modern theatres in Pennsylvania outside of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Miss Ada Dickinson, an accomplished Harrisburg musician, formerly an assistant organist at Loew's Regent Theatre, in that city, is now filling a position as organist at Wilmer & Vincent's Colonial Theatre, there.

The Stanley interests, which recently acquired the Hamilton and Capitol theatres, Lancaster, from Mr. and Mrs. George M. Krupa, have employed the two daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Krupa as organists in the theatres. A son-in-law of the Krupas is manager of the Capitol.

Peter Maguzza, who was manager of the Chestnut Street Opera House, a Sunbury motion picture theatre, recently purchased by the Comerford Amusement Company, has relinquished his duties there and become manager of the Liberty Theatre, recently bought by William Petroplous, in Hazleton. It is reported that the Liberty will ultimately come under Comerford control. The destinies of the Chestnut Street Opera House, Sunbury, are now under the control of Jas. M. Blanchard, as manager. Mr. Blanchard directs half a dozen Comerford theatres in Sunbury and adjacent towns.

Hazleton newspapers are authority for a statement that M. H. Goodman, who recently resigned as manager of the Feeley Theatre, Hazleton, has taken title to a plot of ground near the Hotel Loughran, in that city, and plans to erect there a motion picture theatre with seating capacity of 1,200. He is believed to have acted for a corporation, the backers of which were not disclosed. It is expected the theatre will be opened early in the summer.

Denver

ALBERT KAUFMAN has been appointed the new manager of the America Theatre, Universal's first run Denver amusement house. Mr. Kaufman assumes his new duties immediately. He comes as a thoroughly experienced and widely known theatre man, having successfully held varied and responsible positions. He comes to Denver directly from the Cameo Theatre of Pittsburgh, which he managed for Universal. Mr. Kaufman has been the personal publicity representative of D. W. Griffith as well as publicity representative for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the East. Last year he put on a monster Greater Movie Season campaign in Cleveland for the Hays Organization. Bruce D. Hooten, whom Mr. Kaufman succeeds as manager of the America, leaves Wednesday for the East, where he will engage in exploitation work.

Sidney D. Weisbaum, manager of the Denver branch of Film Booking Offices of America, was elected president of the Denver Film Board of Trade last Monday. Mr. Weisbaum was elected without opposition, it being the unanimous opinion of the membership that no better selection could be made considering qualifications of experience as a manager, activities as a Board member and familiarity with Film Board of Trade work. The Denver Film Board of Trade should experience one of its most successful years under the leadership of Sid Weisbaum. Chas. R. Gilmour was elected Vice-President and Duke W. Dunbar was designated as Secretary, Treasurer, and Counsel for the Board. The following members were elected to serve on the Board of Arbitration: A. G. Edwards, Producers; A. P. Des Moines

A. G. STOLTE, who is theatre supervisor for the larger of the A. H. Blank theatres, just returned from the weekend at Davenport where he installed a new manager at the Columbia Theatre there. This theatre was exchanged by the Orpheum interests with Mr. Blank for his house, the Capitol. Lawrence Wagner, who was installed as manager of the Columbia for Mr. Blank comes from one of the Blank houses at Fort Dodge, the Rialto. Succeeding Mr. Wagner at the Rialto is Mr. Stoneberg, who was assistant manager for the Capitol Theatre in Des Moines. No new assistant for Mr. Cunningham, manager of the Capitol in Des Moines, has been selected.

Among those who went down from Des Moines to attend the opening of the Grand Theatre at Greenfield, which was built by George Misner, were Lew Morgans, representing Famous Players, and A. E. Thiele, office manager for the National Theatre Supply Company. The report is that this theatre is a wonderful little house and it is doubted whether there is another theatre in the southern part of the State that can beat it. Mr. Misner spent close to $25,000 on his theatre, of which he is justly proud.

The Columbia Theatre at Worthington has changed hands. Tobin and Kraus, who were the former owners, sold to George Klein. A few changes will be made in the theatre.

Baltimore

FRANK CASSIDY has succeeded H. Irving North as manager of Warners' Metropolitan Theatre here. Mr. Cassidy was formerly with the Colony Theatre, New York, and prior to that was with the Al. B. Barnes shows. Mr. North has gone to Miami, Fla., for a rest.

One of the nicest things done in Baltimore by a moving picture exhibitor for the benefit of the poor was accomplished by Julius Goodman, proprietor of the Ideal Theatre, Hampden, here, who ran a slide before the Christmas holidays announcing he wished to give out 25 Christmas dinner baskets to poor but deserving families.

The names and addresses of the families were to be handed in at the box office. Before he was finished he had delivered 42 baskets which cost him $4.90 each. He delivered them personally in his own limousine.

The Brodie Theatre, 1118 Light Street, here, has been leased by Ruben Soltz from Joseph Brodie for a period of ten years. Mr. Soltz is making some improvements and has changed the name to Majestic.

Charles Forrester, formerly associated with Sid Garuman in Los Angeles, Cal., has succeeded M. H. Rogers as manager of the Boulevard Theatre here operated by Harry Schwalbe. Mr. Rogers has been transferred to manage a theatre in Annapolis, Md., also owned by Mr. Schwalbe.

Mischa Guterson, who conducted the orchestra at the Embassy Theatre for some weeks, has become associated with the Academy of Music in New York.

Ben Guterson, son of the orchestra leader, who has been associated with the Embassy here also, has been transferred to the new Savoy Theatre, Bethlehem, Pa.

The home of Frank Price, Jr., assistant to Guy Wonders, manager of the Rivoli Theatre here, was badly damaged by fire recently. Mr. Price and his family escaped without injury. They have been residing in a friend's home since the fire while the damage is being repaired.

Due to a small fire in the projection room of the Ideal Theatre, Hampden, here, recently, Julius Goodman, manager of that house, has replaced the old machines by two new Simplex machines.

Louis Rome, general manager of the Associated Theatres, Inc., here, controlling the Rialto, Broadway, Capitol and Apollo, has been sick in bed at his home here for ten days with grippe.

The Savoy Theatre, Washington, D.C., a Stanley-Crandell house, has been entirely renovated and improved.

The Empire Theatre Building, Frederick, Md., has been purchased from the Tri-State Theatre Circuit of Piedmont, Va., by the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Frederick. The price was about $40,000, it is said.

"Ben-Hur" has just finished a run of four weeks at Ford's Theatre here, a legitimated house. It played to excellent attendance.

Fred Steele is now covering the Eastern Shore of Maryland for Famous Players-Lasky.

The Globe Theatre, Berlin, Md., has been taken over by Tuyford and Tuyford.

The Robley Theatre, Robley, W.Va., has been closed.

Buffalo

THE new North Main Theatre which the Sehine Theatrical Corporation has leased, is expected to open about February 15. The house, which is one of the most attractive community houses in town, is located at Main and West Northrup streets. It is in Spanish architecture.

A series of free moving picture shows, featuring the use and manufacture of ground limestone, have been arranged by the Wyoming County Farm Bureau for the first week in February in the following towns: Arcade, Johnsonburg, North Java, La Grange and Rock Glen.

Reports from Loew's Buffalo Theatres, Inc., show that the net income for 1926 after taxes were paid was $64,593.96. This income is equal to $5 a share on the preferred stock.

A panic was narrowly averted in the Bellevue Theatre in Niagara Falls the evening of January 10. when a film caught fire in the booth. A lively tune by the orchestra and a speech of assurance by the manager saved the situation. The theatre was filled with the usual Sunday night audience when someone cried "fire." The crowd started to leave the house in a panic. The quick action of the orchestra and management caused the excitement to subside. No one was injured. The operator extinguished the blaze with chemicals. Damage was slight.

Otto Siegel, one of the veteran film salesmen in this neck of the woods, has resigned from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer staff with which he has been connected for many years.

Charles N. Johnston has resigned from the sales staff of the Producers Distributing Corporation. It is understood that he is to become the manager of a new house being completed in Lackawana by the Western New York Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. The house will open in a few weeks.

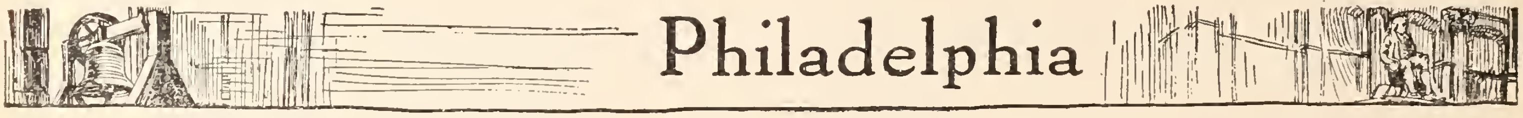
The gross estate of the late William Berinstein of Elmira, was $617,390.49, according to an accounting filed in Chemung county surrogate's office. The net estate, $342,609.16 goes, for the most part, to Ben and Harry Berinstein, managers of the Berinstein theatres, and two sisters.

The new Statler Theatre in Delaware Avenue, Buffalo, will be completed early next summer, according to F. M. Statler. While plans have been made for a subway from the Hotel Statler to the theatre, they are only tentative, said Mr. Statler.

Alfred Voas, 192 Laurel Street, accompanied by his wife, went to a Main Street motion picture theatre on a recent Sunday. The place, it is claimed, was so crowded that the management allowed only ten persons to enter at a time. Voas happened to be the tenth person, his wife, the eleventh. Patrolman Skarin was detailed at the theatre to regulate traffic and keep order. Voas was charged with violating section 722 of the penal law. After hearing the evidence, Judge Stanart promptly dismissed the charge.

Herbert Straub, conductor of the Shea Buffalo symphony orchestra, has composed a march which he has entitled "The Shea Buffalo March," which was written in honor of the theatre's first birthday anniversary. Mr. Straub has dedicated the composition to Michael Shea and Vincent R. McFaul. Shea's Buffalo celebrated its first anniversary the week of January 16th with a gala array of attractions.

G. K. Rudolph of the Fox publicity forces was in town the other day and took time to greet his many friends along newspaper and exchange rows. The report now is that the new Fox Theatre in Main Street will open about June.



Philadelphia

H. J. SCHAD. former president of the M.P.T.O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, sailed January 19 from New York on the S.S. California for a five-months' trip around the world. He is accompanied by Mrs. Schad, and after touching at the West Indies, they will go through the Panama Canal, visit the Philippines, China, Japan, India and then enter the Mediterranean by way of the Suez Canal. After visiting various Mediterranean ports, they will go to Paris and London and expect to return to New York the latter part of June. Prior to his departure, Mr. Schad was tendered a dinner by members of the M. P. T. O. Board of Managers and was presented with diamond-studded cuff links as an expression of their appreciation of the work he has done in the interests of theatre owners in this territory during the two years he has headed the organization.

John J. Kremer has been appointed manager of the Stanley Company's Arcadia Theatre at 16th and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, succeeding the late Garabed A. Donjian. Mr. Kremer was formerly assistant manager of the Karlton Theatre, Broad and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia.

The Ritz Theatre, Marshall and Hunting Park avenues, Philadelphia, has recently been sold by Jacob Karr to the Borowsky interests, which operate a chain of neighborhood houses in this city, for a consideration said to be approximately $90,000. The Ritz Theatre was at one time owned by David Barrist and C. H. Goodwin and since its sale to Mr. Karr has been under the management of I. Perlin.

A fire that for a time threatened to assume serious proportions and even to wipe out a large portion of Motion Picture Row, gutted the upper floors of the building at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and Vine streets. The fire started late at night in the building adjoining the Fox Exchange and several alarms were sounded before firemen finally had the blaze under control. The fire was of unknown origin and had it spread through a small partition separating the two parts of the same building, it would have reached into the Pathe, Metro-Goldwyn, and Vitagraph exchanges, in addition to the Fox office. The Board of Censors is also located in the same building and thousands of reels of film were within less than fifty yards of where firemen finally had the flames under control.

The Earle Theatre, Atlantic City, a Stanley house which opened several months ago with a straight picture policy, will inaugurate a semi-weekly change of five acts and vaudeville effective January 22nd. The theatre will be booked by Harold Kemp through the Keith-Albee Exchange in New York.

The Stanley Company has announced its intention of building a modern 1800-seat theatre in the heart of the shopping district of Drexel Hill, a suburb of Philadelphia. The theatre will house several stores in addition to the auditorium and the total cost will be approximately $1,000,000.

David Segal, formerly connected with Penn Productions and later with the De Luxe Exchange in the capacity of special representative, has resigned and will affiliate with another large distributing company in this territory.

Atlanta'

TWENTY cases were heard and disposed of at the meeting of the Joint Board of Arbitration, of which C. L. Peavy is chairman, which was held Tuesday in the offices of the board at 101 Marietta Street. This was a postponed meeting. The board is composed of three exhibitors and three exchangemen.

Arthur Melville Lucas, aged 74, father of Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta, head of Educational in the South and prominent theatre man, died suddenly last Saturday afternoon at his home in Savannah. Mr. Lucas, at the time of his father's death, was in New York and was notified by wire. He left immediately for Savannah for the funeral, which was held Monday afternoon.

J. H. Butner, head of Educational's exchange in Atlanta, who is back at his desk after a trip to Charleston, S.C., brings word that Albert Sottile's new theatre in that city, the Gloria, on King Street, will probably be ready for formal opening in a few weeks.

Major John W. Quillian, president of Enterprise Film Corporation, with headquarters in Atlanta, has returned from a trip to Charlotte.

F. E. Williamson, operating the Williamson and Grand theatres in Winter Haven, Fla., and another house at Avon Park, Fla., was a visitor of Film Row last week.

E. D. Turner, of Asheville, N. C., head of Carolina Theatres, Inc., was in Atlanta last week getting equipment for the new theatre at Statesville, N.C.

F. L. Alig, auditor in the Atlanta office of National Theatre Supply Company, is at St. Joseph's Infirmary, having been operated on Tuesday for appendicitis.

Louis Rosenbaum, of Florence, Ala., of Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., operating the Princess and Majestic theatres in that city, the Palace at Sheffield and the Strand at Tuscumbia, was in Atlanta last week on business.

Dr. C. B. Welch, who, with P. A. Hurst, of Roanoke, Ala., has purchased the Liberty Theatre at Roanoke, was seen on Film Row recently. J. W. Cramer, of Opelika, who operated the Liberty, disposed of the property on account of ill health.

L. A. Callen, Jr., who recently joined the sales force of the Atlanta office of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, left Tuesday to take up his new duties in the field. He will travel in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia.

F. L. Griffin, of the Strand Theatre in Carrollton, Ga., was another recent caller along Film Row.

C. C. Jordan has sold his half-interest in a theatre at Kissimmee, Fla., to Mr. Fain, who operated the Palace at Leesburg. Mr. Jordan has recently returned to Atlanta, where he made contracts and bought equipment for the new theatre at Veniee, which will probably open in about seven weeks. The seating capacity of the house is reported as 700.

Give "The Little Theatre" a Comfortable Home

Two Progressive Showmen Find Way to Cater to the "Discriminating" Picturegoer

THE action of two progressive and far-sighted exhibitors sets a precedent which many observers look upon as indicative of a move to keep in the family of the commercial theatre—where it undoubtedly belongs—"little theatre" "film guild" movements which every so often have their outcroppings here, there and everywhere.

Managers and producers in the dramatic theatre field are well aware of the added competition which these "little theatres" can bring about, and there are some instances where the cinema theatres find themselves faced by a lively competitor in the form of a "little motion picture theatre."

The move made by Eric T. Clarke, managing director of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, was not primarily a step to take the "little theatre" bull by the horns. Mr. Clarke is interested in the movement mainly as a service idea which will enable groups, more or less limited in number, to see certain pictures which lack the mass appeal necessary to make them available for the regular commercial theatre. He is carrying out his little theatre movement at Kilbourn Hall, on the concert plan, with a series of showings arranged and subscriptions sold for the series.

His first presentation "Alaskan Adventures" proved eminently successful and attracted a crowd of far greater proportions than he expected. Indeed, the response was so widespread that someone suggested that what started out in Mr. Clarke's mind as an "art" movement developed into an excellent "showmanship" movement which carried before it many dyed-in-the-wool screen fans of the very kind whose preferences and tastes in entertainment set the standard of the commercial theatre, but who jolly well wanted to consider themselves full-fledged members of that discriminating class which appreciates the finer things in cinema and dramatic art.

At any rate, the little theatre movement in Rochester is "over" and it was put over by a showman who knows the theatre and the public, and who accordingly is much better equipped to sponsor and cater to the artistic yearnings of "guilders" than some amateur suddenly inspired to uplift the cinema.

Practically the same thing has been done by a commercial theatre in Akron, Ohio.

Now Akron has other things beside rubber industries. It has, for instance, a Little Motion Picture Theatre. It isn't so much a Little Motion Picture Theatre, as the Little Motion Picture Theatre idea put to work in a regular motion picture theatre. Moreover the idea is so successfully established and organized that there is little room for the inspired uplifter and elevator to start something "artistic" for the "discriminating" in a converted barn or deserted church.

I. Friedman and Milton Bryer own and operate a chain of houses in Akron, among them, the Waldorf. All day long the Waldorf is a picture theatre just like any other picture theatre. But every once in a while, after the mystic hour of midnight, it changes its character, and becomes a Little Motion Picture Theatre. At that time special productions are shown, foreign pictures, so-called highbrow pictures which have no mass appeal, pictures of the type called artistic but not labelled box office attractions.

These pictures are presented by the Akron Film Guild, at the Waldorf Theatre, with admission prices at $1.10. The Akron Film Guild is composed of Akron's socially elite, both men and women. Membership is invitational.

I. Friedman started the guild and is now connected with it in an advisory capacity. He shows the pictures the guild wants to see. The guild guarantees to support the picture after he brings it to the screen. These showings are not open to the public. They are very select. That's why they are expensive. But the members like it that way.

Orchestral music and some novelty screen number is always shown in addition to the feature. Last Friday Messrs. Friedman and Bryer presented "Polikushka." Capacity audience is reported to have attended the performance. Mrs. Georgia Moffett, secretary of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade attended the screening and made a charming talk in which she offered the support of the Hays organization in furthering the interests of the Akron Theatre Guild.

The enterprise is not without its significance to the motion picture fraternity as a whole. Pictures which are regarded as lacking in "mass appeal" but into the production of which producers have dumped large sums of money, and over which scenarists and directors have sweated and toiled in the effort to do something different, may find their outlet, their approach to a public interested in pictures as an art as well as an amusement form, through the Little Theatre, and particularly the Little Theatre which has the benefits of capable direction.

Equipment

Art of Lighting

By P. M. ABBOTT

AS the motion picture industry is generally conceded to be symbolic of light, and as we are of this industry, specializing in the technical phase, we assume that we know the subject of light.

Our assumption, apparently, has been none too well founded.

We reach this conclusion after spending several hours in the Lighting Institute of the Edison Lamp Works. This institute is devoted to the dissemination of advanced lighting practices. It is completely appointed and equipped with all modern appliances for the application and control of light.

The attention paid to all forms of theatre lighting at this institution is surprising. We thoroughly enjoyed a demonstration of theatre illumination presented under the personal supervision of Mr. A. L. Powell, director, who is considered the leading authority on this subject.

Mr. Powell demonstrated stage and auditorium lighting; a small spot lamp remodeled into a surprisingly efficient effect machine, employing home-made slides, etc. The versatility of light: its power of creating alluring atmosphere where none existed before, a sculptor andartist in itself; all these qualities were never demonstrated to better advantage.

But it was Mr. Powell, presenting in demonstration form, his favorite subject, which interested and impressed us most—light and music played in harmony.

The setting of this demonstration was simple: a darkened auditorium, a velvet stage curtain upon which colored light was played and a reproduction of a symphony orchestra. The results, under Mr. Powell's deft touch, were anything but simple. Each emotion of the music was magnified, the lighting effect being cleverly harmonized with the music.

We left the institute knowing that the future held a new trick for motion picture theatres. Perhaps one that will require years to become generally used, yet a feature that will prove a further boon to our industry.

Instruction "Tours" for House Staff

St. Paul Manager Conducts Study of Departments

Henry Haupt, house manager of the Capitol Theatre, St. Paul, was asked by one of the ushers to show her the inside of the Wurlitzer organ recently. This gave Haupt the idea of conducting a tour of the theatre by all front-of-the-house employees.

Every Monday night at ten o'clock a study of the various departments of the theatre begins under the supervision of the house manager and in co-operation with the personnel in active charge of the particular department under consideration. The trips have included an inspection of the organ; a study of the booth, with a demonstration of the projection, lamps, rewinding, screen, etc.; a study of the stage, and of the ventilating and cooling systems.

Haupt says the interest and change of spirit in the house force has been noticeable.

Eric Clarke Subs as Movie Columnist of Newspaper

Eric T. Clarke, general manager of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, is filling the role of movie columnist for the "Rochester Democrat and Chronicle." He made his debut in the issue of Sunday, January 9, and will continue as chronicler of items and events of interest to the picture fans for a few weeks.

In the course of his editorial comment, Mr. Clarke names "We're in the Navy Now" as the best comedy of the season, adding the reservation, "Of course, Harold Lloyd's 'The Kid Brother' may purloin the honors, but then one seldom uses a Lloyd picture as a standard of comedy comparison." Emil Jannings as Boss Huller in "Variety," he says, carries off the honors for the outstanding single screen performance of the year.

Saturday Morning Movies Presented in Butte

Saturday morning matinees will be given at the Rialto Theatre for the children of Butte. Manager W. J. Sullivan will arrange, through the various civic organizations and schools of the city, to have Juvenile Movies every other Saturday morning.

The programs are to be pre-viewed by a special committee each Saturday before they are given to the children. The present plan allows for educational features, a comedy and current events, with suitable music.

Jay Gould's "Family Band" Heard in Minneapolis

Minneapolis last week had an opportunity to hear the famous "family orchestra" of Jay Gould, owner of the Eagle Theatre at Montevideo, Minn. It is composed of Mr. and Mrs. Gould and their nine children, and in every sense of the word is strictly a family affair. Gould brought the orchestra to Minneapolis to play at the annual convention of the State Federation of County Fair Boards at the Nicollet Hotel.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

ASHLEY ABENDSCHEIN'S transfer from the managership of Crandall's Savoy and Garden in Washington, D.C., to the resident managership of the new Tivoli in Frederick, Md., has resulted in several managerial shifts among the Washington forces of the company. Joseph Flynn, transferred from the York, succeeds Abendschein at the Savoy; Charles Clark will be shifted from the Home to the York, and Walter Corsley will again assume management of the Home Theatre, having previously occupied this post.

CHARLES CABALLERO, former purchasing agent for the West Coast Theatres in California, last week was reported to have accepted a position as assistant to Harry C Arthur, Jr., of the Pacific Northwest Theatres group. Caballero was connected with West Coast for the last five years, during which time he purchased all equipment and furnishings for the W. C. houses.

ABE SPITZ, owner of the Wollaston Theatre at Quincy, Mass., has appointed James Teevan as manager of the new house. Teevan was formerly checker for the Famous Players-Laskey corporation. He assumed charge at the Wollaston Jan. 15.

Straight Film Bills Five Days Weekly at Hip

A new policy was instituted at the Palace Hip Theatre, Ackerman and Harris house in Seattle, Washington, last week, following a visit to the Pacific Northwest city by Mr. Ackerman and other circuit officials. Under the new plan, the house will play vaudeville and pictures on Saturday and Sunday, and the other five days of the week will be devoted exclusively to second-run pictures, with a daily change of program. Manager Joseph Muller has rearranged his price schedule to fit the new policy, charging fifteen cents for the picture programs, and twenty-five cents on week-ends, when the combined vaudeville and feature picture policy is in vogue.

Solos by Strand Musicians Score in Ogdensburg

The Strand in Ogdensburg, N. Y., put on a rather novel entertainment last week that cost nothing and yet attracted a great deal of attention. Each member of the orchestra played a solo number each evening. It is said that the idea originated from a chance remark to the effect that every member of the Strand orchestra was a soloist, a remark that someone took exception to, and which called forth the efforts later on of each musician.

Community Sing Popular Saturday Mat. Feature

The Empire Theatre at New Bedford, Mass., is having much success with a special song period every Saturday matinee for the children. A special feature is made of the event and S.R.O. houses have been the result. The words are flashed on the screen and music is supplied by the organ and the song period lasts about an hour. A special feature Sunday was the appearance of Jimmy Gallagher, of radio fame, and a new orchestra in songs, dances and stories.

Distinguished Guests at Dinner for Saranac Theatre Man

It is not often in the history of New York State and its motion picture theatres that millionaires gather and tender a dinner to the manager of a motion picture theatre in a small town, and yet this is what happened a few days ago at Saranac Lake when the owners of the Pontiac Theatre played the part of host to David Seymour. Men such as Walter H. Cluett, millionaire collar manufacturer of Troy; Dr. F. B. Trudeau, whose sanitarium at Saranac Lake is known the world over, spoke words of praise for Mr. Seymour, who retires as managing director of the Pontiac that has just been taken over by the Schine enterprises, and who has left for Florida where he will spend the winter.

Years ago Mr. Seymour went to Saranac Lake, broken in health and likewise broken financially. When he retired last week he was the largest single stockholder in the Pontiac Theatre Corporation, and many acts of benevolence in the village can be traced directly to his open pocketbook and his bigheartedness. He has recovered his health, his fortune and likewise made the Pontiac Theatre the leading house of its kind in the Adirondack region.

New Policy Proves Winner at Victory, Tampa

The new policy inaugurated by General Manager John B. Carroll, of Consolidated Amusements, and George B. Peck, manager of the Victory, Tampa, has put that house over with a bang. The old S.R.O. sign makes its appearance nightly and the matinees are getting into that class also.

Under the new policy the Keith Vaudeville is shown on Mondays and Tuesdays. The following two days are reserved for road shows; with a permanent musical comedy company, The Honey Bunch, holding the boards on Fridays and Saturdays. A feature film is shown on Sunday. The Honey Bunch company have won Tampa and are presenting just about the biggest show ever seen here for six bits.

Stock and Films Split Week at Northampton Theatre

Although announcement has been made of the discontinuance of stock at the Academy of Music at Northampton, Mass., members of the Repertory Company have requested that they be allowed to continue their productions three nights a week, provided they incur no further expense to the city in conducting the house. The motion picture policy will, it is understood, be continued the other three nights. Stock has been a municipal venture and the theatre has lost about $500 per week thus far this season, hence the plan to discontinue stock and show only pictures.

Program selection alone won't do this

Why is one theater crowded and another almost empty, both offering the same program? Are people just foolish spenders?

No! They seek their money's worth of enjoyment from films presented in an atmosphere which carries them away to "make-believe" land. It's the restful, "forgetful" feeling that does it—produced by the soft color blendings modern houses obtain with C-H "Simplicity" Dimmers.

C-H "Simplicity" Dimmers permit of all lighting intensities and color blendings. Their technical perfection assures smooth, positive control.

There is a combination of C-H Dimmer Units for every theater regardless of size. Economical to install and operate—their reasonable cost is soon forgotten in the pleasure of increasing profits. Your architect and electrical contractor will tell you more about C-H Dimmers.

—Or, write for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater." It tells the entire story.

"Simplicity" Dimmers

Smooth fading or a beautiful crescendo of light—C-H Dimmers accomplish both without flicker. Smooth operation through 110 steps, from full brilliancy to black out—with no overlapping of contacts.

The rack and pinion style of drive eliminates play and back-lash. Simple design and highest quality insure long life under severe service.

Won't burn out or overheat. Soapstone bases have high heat dispersion and insulating qualities.

C-H Simplicity Dimmers are universally adaptable to all theaters—every known combination of dimming and color control can be secured—automatically.

Crandall's Met Drops Stage Numbers

Reverts to Straight Pictures and Music; Reduces Admissions

Stage acts will be discontinued as a feature of programs presented at Crandall's Metropolitan Theatre in Washington, D.C. The change in policy will bring with it a reduction of admission prices.

Announcing the change, the management states that the move is made in response to the great number of Metropolitan patrons who have voiced their disapproval of the stage presentations in conjunction with what originally was strictly a motion picture entertainment.

Henceforth, the bills at the Metropolitan will be comprised of feature photoplays, two- or three-reel comedies, special novelty reels, the Metropolitan topical reel, and musical presentations by the Metropolitan Symphony under the direction of Daniel Breeskin. The de luxe shows will be two hours in length.

The new price scale is as follows: Matinees: balcony 25 cents; orchestra 35 cents. Nights, Sundays and holidays: Balcony 35 cents; orchestra 50 cents.

Under the presentation policy which is now being abandoned, the Metropolitan has presented a wide variety of stage entertainment, booking vaudeville double and single acts and concert singers and instrumentalists. Van and Schenck recently played a two weeks' engagement at the house.

Gene Dennis Closes Four Weeks' Run in Seattle

Gene Dennis, girl psychic, under contract with the Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., of Seattle, last week closed a four-week engagement at Manager Al Raleigh's Coliseum Theatre in Seattle, and opened an extended engagement the following week at the same company's Rialto Theatre, in Tacoma. Miss Dennis, drawing $700 weekly for a period of forty weeks, answered thousands of questions during her stay in Seattle, having made radio appearances and answering mail for the Seattle "Daily Times" in addition to her appearances three times daily on the Coliseum stage.

Whiteman Booked for Circle

Paul Whiteman has been booked at the Circle, Indianapolis, for the week of Jan. 23, Manager Ace Berry announced. It will be the "jazz king's" first and only appearance in the Hoosier State this year.

"Opera vs. Jazz" Featured at Paramount Theatre

The Paramount Theatre, in New York, this week is presenting the most elaborate stage number offered in conjunction with feature pictures. "Opera vs. Jazz" is the title of the presentation, which runs for fifty-five minutes and is composed of eight episodes, typifying both opera and jazz. The production was designed and staged by Frank Cambria.

The presentation is being featured above the screen attraction, "The Potters," in advertising for the bill, and has been exploited in advance through program and newspaper advertisements. Operatic arias and popular songs, ballet and modern dances, classical and jazz instrumental music, are set one against another during the course of the presentation, a device which permits the admirers of both opera and jazz to compete in registering the applause for their favorites.

Capitol, Springfield, to Present Vitaphone

Vitaphone presentations will be introduced to the theatregoers of Springfield, Mass., by the management of the Capitol Theatre there. Installation of the Vitaphone was started some time ago. The Capitol was among the first picture houses to introduce radio as a form of theatre amusement. That was four years ago, when a large receiving set was installed in the theatre and several presentations of radio entertainment were offered.

St. Louis Revue Feature at Ambassador

Skouras Brothers presented to the patrons of their Ambassador Theatre, the week ending on January 14, the first revue staged for the house by Robert and Marjorie Alton. It was advertised as a $4.40 presentation but was shown at the customary admission prices—65 cents being the top.

It was jazzy but in good taste. And was produced entirely in St. Louis—another instance of the resources of Skouras Bros.

The cast included such lights as Gene Austen, Victor record artist; Harry Hines, the peppy comedian; Mira Nirska, sinuous Oriental dancer; Layman and Kling, Collie Valanni, Gene Wirick and loads and loads of girls. In many respects it was the greatest show ever offered by a St. Louis motion picture theatre.

In the First Revue there were two big chorus scenes—one a bizarre fairy tale in which the "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" must have originated.

Radio Novelty Presented on Eastman Stage

"On the Air in 1950" was the title of a radio novelty which the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, presented as a stage number in conjunction with "The Canadian." The setting showed a radio fan trying to "tune in" on some broadcast entertainment. Out of the static and howls there finally emerged a program of popular songs and instrumental numbers.

The Eastman offered "The Canadian" for four days, starting Sunday, January 9. Thursday was concert day at the Eastman, and on Friday the new Harold Lloyd comedy, "The Kid Brother," began its extra engagement. It is running through the current week.

Palace Girls Stanley Feature

The ten "Original London Palace Girls" were the stage attraction offered on the program with "Twinkletoes" at the Stanley Theatre, in Philadelphia. The dance number was supplemented by the Clarion Trumpets as a musical divertissement.

Repeat Program at Capitol

The Capitol Theatre, New York is offering a hold-over bill this week, continuing "Flesh and the Devil" and the divertissements introduced with it, for a second week on Broadway.

Favorable Reaction

The constantly increasing use of Eastman Panchromatic Negative Film by producers means more and more pictures with blues, reds, yellows and greens in their true black and white relationship.

Effects unobtainable with ordinary negative are usual with "Pan". And the difference—the superiority—of prints on Eastman Positive from "Pan" negatives is readily apparent on the screen.

Such an obvious—and important—improvement in the art cannot fail to have favorable box office reaction.

Hartford's State Theatre a Distinctive House

Costly Furnishings and 3,700 seats on Single Floor Contribute to Features

THE State Theatre, Hartford, Conn., a new playhouse of the stadium type, which held its premiere on December 25, 1926, lays claim to the distinction of having a larger number of seats on a single floor than any other motion picture theatre in the country; the owners, Dr. Harris and associates, reporting that there are accommodations for 3,700 on the main floor and with the addition of a small half-moon shaped balcony, the total seating capacity rises above the 4,000 mark. Furthermore, the theatre is said to be the ultimate in modern construction, and represents an investment of close to a million dollars.

The site chosen for the State offered decided advantages for the style of architecture used, that of the later Roman period. A huge electric sign on the exterior overshadows all other lighting. It stands ninety feet in height and is adorned by two thousand lights.

Free Garage Service

A distinctive service feature of the State is a spacious garage built on adjacent property and readily accessible to patrons. This building will accommodate 400 motor cars which are taken care of during the performance free of charge.

The lobby is attractive and inviting. Travertine, an imported synthetic stone from Italy, is used on the walls. The concrete floors are covered with a composition rubber to eliminate dampness. Color mediums of green and gold arranged in panels with rosettes deftly applied, enhance the beauty of the ceiling.

The interior is a revelation, every niche and corner revealing craftmanship of the highest order and the decorations and trimmings as applied blend most harmoniously in an exquisite picture. This treatment, aided by an efficient lighting system, expresses restfulness and comfort to the highest degree.

Extraordinary multi-colored illumination is accomplished from the central dome. A multitude of lights concealed under this dome radiate throughout the interior. The light is diffused at will and changed to react to the different moods of a performance.

Unique Drape Treatment

The treatment of the side-wall arches, high and wide, and diverging to a point in the center, presented a difficult problem. The Novelty Scenic Studios of New York were invited to study the situation. After laborious effort they submitted a unique treatment for all the draperies for the interior and the stage. Their plan and general decorative scheme was found to be exceptionally comprehensive and flexible and they were commissioned to do the entire theatre.

Over twenty thousand square feet of material were used in making the interior draperies alone. The drapes for the arches are made of crimson on crimson-patterned damask. They are festooned in a three-dip effect and trimmed with bells of the same material, bright gold silk fringe and tassels. To accomplish an evenness of tone quality the underdrapes were made of the same material. They are worked out in an Italian effect with generous folds also trimmed with silk fringe and artistically caught up at the sides. Heavily draped with a uniform well-balanced symmetry, they add immensely to the general appearance of the interior.

The treatment on the stage is picturesque and impressive. Exceedingly large in size, sixty-eight feet wide, graduating in an elliptical arch effect from a height of twenty-five feet in the center to seventeen feet at the sides, a valance of a cardinal red velour was designed to fit exactly the contour of this arch. Directly behind this on the stage is the specially designed rhinestone curtain made of cardinal red velour and treated with a special rhinestone effect.

The front set treatment was executed from a new silk fabric, recently adapted for stage purposes, and known as "dream cloth." A rose shade was selected for this purpose to complete the harmony with the other colors applied on the stage. The act curtain, too, is made of the same material and being particularly adaptable to light variation, it makes an admirable background to the front part of the stage.

In view of the extreme width of the stage, the rigging was accomplished on a six and five-line basis, with numerous lines being completely counterweighted. Fifty sets of lines have been installed, enabling the management to conveniently handle scenery, draperies and effects with facility and ease.

All the draperies in the interior of the theatre, the rigging, settings, curtains and effects on the stage have been designed and installed by the Novelty Scenic Studios of New York City.

The projection room is suspended from the ceiling about 110 feet away from the screen. Powers projectors, Peerless arcs and a Balluna spot form part of the equipment.

The policy of the house will be a presentation of three de luxe performances a day. Bert Williams, formerly of the Hartford Strand, will conduct a twenty-five piece orchestra.

The members of the company in control of the Strand include Dr. S. E. Harris, Theo. Harris and Martin D. Harris. The latter is the resident manager. Dr. Harris will be remembered as the former proprietor of the Capitol Theatre, Passaic, N.J.

Marks Brothers Plan More Theatres

Five Under Construction at Present in Chicago

With the passing of 1926, Chicago welcomed the entry of Marks Bros. in the de luxe theatre field. Pioneers in the city's annals of motion picture playhouses, Louis Larks and Meyer S. Marks have concentrated during their years of experience upon an entirely new type of theatre, the first of which they gave Chicago when opening the Granada at Sheridan and Devon last September. In addition to this theatre the Marks Bros. Theatres, Inc., now operate the Orpheus, the Broadway-Strand and the Embassy.

Under construction they have the Marbro, located on Madison Street near Crawford Avenue; the Admiral, another $1,000,000 theatre, which will open within the next six weeks, and two more, the plans of which will be announced shortly. One of these will be the Araby, to be located on the Northwest Side.

Marks Bros. will open their $4,000,000 Marbro Theatre late in March or early in April. It will be Chicago's largest temple dedicated to the cinema, having a seating capacity of over 5,500.

Reopens Gem Theatre at Jackson, Tenn.

The Gem Theatre, Jackson, Tenn., under the management of E. L. Drake and B. M. Herron, had its formal reopening on Christmas Day following a suspension of programs for two weeks, while the theatre was undergoing a thorough remodeling and redecoration. The opening was attended by hundreds of the old patrons of the Gem and by many new ones attracted there by the splendid program offered for the day.

More than $10,000 was spent by the management, it is said, on the popular picture house to make it more attractive for the general public. The auditorium has been enlarged and the ventilating facilities increased to a remarkable degree. Improvements have been made in the projection machine and the screen has been so adjusted that the best possible results are obtained from the pictures shown.

E. J. Sparks Places Order for New Equipment

Equipment for the Park Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., which E. J. Sparks plans to open about the middle of February, has been contracted for with the National Theatre Supply Company's Atlanta branch. The new house will be one of the best appointed and most comfortable in Mr. Sparks' chain in Florida.

The equipment will consist of 872 upholstered opera chairs, made by the Steel Furniture Company; two Powers projectors with Peerless reflector arcs, one Hertner transverter, 12 by 16 screen, made by the American Silversheet Company; one Callier ticket chopper, one Simplex ticket selling machine, full set of Stanley photo frames, one Fulco film cabinet with all accessories and full set of ventilation equipment, made by the American Blower Company.

Pearl-State Announces New Cleveland House

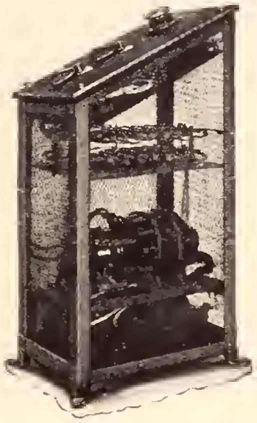
A new Cleveland theatre has been announced for the intersection of Pearl and State roads to be called the Pearl-State Theatre. Announcement was made by Geo. M. Meyers, owner of the building, which will comprise six stores and the theatre on the first floor with offices and suites on the second floor. The theatre has been leased for twenty-five years to the Pearl-State Theatre Company at a total rental approximating $500,000. The house will have 2,500 seats—1,700 on the first floor, and 800 in the balcony. While the name of the lessee has not been announced, it is generally supposed that he is Sam Schachtel, who now owns the "Y" Theatre, an old house in about the same location.

New Picture Theatre for Monroeville, Ind.

Several weeks ago Messrs. Tillock and Lichstin, proprietors of the New Haven Theatre and the Haven Theatre, New Haven, Ind., closed a lease for ten years on the west half of the lower floor of the Masonic Building, in Monroeville, Ind., and will begin this week to remodel the room in the latest design and refit the room for a modern picture show.

The managers expect to have the building in readiness for the opening date during January. A new front will be built, with a 20-foot lobby and raised floors, with a seating capacity of 400.

The SYNCROVERTOR Will Reduce Your Current Cost of Projection Fully 25%



MOTION picture theatre owners—present and prospective, extending from one end of the country to the other, are being attracted by the revolutionary step in current conversion methods as demonstrated in the Liberty Syncrovertor.

This highly efficient device consists of a transformer, a motor, a commutator, a switchboard control panel, all assembled in one unit or a booth control panel. The actual rectification is done at the commutator—not within the motor. Watt input is 25% less for equal amperage at the lamp than on any motor generator. This means a saving of at least 25% in power costs.

The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit. If the motor ceased to function, the transformer would furnish A.C. current of the proper voltage to the arc.

The Liberty Syncrovertor is made in four types, complete with ballasts, controls, meters, etc. Write for specifications and prices.

Palm Beach Premiere a Brilliant Affair

Resort's Social Elect Praise New Paramount; "Diamond Horseshoe" a Feature

An event of unusual brilliance and social importance was the opening on Sunday, January 9th, of the magnificent new Publix house, the Paramount Theatre. With admission prices scaled at $1 to $1.50 matinee and $1, $1.50 to $2.00 for the evening performance, the beautiful Paramount was the gathering place Sunday for an ultra-fashionable assemblage which filled the Diamond Horseshoe and started the theatre off on its career to the praises of the social and theatre elect of Florida.

The Paramount Theatre is operated by the Stanley Company of Florida, of which Stanely C. Warrick is president. T. W. Williams is general manager of the company. Fred Crews, former manager of the Rivoli Theatre in New York, came down last week to assume management of the Palm Beach Paramount.

Opening with "Beau Geste," a Paramount road show attraction, the Paramount Theatre will show productions of special and road-show calibre only. Its season extends throughout the winter months, and ends April 15th. The house has been planned to cater to the exclusive circles of society which gather in the resort during the winter season, and the 26 boxes which contain 6 seats and which form the Diamond Horseshoe, are sold at $1,000 each for the entire season. Every box was taken for the opening performance of the Paramount; the holders listing many figures and personages prominent throughout the country.

The Paramount Theatre contains 1241 seats; 1095 of this number are orchestra seats and 156 are contained in the boxes which form the mezzanine. Spanish architecture has been followed closely in the design of the theatre, the building itself being fashioned in a circular shape which features a Spanish patio as the main entrance to the amusement temple. In the laying out of this patio every care has been exercised to make it an exact reproduction of the Spanish form of garden. Carefully placed, multi-colored old stone blocks leading to the theatre's entrance are spaced between with growing grass, and the accoutrements to this setting are in perfect tone and keeping.

Joseph Urban, noted architect who designed the Paramount, is said to have executed one of his finest pieces of work in the Palm Beach house. Miss Gretle Urban, his daughter, is responsible for the elaborate interior. The auditorium, lobby, foyer and reception rooms are decorated harmoniously in a sea motif which represents Neptune, god of the waters, and the weird sea creatures of mythology.

The building which houses the Paramount Theatre likewise contains 24 stores and 14 offices. It was financed by Messrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., Edward F. Hutton, Leonard Replogle, Gurnee Munn and Harris Hammond, all of whom will maintain winter offices in the building. The financiers each hold boxes in the Paramount Theatre, although Mr. Replogle was the only member of the group present for the formal opening. Other boxholders were: Mrs. Tdward ing. Other boxholders were: Mrs. Edward Dr. and Mrs. Preston Pope Satterwhite, Mrs. J. Leonard Replogle, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Chadbourne, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Perry Charlton, Mr. Rodman Wanamaker, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. John Shepard, Jr., Colonel and Mrs. Anthony R. Kuser, Dr. and Mrs. Wiley L. Kingsley, Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Reynolds, Mrs. Boyce Thompson Schultze, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Shearson and Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Phipps.

Hallberg to Distribute Clayton Take-up

J. H. Hallberg has secured the distribution of the Clayton Even Tension Take-Up. This is a well known film take-up installed in many theatres, including some Paramount, and Keith and Proctor houses.

The last important installation was made in the new Paramount Theatre in New York, where the eight Simplex Projectors were equipped with the new Clayton Even Tension Take-Up.

Mechanical features claimed for this device are that it gives insurance against film fire, takes up any amount of film evenly and will take up with any size reel hub. Also that it prevents excessive wear on the lower take-up, the sprocket and shaft and tends to stop the opening of film splices. Complete information and this device is available in printed form and may be obtained from J. H. Hallberg.

David Loew Visits Atlanta Site

Surveys and Appraises Location of $8,000,000 Project

The second step toward construction of an $8,000,000 theatre and building project on the site of the Grand Building and Loew's Grand Theatre, at Pryor and Houston Streets in Atlanta, was taken last Saturday with a survey of the location and an appraisal of its advantages by David Loew, son of Marcus Loew and vice-president of Loew's, Inc., and David R. Picker, real estate expert for the Loew interests.

"Construction will begin shortly," said Mr. Loew. "That much is definite. There will be a theatre that will be the equal of anything else in the South, and perhaps in the nation for beauty, size and modern completeness. It will have a seating capacity of at least 3,300, perhaps 3,500, to fill the need we have long felt of more room to accommodate the generous patronage which Atlanta has given our entertainment.

"We have not yet decided whether the other details of the construction will include an office building, a department store, or a hotel. There will be one of the three, certainly; perhaps two, maybe all three. This point cannot be determined until we return to New York, analyze the survey we have made, and investigate the matter of probable lessors and their desires. A project so large must be planned and definitely arranged before it is started."

New Cinn. Building Code May Hit Fire Escapes

THE abolishment of certain types of fire escapes now in use by many of the Cincinnati theatres may be decreed in the new building code now in preparation. Building Commissioner Hauser gives it as his opinion that no fire escape should extend over the sidewalk of any theatre, but should come down on the theatres own property. He also condemns the balanced type of fire escape with a hinged attachment as dangerous. He has signified his intention of compelling theatre managers and owners to arrange better distribution of fire escapes rather than having so many massed near one another, especially in connection with the upper floors.

Prepare Plans for 1800-Seat Oregon House

A theatre, office and store building, rising ten or twelve stories, will be erected on the half block on the south side of East Morrison Street, between Grande Avenue and East Sixth Street, Portland, Ore., by George W. Weatherly, owner. Plans are now being prepared and it is expected to start within a few months. Cost will be in excess of $500,000. The theatre auditorium will have a seating capacity of 1800 persons.

S. M. P. E. Anxious to Serve Industry

Latest Bulletin Gives Splendid Idea of Society's Growth

The new S.M.P.E. bulletin, recently issued by the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, contains among other items, an interesting message from the president of the society, Willard B. Cook, a group picture of the members taken at the Fall meeting last October at Briarcliff, and a list of the newly-elected officers and committees appointed for the current year. The supplement "As Others See Us," sent with the bulletin, gives a splendid idea of the growing importance of the Society as shown by extracts reprinted from the trade magazines. These extracts refer principally to the request for assistance on technical matters made by Will H. Hays and, also, to the speech of Dr. C. E. K. Mees delivered at the Convention of the S.M.P.E. last Fall. In his speech Dr. Mees pointed out that the Society of Motion Picture Engineers is a well established organization with a very definite national and international standing, based upon what it has accomplished.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers is anxious to be of the greatest possible service to the motion picture industry and, therefore, welcomes to active and associate membership anyone connected with the technical departments of this field who can aid in promoting the ideas for which this organization stands.

Inquiries and Comments

Ghosts, Halos and Whatnots

THE following is from Gilbert W. Krimm, Harris Theatre, McKeesport, Pa.

"Dear Sir:

"The management has just bought a new Brenkert 100-ampere spotlamp for this theatre and I would, accordingly, like to receive some information regarding the operation of the same.

"I am burning 50 amperes in this lamp, as this is the capacity of my Transverter, and am using a 3/4" positive and a 5/8" negative carbon, both cored. My throw to the stage is between 90 and 110 feet and the lens in the spotlamp is 6" in diameter by 10" focus.

"The thing that troubles me is this—I get a 'halo' over the top of the spot on the stage and I also get a pronounced 'ghost' in the center of the spot when I enlarge it from spot to flood. Another thing is, the brightness of the light falls off rapidly as I move up from spot to flood and I am at a loss to give the manager a satisfactory answer on all these points.

Has Tried Tilting Carbons

"I have tried to reduce the halo and find that by swinging the carbons in the lamp from a vertical position to one having a sharp angle—that is, so the carbons lay back at a sharp angle—I reduce it some, but still have a halo which is just visible.

"Will you kindly tell me how to eliminate this halo and ghost effect?

"Very truly yours,
"Gilbert G. Krimm" (Signed).

Friend Krimm, we believe the trouble you are having with your spotlamp is largely due to the way it is being handled, and can, therefore, be corrected, if you will follow the instructions given below.

In the first place, the proper trim for 50 amperes, D.C. is a 5/8" cored positive and an 11/32" metal coated negative. If there is any chance of your going above 50 amperes then this should be changed to a 3/4" positive and a 3/8" metal coated negative.

These carbons should be trimmed in such a manner that the lower extends out slightly in front of the upper one. A good rule to follow is to have the front edge of the lower carbon, that is, the edge nearest to the condenser, on a line with the front edge of the upper carbon.

When trimmed in such fashion the crater will burn in the best possible position for providing the maximum light to the condensing lens and, furthermore, this will considerably reduce the double image effect which you obtain. The double image is caused by the condenser lens forming an out-of-focus image of the crater, along with another out-of-focus image of the luminous tip on the end of the negative carbon.

The arc lamp itself should be tilted back as far as it is possible to do so by means of the adjusting handle provided for that purpose. I see you have found this out for yourself, since you mention in your letter that when the carbons are tilted back at a sharp angle the double image effect is not as bad as when they are standing more nearly upright.

Use of Shields

If you follow the above recommendation, Friend Krimm, you will minimize the double image effect to such an extent that it will not be visible when the spot is thrown onto a lighted stage, which is the usual working condition for a spotlight. When thrown onto a dark stage, or onto a drop with the house dark, such as you probably have been doing in your test work, the double image will still be visible, though not to the extent it was before.

In order to entirely get rid of this double image effect and that due to the tail flame of the arc, some projectionists have tried out a contraption consisting of two adjustable shields—one to mask the flame and the other to mask the negative tip—which can be opened and closed so as to mask out the false images.

This device works fairly well, but the principal disadvantages are that nearly 50 per cent. of the light is lost and the shields must be placed so close to the crater to be effective that they burn up quite rapidly and must be replaced.

The best method, in our mind, is to use a single, non-adjustable, heavy steel shield to mask the flame tip and then tilt the carbons back at a sharp angle to hide the negative tip from the lens.

This shield idea was tried out by one of the manufacturers of incandescent lamps, in an effort to evolve a satisfactory lamp for spotlighting purposes. A circular hole was cut in a metal mask, which was then placed in front of the real filament of the lamp, the idea being that the condenser would project an image of the opening in the mask backed by the bright incandescent filament, thereby overcoming the old objection of the ragged spot obtained from incandescent spotlamps.

The idea did not work out for a number of reasons, and it was dropped. At least, nothing more seems to have been done with it.

Impossible to Remove Ghosts

As for the ghost which occurs in the beam when changing from spot to flood, this is something that must be accepted with as good grace as possible, since it is a fault of all common types of lenses and cannot be corrected. There is nothing we can recommend, therefore, to eliminate this ghost, as it is inherent in all lenses when used in such a fashion.

It is commonly explained that this ghost is caused by chromatic errors in the lens, the ghost really being a fringe of blue light, encircled by white light.

Probably a more correct explanation would be that it represents the combined effect of both chromatic aberration and, in a sense, faulty action of the lens in being unable to serve as a universal focusing device, covering a range of positions from spot to flood.

Indeed, when we come to think about it, the present type of spotlight, which has survived many attempts at "improvement," is a pretty flexible device and we should not complain too loudly over relatively minor items when it performs so satisfactorily, in general, with respect to the more important points. What other light projector possesses the wide range of operation as found in the still-used old form of spotlight system?

Higher Flood Power

As far as we can see, it is weak in only one important feature and that is, higher flood candlepowers than those now obtainable would be welcomed. The change in candlepower as the lamp is changed from spot to flood, is tremendous, as can be seen from the fact that tests show a six-inch lens to give, roughly, 3,800,000 beam candlepower for "spot" and only about 60,000 beam candlepower for "flood."

This will give you some idea of the great variation in intensity from spot to flood, and also points out why so many people are making efforts to evolve new projectors, which are designed with a view toward raising the flood candlepowers, but so far, at least, have done nothing to raise the spot candlepower also.

Arc for Fixed Floods

Probably the best example of this equipment is the high intensity arcs used for fixed floods, wherein an iris is used to outline the beam. These lamps, using 125 amperes, give about three times the intensity (about 180,000—200,000 C.P.) now obtainable with the old form of spotlight (on flood) using 40 amperes. When compared on the basis of equal currents there is practically no difference in beam candlepower in the two outfits.

The thing we are trying to say is this—that the old form of spotlight, using 150 amperes, will give just about the same beam candlepower as will a 150-ampere high intensity arc lamp the way the latter is now used to give fixed floods in theatres.

Files New Ordinance on Projection Booth

A SATISFACTORY solution has apparently been reached in connection with the difficulty experienced by the Fountain Theatre, Cincinnati, in the erection of a projection booth which, according to the original plans, was to extend over an alley adjacent to the theatre. Samuel Lipp, attorney for thetheatre interests, has filed with the City Council a new ordinance governing the construction of the booth which will be greatly reduced in size. The Fountain Theatre is now under construction by the Keith-Albee-Libson-Heidingsfeld interests. Construction of the original booth was ordered stopped by the courts after a nearby hotel complained that the booth would exclude light and air from several of the hotel rooms.

$20,000 for Improvements on Northwest House

In accordance with the progress that Anacortes, Wash., is making Waldo C. Ives recently announced that the Empire Theatre would be redecorated, reseated and that a new pipe organ, to cost $20,000, would be installed at a total cost of $35,000.

The entire interior of the theatre will be redecorated. New drapes will be provided for the stage, new curtains will be hung and new seats installed.

Mr. Ives plans to begin the renovating of his theatre on or about the fifteenth of February and to have it ready by the 1st of March. During the redecorating period, the Empire will be closed.

Ives also announced that the South Side Theatre would be repainted, redecorated and opened to the public about the 1st of February.

Projectionist Is Awarded a $12,000 Verdict

John J. Sweetman, projection operator of a Boston theatre, who was expelled from the Motion Picture Operators' Union, local 182, in 1925 for refusing to pay an assessment which the courts later found to be illegal, was awarded a verdict of $12,000 against the union by a jury in the Superior Court in Boston before Judge Irwin last Friday.

The suit was brought against the union and against the members of the union individually, alleging conspiracy to prevent him from securing employment after his expulsion from the union.

Two More M. P. Theatres for Danville, Va.

A new theatre is to be built at Danville, Va., to cost about $140,000. The seating capacity will be 1,000 persons and it will be erected on the site of the old Bijou. A ten-year lease on the theatre has been obtained by the Southern Amusement Company. The Tribute Theatre Corporation at the same time is building the Capitol Theatre, in Danville.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Fire Brigade"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Central Theatre, New York

Daily News: "'The Fire Brigade' not only rhymes with 'The Big Parade' but is as worthy a portrayal of the heroic deeds of peace as the other is of war. No scene in any picture has tingled my spine and made me sit up as straight as did the sight of those three gallant old fire horses racing alongside modern motor trucks, with the spark-spitting old steamer careening along behind. The fire-fighting in this film is the real thing and done by real firemen. It is a glorious picture and worth everybody's while to see. I think I'll have to say more of this film later. Meanwhile see it for yourself. There's not a dragging moment in it. A picture that belongs on any list of the year's best ten, and which would be on my list had it not been made up and released several days ago, deserves further consideration. I have already mentioned Eugenie Besserer's fine portrayal of the heroic mother, Mrs. O'Neil. I want to point that slight tribute by saying that had a similar moving performance been given by a younger and more beautiful woman, she would have been acclaimed for high place along outstanding characterizations of the year. All members of the cast acquit themselves creditably, some brilliantly. To one man, naturally, must go the greater credit; to the director, William Nigh, who made the most of all the material, human and mechanical at his hand. It is my guess that 'The Fire Brigade' faces an extremely profitable run at the Central and over the entire country. Its appeal is national."

Mirror: "'The Fire Brigade' is the greatest thriller of its kind on Broadway. The picture's climax skyrockets it into the 'don't miss this film' category. Indeed, the terrific climax lifted a first-night audience to its feet applauding and cheering with a sustained enthusiasm unique in flicker houses. Dramatically, the ending is ideal and grand. The entire cast does splendid work. 'The Fire Brigade' is a stirring tribute to the men who protect the public's welfare but who seldom win recognition. Put it on your must list and book it with your Christmas gaieties."

Sun: "It is bound to be a success, and it should be. For the first-night audience, which ranged from the highest of the fire chiefs to the highest of the Broadwayites, sat enraptured. The acting is marvelously naturalistic and fetching. May McAvoy was thoroughly delightful. A surprising picture in many ways is 'The Fire Brigade'—in its swift kaleidoscope of flame, smoke, engines, machinery and lovely pastoral views. I hope the audiences will like 'The Fire Brigade' as much as I did."

Herald Tribune: "Our advice is if you haven't made out your list of the ten best pictures of the year, don't do it until you see 'The Fire Brigade, 'The Fire Brigade' takes you straight through a night of fighting the flames from the moment the alarm is sounded. It is one of the most exciting, inspiring, breath-taking pictures it has ever been our good fortune to sit through. Each member of the cast deserves to be decorated, and Will Nigh, the director, has kindled a fire that will not soon be extinguished. Don't fail to see 'The Fire Brigade.'"

Times: "'The Fire Brigade' is The Big Parade of the men who risk their lives daily, aye, hourly, in every big city fighting fires. Fire Chief Kenlon, from the stage, characterized it as one of the finest pictures that has ever been produced. 'The Fire Brigade' is thrilling. It has several episodes in colors that are in turn wonderfully beautiful and remarkably effective. 'The Fire Brigade' is not only interesting and thrilling, but it is informative."

Morning Telegraph: "You are here and now guaranteed the 'kick' of your life at the Central Theatre, where 'The Fire Brigade' will fight the flames for many a day and many a night."

Evening World: "This 'Fire Brigade' picture is grand, spiced with thrills and garnished with romance. Thrilling melodramatic material."

Journal: "'The Fire Brigade' dashes thrillingly into the Central. Stopped traffic at the premiere last night. The picture is packed with thrills. The heroic firemen are at last glorified in celluloid."

Telegraph: "All the deeds of dizzy daring, the thrilling risks that spell the fireman's daily grind are retailed in graphic detail. We see him balanced in the air on the ultimate rung of a continually expanding ladder. We see him swooping through the air in a headfirst swallow dive from an 85-foot perch onto a sheet oustretched below. A record of unusual thrills has been written into the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer archives in the compilation of its latest special."

American: "There has never been a fire picture quite like 'The Fire Brigade,' so handsomely and so accurately filmed."

Post: "As exciting as the historic chariot race in 'Ben-Hur.'"

"The Return of Peter Grimm"—Fox Films, Granada Theatre, Chicago

American: "Really a worthy effort. . . The picture is not a spooky one . . . a fine photoplay, excellently acted and one you ought to see because it is unusual."

"The Return of Peter Grimm"—Fox Films, Palace Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio

Plain Dealer: "Translated excellently to the screen. . . Minor alterations in the plot strengthen the story for pictures. Alec B. Francis . . . is an excellent, sympathetic and lovable old Grimm . . . I think Schertzinger has a really fine film. It is good composition, pitched in the right key and played at the proper tempo."

News: "Warfield could not have done the title role in the flesh any better than Alec B. Francis does it in shadow. . . The Palace has shown few, if any, better films than this . . there's nothing ghostly about this film."

Press: "There is humor and pathos, hope and despair, in the final scenes . . . interestingly directed."

"The Return of Peter Grimm"—Fox Films, Metropolitan Theatre, Washington, D.C.

Herald: "A charming picturization . . you could do far worse than hie you to the Metropolitan this week and see it. Alec Francis' enactment of 'Peter Grimm' will earn him a still higher niche in screenland's hall of honor. . . Absolutely beautiful photography . . . so finely done, so delicately handled, that never for a moment does there seem to be an eerie, uncanny atmosphere surrounding Peter's revisitation of his old home. . . . I don't want to forget Mickey McBan, who acts exactly as a kid might at home; and Sammy Cohen's brief bit as a circus clown."

"The Mona Lisa"—Educational, Imperial Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Chronicle: "But there is another feature of the program that is of unusual interest. In place of the usual comedy, a wonderful little play in technicolor is shown. It is 'The Mona Lisa,' which is a romantic tale of this much-discussed heroine of Leonardo da Vinci's immortal painting of the lady with the mysterious smile. It tells the story of Mona Lisa and her lover, and leaves the audience, as well as the lover, still in doubt of the real meaning of that mysterious smile that has been the puzzle of the ages. The picture is an exquisite specimen of the art of technicolor. It is very beautiful."

As the year begins

Statistics prove that the earnings of theatres are showing a consistent increase . . . Investigation shows that the general condition of projectors now in operation is better than ever before . . . Architectural magazines report that the theatre building program for 1927 is greater even than last year . . . Our sales records indicate that Simplex Projectors are today enjoying greater popularity than ever . . .

These are encouraging facts, full of significance. They tell of progress in every phase of the industry. Progress due partly to general prosperity, but in a greater measure due to the ability of motion picture theatres to compete with other places of recreation and entertainment. And there is no question about the source of the "movies'" greater appeal. It is not because pictures are better, but because they are presented in a better way. Better projection, therefore, is proving its real value.

Now, put these definitely related facts together—more money invested, theatres earning more, machines in better condition, increased demand for Simplex. Clearly, Simplex is a great contributing factor in the success of motion picture theatres. Or as one expert projectionist expressed it, "Simplex Projectors work right because they are designed right and built right. And they stay right longer than any other machine I've ever operated—that bars none."

PARAMOUNT DEMANDED LUXURY IN THE CHAIRS FOR THE DIAMOND HORSESHOE

"The beautiful diamond horseshoe" in the new Paramount Theatre, Times Square, New York City, is a tribute to both the architects and the owners.

Paramount officials insisted that the seats for this magnificent loge section must be luxurious, unusual, and extraordinarily comfortable. It is significant, therefore, that Heywood-Wakefield seats were chosen for the "Diamond Horseshoe" section.

The chair selected (shown above) is but one of a long line of beautiful theatre chairs about which our seating experts will be glad to tell you at any time.

"Very Good" says Pete Harrison

January 22, 1927 HARRISON'S REPORTS

"Nobody's Widow"—with Charles Ray, Leatrice Joy and Phyllis Haver

(P. D. C., Jan. 24; 5,434 ft.; 63 to 77 min.)

Very good, not only as a production but also as entertainment. It is a comedy with a farcical turn in some of the situations. The comedy situations are interspersed all the way through the piece. These are caused by the desire of the hero's wife to consider him dead, because she thought that he had proved himself unfaithful on the very day of their marriage, and also by the determination of the hero to win her back, even though he, in order to accomplish this object, had to pretend that he was in love with other women. The hero becomes embroiled in complications that threaten to wreck his plans of winning back the love of his wife, but everything is cleared up toward the end, bringing about a happy outcome. Mr. Ray, as the British nobleman, does well. Miss Leatrice Joy, too, does good work, as well as Phyllis Haver and David Butler. The plot has been founded on the play by Avery Hopwood; it has been directed by skillfully by Donald Crisp, from an adaptation by Clara Beranger and Douglas Doty.

Strong enough to stand a week's run. Good for all other theatres, particularly for those that cater to high class patrons. In small towns it should prove good for Saturday, or for Sunday if no objection is made to pictures with bedroom scenes in them.

SHORT FEATURES

---A Matter of Importance

The Short Feature is just as important to the motion picture program as the shirt, collar and necktie to the well-dressed man.

There is no need for argument on this point. This importance is acknowledged by showmen in all branches of our industry, producer, distributor, exhibitor.

The increasing importance of the Short Feature to you exhibitors and your increasing interest in it are reflected everywhere in the industry's plans for next season. The most casual reading of the trade press shows this will be the Short Feature's biggest year.

As usual Educational will set the pace for the field. For seven years we have been in a unique position, specializing at all times in Short Features alone—seven years of unbroken progress that have established Educational in a position of dominant leadership.

Educational's big plans may be taken as a barometer for the year. They are therefore a matter of importance to you. And so I propose to tell you about the details of these plans in a series of short talks.

The "One-Contract" Equipment Plan....

"A National Institution"

National Theatre Supply Company is organized and equipped to render a complete unit equipment service to exhibitors and theatre builders throughout the country.

This Unit Equipment Plan gives our clients the benefits of our stupendous buying power and assures them of the close cooperation of the nationally known manufacturers whom we represent.

National Service is ready to assume full responsibility for the mechanical excellence of your theatre. Our engineering department will assist and cooperate with your architect, your contractor and you; starting with the tentative or preliminary plans, our helpful service extends all through the construction and on into the operation and actual maintenance of your theatre.

By grouping all your requirements into ONE CONTRACT, it is possible for you to simplify your equipment problem. The National Unit Plan saves you time and money and eliminates the possibility of serious mistakes in the process of building and equipping your theatre.

And, too, National Service doesn't leave you to "shuffle" for yourself after your theatre opens. It stays with you—always ready to serve and help you out in any and every emergency.

JOHN BARRYMORE ~
The Greatest Lover of All Ages!

THE king is dead; long live the king! The glory that was Don Juan's is now John Barrymore's for in making this dashing hero of the age-long legend live again and love again, Barrymore has made himself Don Juan's successor! The epitome of all that made Don Juan immortal, Barrymore becomes an even greater Don Juan. For in this vibrant picturization of innumerable love feasts, he ravishes womanly beauty as only a Don Juan at heart could.

Clandestine rendezvous, piratical passion, endless amours running the gamut from a simple kiss to impassioned acquiescence—thrills of which every woman dreams, adventures that every man desires—all these Barrymore enacts with a fiery emotion that stamps him indelibly as "the greatest lover of all ages!"

bride is here — Come and get her!"

THE challenge of "Don Juan" rang in the ears of the wedding guests! Astounded they turned to gaze up at the fiercely joyous face of the man who had despoiled the hearts of the most famous beauties of the day! And as usual--his latest conquest more daring, more breath-taking than the last!

What a man, this Don Juan! Taking his love where he found it; luring those that pleased him softly, suavely, surely; or rushing into beauty's privacy to steal by force that which might have escaped him otherwise!

In Don Juan you have a role that Barrymore has enacted to live forever. Debonair, insouciant, philanderer, he has stolen the hearts of all that have seen him. For here is the ultimate thrill which the public craves — love that dares all, love that consumes all, love that leaps like liquid fire through the veins of popular fancy!

In city after city where this great picture plays the result is the same —a hurricane of praise by the press, thundering acclamation by the public. In the history of motion pictures no production has ever so combined the qualities of entertainment and box office power.

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, FEBRUARY 4, 1927 No. 5

Bread and Butter

PARAMOUNT will concentrate its production activity this year on pictures which hold the attention of the public from two to seven days.

This significant announcement is made by Jesse L. Lasky, who points out that the new Paramount Theatre is establishing the type of film which will now be the forte of the Famous Players studio forces.

The weekly change film is, as Mr. Lasky remarks, the industry's bread and butter. The overwhelming mass of theatres must have pictures of this sort—first-class pictures. The road shows and the long-run specials are important, of course, and will continue to be, but the emphasis is on weekly-change pictures.

The Paramount Theatre is an outstanding example of what is occurring all over the country. Magnificent houses have been built, are being built in great numbers, and these must continue to have pictures that can come in for a week, reach the widest possible audience and furnish entertainment quality equal to the excellence of the theatre itself.

The theatre is setting the pace in the industry. That is logical, because it is here that the final verdict is rendered by the public on the industry's whole economic scheme.

Justice

WE are in receipt of a copy of the following resolution adopted at the regular monthly meeting of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City, January 25:

"Whereas, Charles Chaplin has always produced clean and wholesome pictures and has always been a constructive force in the motion picture industry, and

"Whereas, It is the sense of this Chamber that it deplores the publicity recently given to Mr. Chaplin's personal affairs,

"Now therefore be it Resolved, That we, the members of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, do hereby affirm our implicit confidence in Mr. Chaplin as an artist and a man."

The American spirit of fair play will meet a very frank test in this matter. The code has always been that a man is held innocent until he is proved to be otherwise. That legal maxim should be given full play in the present situation.

We believe such will be the case. In any event, Mr. Chaplin is a great artist, and none has contributed to the artistic and commercial enrichment of the screen more than he.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

RECORDS fell along Broadway last week when "The Big Parade" passed the record for length of run in a Broadway house, and "Flesh and the Devil" broke the two weeks' gross record and was held for a third for the first time in the seven years the house has been open. In making this announcement Major Bowes said:

"Today marks an historic event on Broadway. For the first time in the history of the Capitol, a picture is being held over for a third week. Not in the seven years of serving our patrons has public demand been so overwhelming. In deference to the public, we announce 'Flesh and the Devil' for one more unprecedented week."

The extent of this demand may be gauged by the fact that the extended showing made it necessary to hold back "The General," regarded as sure-fire, for a week. "Flesh and the Devil" will probably total about $185,000 on the three weeks.

Two-Dollar Grosses

DESPITE the large number of films showing on Broadway at roadshow prices, the weekly business continues to hold up amazingly. Several of them are running around $20,000 a week, or at the rate of a million dollars a year. In this class are "Big Parade," "Old Ironsides," "The Better 'Ole," Don Juan" and "What Price Glory," all doing between $17,500 and $20,000 weekly. "Beau Geste," "Tell It to the Marines" and "The Fire Brigade" hold around the $14,000 mark.

"The Kid Brother," the new Lloyd, went into the Rialto last Saturday, and looks good for a record run. The Mark Strand, with "The Night of Love," is also doing splendid business this week.

French Cinematographic School

WITH various moves on foot here for recognized training in motion picture making, it is interesting to note that a French technical school of photography and cinematography has been started on the initiative of the photographic and motion picture industrials and professionals under the patronage of the French Minister of Public Education and with the help of the City of Paris. This is noted in a report to the Department of Commerce from Paris, and is at 85, rue de Vaugirard, Paris.

The board of directors comprises this list of eminent names: Louis Lumiere, president; Messrs. Boespflug and L. Gaumont, vice-presidents; Messrs. Bauchet, L. B. Clerc, Barnier, Debrie, Felix, Maurice Grieshaber, Rene Guilleminot, Gaston Jousla, Auguste Lumiere, P. Guillaume, L. Reusse, Leo Ruland, and the inspector-general of technical education.

Greater Public Fairness

THE comparatively slight disturbance to date over the Chaplin case (save in the tabloid newspapers) is an encouraging sign. Thousands of letters of sympathy have been received and very few complaints made against Chaplin films and their showing. The general public seems to be willing, in this instance, to wait for the court to pass upon the evidence before accepting it as fact.

There is an increasing tendency in the press, too, to recognize the fact that an artist's private life does not, of necessity, have anything to do with his work.

Exhibitors can do much good in their own communities by urging simple fairness—taking sides neither one way nor the other, but urging their patrons to await the final outcome before passing any hasty judgment.

Conrad Veidt, German star under Universal contract, who returned to America this week and will play in Paul Leni's production of "The Chinese Parrot"

Jack Warner registers elation at making May McAvoy one of the Warner Bros. stars. Her first production, now under way, is entitled "Matinee Ladies"

A Starless Week

DURING the week ending January 15, the National Board of Review passed upon two features and one short subject and failed to find any of them worthy of the asterisk denoting special merit.

Veidt Returns

CONRAD VEIDT, one of the actors whom Germany hated most to lose, arrived in New York on Monday, accompanied by his wife and infant daughter, to make his home in Hollywood. He was here last year to support John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue."

Veidt left for the Coast on Thursday to prepare for his work in his first picture for Universal, "The Chinese Parrot." This is especially interesting for two reasons—first, because it brings together once more Paul Leni, his first director, and Veidt, and second, because in it Veidt will play an American detective, endeavoring to break away completely from Continental mannerisms and technique.

Veidt was introduced to the press on Wednesday afternoon in his suite at the Marguery, and proved to be an intelligent, distinguished looking artist who listens much more than he talks, but who says something when he does. He is quietly enthusiastic about his work here, and his views beget a confidence in his ability to accomplish worth-while things. He is anxious to learn, and is sensible enough to realize that both the German and the American methods of film production have points in their favor, and he hopes to combine the best in both.

After "The Chinese Parrot" he will probably do

Dr. A. H. Giannini, president of the Bowery and East River Bank of New York City and warm friend of the picture industry, visits Johnny Hines in Hollywood, where the comedian is putting the finishing touches to "All Aboard" for First National Release

Jobyna Ralston and Richard Arlen, who will be married in Hollywood on February 10, if the Paramount "Wings" unit returns from San Antonio, Texas, by that time

Lester Scharff, former musical comedy baritone who was with the Shuberts for ten years, is reported to have done splendid work in "New York" (Paramount)

Madlyn Lamping, a Hollywood society woman, whose work in Von Stroheim's "The Wedding March" has aroused enthusiastic predictions for her future career

The players to interpret the principal roles in Gotham's "Heroes of the Night" have been selected with unusual care as to type. Left to right, they are: J. P. Lockney, Sarah Padden, Rex Lease, Marian Nixon, Cullen Landis, Robert E. Homans and Wheeler Oakman

"The Man Who Laughs"—a role of the sort that every actor hopes to play at least once before he dies.

Another Singing Actor

SINGERS seem to be flocking to the screen these days. Gloria Swanson had two of them in her latest picture, "The Loves of Sunya," in Andres de Segurola and John Boles. Now comes another who will be seen in Paramount's "New York."

He is Lester Scharff, who for ten years was connected with the Shuberts. He has a magnificent baritone voice and will be remembered for his work in "Maytime" and other musical plays. At one time, he appeared with Ben Lyon in "Mary, The Third," when Ben was on the stage. He has had a varied career, for when he was not singing in musical comedy, he filled an executive position with Lee Shubert. He was stage director of "The Student Prince" in Chicago. He plays the role of "Izzie" in "New York." This is not his first picture, however, for he played in "The Highwoman," "Young April," "Shipwrecked" and several others.

Ballet Genius En Route

LEO STAATS, master of the ballet of the National Opera of Paris, who has been engaged by S. L. Rothafel as ballet master of the new Roxy Theatre, is a passenger on the S.S. Paris, due in New York this week.

Mr. Staats has produced revues, ballets and sketches in practically all the Paris theatres and music halls, and he has devised and produced numerous ballets famous throughout Europe.

Just before coming to America, Staats completed the mis-en-scene and choreography of "Orphie," a mimodrame ballet in three acts by Roger Ducasse, the titled role of which was played by Ida Rubinstein. Besides his more pretentious productions, Staats has also devised and produced the current sensational revues and dance divertisements at the Casino de Paris, the Folies Bergeres, the Scala and the Cigale.

J. Frank Brockliss, managing director of First National Pictures, Ltd., in England, repeating a message from Robert Lieber, president of the company, telephoning from New York to the sales convention held at the Hotel Cecil, London, on January 14. Joe Skirboll, F. N.'s European general director, is at Mr. Brockliss' left

Lesley Mason's Title Record

OUR Coast scouts send us word of Lesley Mason's growing reputation as a writer of titles. He is a member of the production supervisory staff of the Metropolitan Studios, releasing through P.D.C. "Les" has obtained wide recognition on the Coast through the titles he has written for several of the De Mille-Metropolitan pictures.

He has just completed the titles for "Getting Gertie's Garter," Marie Prevost's latest starring vehicle, and is now titling "No Control," with Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver. Other Metropolitan pictures titled by Mr. Mason are "Pals in Paradise," "Jewels of Desire" and "Meet the Prince."

For the DeMille studio he wrote the titles for Donald Crisp's production, "Nobody's Widow," starring Leatrice Joy. In addition, Mr. Mason was loaned by Metropolitan to Asher, Small and Rogers to write the titles for "McFadden's Flats" and the Corinne Griffith production, "Purple and Fine Linen."

And this is only part of the record, as we happen to know. The title writer does not always get the recognition he deserves from the critics, but he is an exceedingly important factor in pictures. We are glad to pass along to the whole industry this news of Mr. Mason's deserved success in a difficult field.

These Baseball Scandals

RUSSELL HOLMAN, advertising chief at Famous Players, sends us a copy of a reprint which that company is sending out to exhibitors of a story carried by the United Press recently in which Frank Getty uses "Casey at the Bat" as the basis of a clever satire on the current baseball scandals. The story carries a "Mudville" date line and relates the happenings of the immortal game in which Casey struck out, weighing with mock gravity the charges now brought up in Mudville that the game was not on the up-and-up. The U.P. serves nine hundred newspapers, and the story makes a timely bit of indirect publicity for Paramount's "Casey at the Bat," which they have not been slow to capitalize.

M. T. A. Turns Reporter

MAURICE T. ANDREWS, who was on the reviewing staff of The News for some time and whose signature appeared on numerous feature and short subject appraisals, is now a special writer on The Staten Island, a daily paper in that fast-growing spot across the Narrows. Several of his recent stories have had front-page prominence, and a perusal of them shows that he is more than making good. Andrews was a distinguished flier during the war and was connected with the National Board of Review before coming to The News.

Fox Folks Plan Frolic

MARCH, says Douglas Tauszig, assistant to vice-president J. G. Leo over at Fox Films, will be memorable for two things this year, St. Patrick's Day and the Fox Fun Frolic and Dance, which is to be held at the McAlpin Hotel on March 11.

Mr. Tauszig's remarks were made by way of announcing that on the aforementioned March 11 the personnel of the home office and the New York exchange are going to get together and produce one of the liveliest, peppiest and most novel of blow-outs ever staged by the employees of a film producing organization.

Scheduled on the program of this night of nights for Fox folks is the rippingest bunch of entertainment that it was possible for the most ingenious of experts on matters of the kind to devise.

In the first place there is a buffet supper which will be served in conjunction with a minstrel. While the chef at the McAlpin will prepare the former, the latter will be written, staged and acted solely by Fox folks. Outsiders are barred, with one or two exceptions. Injected between the songs and wisecracks of the minstrels will be a number of burlesques on things Fox and things films which will be worth the price of admission in themselves. These also will be acted by home talent.

The committees and their personnel follow: Entertainment—Jack G. Leo, J. R. Grainger, Alexander Kempner, Douglas N. Tauszig and Harry Reinhardt; In Charge of Arrangements—Roger Ferri, Clarence Elmer, Alan Freedman and Fred Bullock; Ticket distribution—Jack Sichelman, Aaron Fox, W. E. Sennett, W. R. Hitter, Milton Harris, John Weinberg and Moe Altman; Program—William Freedman, Dan Doherty, Joe Fine, Donn McEllwaine; Publicity—Vivian Moses, Dan Doherty, Charles Cohen, Joe Fine; Music—Harry Kosner, Luke Stager; Secretarial—Deon Di Titta, Doris Berman, Ida Myckon; Wardrobe—Moe Altman, Ted Altman.

When D. W. Griffith visited Cecil B. DeMille on "The King of Kings" set recently, DeMille relinquished his megaphone to Griffith for one scene. In the background are Montagu Love, Casson Ferguson, Rudolph Schildkraut and Sam De Grasse

Wampas Ball Plans Set

THREE notables of the screen world will "engineer" activities at the sixth annual Wampas Frolic and Ball to be staged in the Ambassador auditorium, Thursday evening, February 17. Selection of the trio, on members of which will devolve the responsibility for rapid-fire action throughout the hours of the big cinema-social fete, has just been made by the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers—the Wampas.

Fred Niblo, whose standing as a director—cinema and otherwise—ranks second to none in the film colony, has been named as master of ceremonies and to him will fall the introduction of the cinema celebrities, including the 1927 Wampas Baby Stars, and certain of the major stage attractions on the program.

The first person to greet Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president and production chief of Famous Players-Lasky, upon his arrival in Los Angeles was his mother, Madame Sarah Lasky. It was the first time in eight years that he had not alighted at Pasadena and motored to Hollywood

Charlie Murray, comedian par excellence, who says he has been "mastering ceremonies" for a quarter of a century, has been selected as "master of laughs," so to him will be entrusted the introduction of the comedy elements of the Wampas Frolic bill.

Lew Cody, whose suave manner and easy presence has made him much sought at big gatherings of all kinds in and about the film colony, has been chosen for a new phase of Wampas Frolic activities to be introduced this year. Lew is given the title, "master of the ladies," and everyone who knows Lew is agreeing that this title logically belongs to Cody. He is expected to make the most of it during the progress of the frolic and ball.

Gloria Hostess at Tea

GLORIA SWANSON gave a tea to the press on Wednesday afternoon in her apartment at the Park Chambers, which was attended by many of the leading writers for the fan, daily and trade papers. Lois Wilson, who is a neighbor to Gloria at the Park Chambers, was also on hand, and Conrad Veidt dropped in after a reception to the press of his own at the Marguery. Gloria was here, there and everywhere, seeing to it that everyone was provided for and happy, and she finally decided that a "scooter" would have facilitated matters.

Tom Mix welcomes his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Mix, of DuBois, Pa., on their first visit to Hollywood, where they will spend the rest of the winter with him

Captain Ariel Varges, chief cameraman of International Newsreel's Far Eastern bureau, always manages to be on hand when a war breaks out. Here he is in the trenches at Honan with General Wu Pei-fu's army, filming the Chinese revolution

Langdon's Shrewd Broadcast

HARRY LANGDON, First National comedy star, seems to have acted on a live hunch when he broadcast the Catalina Island swim for the benefit of America's sport fans recently. The stunt was a tie-up with "Long Pants," the comic's latest feature, which is scheduled for release the end of February. The surprise came with the winning of the race by George Young, whose 17 years place him right within the circle of adolescence depicted by Harry in his new picture.

Langdon, long a devout radio fan, financed the installation and operation of a huge broadcasting station aboard the steamship Avalon, official convoy of the marathon swimmers. His studio orchestra was sent aboard to provide music during the interval of broadcasting bulletins.

The portable station itself, operating on a low wave length, was heard as far east as Cincinnati. It was picked up by a station on Catalina Island, and by KNX in Hollywood, and re-broadcast over the country. The stations in turn, were picked up and re-broadcast by stations in Portland, Chicago, St. Louis, Denver and more than a dozen eastern cities.

Colonel Brady Convalescing

FRIENDS of Colonel Jasper Ewing Brady, dramatic editor of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will be pleased to know he is now rapidly convalescing from his severe illness, and expects to return to work by February 1.

On December 21st last, Colonel Brady collapsed on the train while en route to his home in Bronxville, N.Y. The next day he was brought to Memorial Hospital, 106th Street and Central Park West, and the long fight began. During Christmas week, several times Colonel Brady was almost gone, but the old fighting army spirit never gave way, and gradually health returned. Three blood transfusions were necessary before the turn for the better came.

Colonel Brady has the distinction of being the Dean of Motion Picture Editors, having been four years with the old Vitagraph, one year with Universal and ten years with Metro. He also has had a distinguished military career, having served in the U.S. Marine Corps, and the U.S. Army for a number of years, filling every grade from Private to Lieut.-Colonel, which commission he now holds in the Reserve Corps, U.S. Army.

Douglas Rothacker Recovering

DOUGLAS D. ROTHACKER'S many friends will be glad to learn that he is rapidly regaining his strength and pep after a serious illness of more than four months. To complete the convalescence now well under way, he has left Chicago for two months' complete rest in the copious and well advertised sunshine of Southern California.

Just before leaving, he said that despite his forced absence for so long a period, Rothacker Industrial Films, Inc. had closed 1926 in an exceptionally prosperous condition and that with new additions to the personnel of the organization and important recent developments promising far wider circulation service for their clients, he could see nothing ahead but one whale of a year.

He did not care to enlarge on his remarks at this time however, except regarding his New York office, located at 542 Fifth Avenue, which has just been placed in charge of Howard S. Moss, a practical and thoroughly capable advertising and moving picture man.

Marcus Loew and Party En Route

MARCUS LOEW, who has completely recovered from his recent illness, left Los Angeles in a private car on the Southern Pacific railroad last week for the East. He was accompanied by his wife, his son Arthur Loew, who is in charge of M-G-M's foreign department, and Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M vice-president in charge of production, and the latter's family. Ludwig L. Lawrence of the Paris office was also a member of the party.

Mr. Mayer's next stop will be New York, where he will have a conference with Nicholas M. Schenck about plans for the production and distribution of forthcoming films. Mr. Mayer's family together with Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Loew will go to Florida for a brief holiday.

Another Famous John

WHEN the exciting news reached Hollywood that Ned Marin, a sales manager of First National Pictures, had become the proud father of a baby boy which was christened John Marin, Johnny Hines lost no time in having a placque made for the new arrival which admits him to the Society of Famous Johns along with John Bull, Johnny-Get-Your-Gun, John Barleycorn, John D., John Wanamaker, John Doe, Stage Door John and John the Barber.

A Newcomer Advances

WHEN "The Wedding March" comes to the screen at some future date, after Mr. Von Stroheim puts his final okey on it, it is expected to bring some little acclaim to a comparative newcomer who appears in it, Madlyn Lamping. Those who have seen the picture in its uncut stages are enthusiastic about the picture and about her work in it. A Hollywood society woman, born in Canada, of English and Irish descent, she brings a type of beauty to the screen not often met with.

Monty Banks Returns

MONTY BANKS, starring in feature comedies for Pathe, reached New York City on January 11 on the S.S. Aquitania after spending the holidays in his native Italy. He had been planning the trip for some time and was speeding up work on the current picture when he received word of his mother's death in Italy. He was unable, however, to reach there in time for the funeral services.

Keefe to Repeat Stage Role

JESS SMITH, who is producing "The Poor Nut" for First National release, has signed Cornelius Keefe, of the original Broadway cast of the play, for the same role in the screen version which he played on the stage.

Kessler Given Dinner

HUGO KESSLER, head of the Efficient Employment Exchange, and Miss Jean Lubey, formerly head of the clerical department of Famous Players, were married recently and were presented with a handsome chest of silverware by friends in the industry. A bachelor dinner, given for Mr. Kessler at the Frivolity Club, was attended by a number of well-known film personages.

Seeing "The Roxy" With Roxy

On Personally Conducted Tour, Remarkable Features of Huge "Theatre Picture" Are Revealed

BY THOMAS C. KENNEDY

As one who, during the current week, inspected the "innards" of the Roxy Theatre, in New York, the writer can add his nod of assent to the growing chorus which chants about the extraordinary beauty of color, line and form of this newest and largest of palatial motion picture houses. Moreover, there can be added the assertion that S. L. Rothafel, drawing upon a wealth of experience in the theatre and his imagination, has worked out in the minutest detail resources of equipment for picture presentations, stage "pictures" and musical renditions, that will afford him the greatest latitude for the development of his ideas in entertainment.

"What about pictures?" is a question frequently asked in the trade in connection with the Roxy. We did not get the chance to put that query before Roxy informed us that "the picture situation has adjusted itself nicely. I have positive assurances that we can draw upon the release schedules of every company, save one, in the business. And I don't think it will be long before we can also have pictures from that one.

"The situation, beyond saying that, cannot be discussed in detail at this time. As to the policy of the Roxy with regard to length of run, that cannot be definitely determined until we open the house. There is such a demand, however, that I feel sure that bills will of necessity be shown for more than a week's time.

"It is too soon," he told us "to discuss the policy of the other houses in the Roxy circuit. We will not present in those theatres the shows offered at the Roxy, but the same standard will be carried into presentations at the other theatres. This we will do by producing here all the numbers which are to be presented and the shows will be circuited as a unit."

The Roxy is Rothafel's "dream palace." On a "personally conducted tour" with Roxy, we got our first glimpse of the auditorium from the center of the stage. Peering off to the left through a crazy-quilt of scaffolding which occupied the middle portion of the auditorium, we saw a fragment of the balcony, a section of finished beauty, done in gold, and indicating the decorative scheme and the design of the whole theatre. It will be a beautifully proportioned bowl, with a warm gold as the predominating color and relieving notes of red.

A Castle in the Air

The interior is a triumph of form and proportion over sheer space. Here is a house with a seating capacity of over six thousand in which there has been preserved that intimacy which is so desirable but which, ordinarily, vanishes in the presence of space. That section of the balcony, seemingly suspended in space, seemed more like a castle in the air than anything we have ever seen outside a picture frame. Truly this showman has reached up into the clouds and brought down a castle.

The auditorium, laid corner-wise in the square formed by the walls, is in the form of a fan, with beautifully proportioned lines curving across the horizontal and vertical planes of the huge picture. From the proscenium, the outside lines of the stage converge to a point at the rear—thus working out a new principle in the theatre but yet old in acoustics, since it is simply a gigantic megaphone.

There are really two stages, with an elevating device. Back of the well in which the elevating stage is erected, is a cyclorama trough, and back of that at the point of the V which the stage forms, will be located complicated projection apparatus for producing "effects."

The orchestra pit, which will accomodate 110 musicians, in addition to three organ consoles, forms a semi-circle at the base of the fan. The pit will be equipped with an elevating floor, with separate sections for the consoles and a concert grand piano, which can be lifted above the orchestra when piano concertos are presented.

The Roxy will be illuminated by indirect lighting, auditorium and stage lights being controlled from what is the largest and perhaps the most ingenious switchboard in the world. The house will be fitted with a public address system, and will have facilities for Vitaphone presentations.

Unique Seating Plan

Though the largest theatre, the design of the Roxy brings the chairs in the farthest points of the house several feet closer to the stage than many theatres of recent design and smaller capacity. Another feature—the floor of the stage will be visible from all seats, the chairs in the lowest point of the auditorium being several inches above the level of the stage. Thus, those who take seats 'way up front, will not see a cut-off version of any dancer or performer, as is commonly the case in front rows.

The organ pipes are to be located under the stage, the orchestra pit thus serving as a sound chamber from which the organ notes will be "hurled" into the auditorium.

The inner lobby of the Roxy is circular, surmounted by a dome, done in gold and supported by large columns of green marble. A large circular staircase at the left leads to the mezzanine and on through this lobby to the right will be elevators to carry patrons to the balcony. A pipe organ is to be installed in this outer lobby.

In an industry that donned seven-league boots with its swaddling clothes, the "great events" which proverbially "cast their shadows before" tread one another's heels, streaming in endless procession across a stage that throbs with action and bewilders the spectator with its glittering "Pageant of Progress." Ordinarily the heralding shadow soon flickers out in the effulgence of the event itself, and the onlookers blink, rub their eyes and fasten their attention on another deepening outline.

As March 4—the tentative date for the opening of the new Roxy—approaches, the portentious silhouette of another extraordinary enterprise of motion picture showmanship assumes definite outline, with the public feeling the pressure of cumulative interest, generated by a personality and advance publicity, and the trade observers assuming a somewhat self-conscious attitude of puzzled curiosity, the while speculating as to what influence Roxy's new presentation ideas will have on picture entertainments generally.

All in Terms of Pictures

Third "Roxy" Theatre at 75th Street and Broadway, New York City

Through a three-cornered transaction entered into this week between the Chanin Construction Company, the Havemeyer Construction Company and the Roxy Circuit, Inc., a plot of 29,000 square feet of ground in New York City situated on the south side of 75th Street, with 212 feet of frontage on that street, 160 feet on Broadway and 150 feet of frontage on Amsterdam Avenue, becomes the site for Roxy's Midway, the third unit in the chain to be operated by the Roxy Circuit.

The Chanin Company secured the ground about nine months ago and sold it to the Havemeyer group which will carry out the original ideas of the Chanins for a theatre of four thousand seats and a 23-story residential and transient hotel to cost about $8,000,000. Walter W. Ahlschlager, who designed the first two Roxy theatres, will be the architect for the Midway, with the Chanins remaining as consulting engineers and builders for the Roxy interests. The house will be modeled along the lines of the Roxy.

Herbert Lubin negotiated the deal for the Roxy Circuit; the theatre will be under the general direction of Mr. Rothafel and W. E. Atkinson will be vice-president and general manager. The whole transaction involves about $10,000,000.

New St. Paul Theatre May be Nucleus of Another Northwest Circuit

WHAT may be the start of a new theatre combine in the Northwest territory is hinted at in the announcement by William A. Mustard and Oliver A. Rowe, of the construction of a theatre, costing $750,000, in St. Paul, Minn. Mr. Rowe stated there is a possibility that a new chain may be effected by combining the independent houses of the Northwest. He believes a new circuit, to include St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and other cities, will be entirely practical in the near future.

The theatre to be erected will have a seating capacity of 3,000 and erection will start within 30 days. It is to be located on West Seventh Street between Sixth and St. Peters Streets and is expected to be completed by November first. It is said that the recent announcement that Publix would enter the Minneapolis field with a new theatre hastened the St. Paul project.

F. P.-L. to Concentrate on Week-Run Films

Declares Lasky; Plans Start of Production on 24 Pictures Before March Fifteenth

THAT the motion picture which can hold the attention of the public for a week is the type of production which will prove most popular in the future is the contention of Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Famous Players. The production head for Paramount made this declaration in an interview given out at his New York headquarters after a trip to the Hollywood studios, where he inaugurated plans for the start of filming on twenty-four pictures of this nature, to be in work before March 15th.

While road shows are important, as the company has attested in preparing eight pictures, which come in this class, the production forces both at Long Island and Hollywood will concentrate on pictures such as are being shown at the Paramount Theatre in New York, said Mr. Lasky. When this theatre was built a new type of motion picture was established, and it was decided that the kind of picture which could stand a week's run in a 4,000-seat house would be the class of production made in the greatest number by Paramount, continued the Famous production head.

Practically every theatre which presents the weekly feature, every neighborhood playhouse which offers the picture for a day or two, has a definite relationship with the Paramount Theatre, he continued. It is this great body of theatres which forms the backbone of the industry, and pictures must be made which deserve presentation in the finest theatres in the world in order that they shall win popularity in every other theatre, stated Mr. Lasky.

"Unconsciously, almost, the standard of the weekly-change picture has been raised. Its demands are greater and more insistent. It is the bread and butter of the industry," said Mr. Lasky in conclusion.

Directors Meet in Chicago Theatre Equipm't Assoc.

THE Board of Directors of the Theatre Equipment Association held its regular meeting at the association's headquarters, 1018 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, at 10 A.M., Monday, January 17, with J. H. Hertner, presiding. The following directors were present: S. S. Behrends, Chicago; J. E. McAuley, Chicago; W. E. Green, New York City; Irving Samuels, Allentown, Pa., and C. D. Struble, Chicago.

Matters of private importance were discussed and it was decided that the next annual convention would be held in New York City about July 18, 1927.

The following Arrangement Committee was appointed: W. E. Green, New York City; Irving Samuels, Allentown, Pa.; J. C. Kroesen, Harrison, N.J.

Sam Lears resigned as secretary and Miss Mary M. O'Neill was appointed to succeed him. Many new members were added to the present membership list. The treasury of the association is in a very healthy condition and the directors are looking forward to the continued prosperity in the equipment line.

Raymond Evans New M. P. Head in Dep't. Agriculture

The title of "In Charge of Motion Pictures" will hereafter be borne by Raymond Evans, recently appointed chief of the office of Motion Pictures, United States Department of Agriculture, according to C. W. Warburton, director of Extension Work. Mr. Evans succeeds F. W. Perkins, who recently resigned this position. Edward Kelly, who has been film editor in the office of Motion Pictures for five years, has been elevated to the post of assistant chief of the office.

tinue to be a theatrical dish served exclusively in New York.

As the showman credited with taking the motion picture out of the store-show class and making it a de luxe entertainment, S. L. Rothafel has had his imitators before, and it is not venturing into prophecy to say that there will be cinema palaces, and movie houses too, in various parts of the land where the "a la Roxy" show will be served in good, bad and indifferent fashion. There is only the question "how successful will be the efforts of the imitators, and will the type of show become stylish, with the rank and file of picturegoers demanding that kind and that kind only?"

With regard to Roxy, it is not so much a question as to what he will do, but rather how will he do it? Rothafel's ideas on motion picture entertainments are too well known to take on at this time any flavor of mystery. He—perhaps exclusively among the showmen—thinks in terms of "pictures." His shows are built with the idea of creating pictures—all pictures, but as he puts it "not all the pictures are on celluloid." His stage presentations partake mostly of the choreographic art, to which he adds music—good music—but this also has its pictorial side, a feat accomplished with lighting.

He faces the enormous task of devising shows to the scale of this extraordinary theatre with supreme confidence. "You have a job," we suggested, "a real job on your hands in sealing a show up to the point where it will get across to people luxuriating in the atmosphere of that theatre." That seemed a laugh to Roxy. "We haven't fallen down yet, and we're not going to now," he said.

Brilliant Array of Talent

He has surrounded himself with a brilliant array of talent, and he proposes to conduct the Roxy as a thoroughgoing "art theatre." Everything presented there will be worked up, designed, devised and executed in the Roxy. He has engaged Leo Staats, celebrated master of the Ballet of the National Opera of Paris, as ballet master. Four musicians of wide experience and marked accomplishment in the theatre have been signed up to conduct the orchestra. They are Erno Rapee, Frederick Stahlberg, Charles Previn and H. Maurice Jacquet. All four will be on an equal plane, and they will perform as directors of the orchestra on a rotating plan under which Roxy hopes to bring out the fullest resources of the musical organization. The director who conducts the overture this week, next week will act as relief conductor to follow the overture director to the stand on its completion. "The plan will overcome that 'let down' which is always so noticeable after the conductor has completed the overture and turns the band over to an assistant," Roxy says.

He has prepared many another innovation, small details of staging and large ideas as to showmanship. To attempt to detail them with any approach to completeness would carry us on and on through a massive volume studded with foot-notes. From where we stand, the view is sufficiently impressive to make it certain that Roxy has everything with which to work and the significance of that is great, for we have all seen how he can perform in a role in which he is an acknowledged artistic and popular success—that of showman.

Urges Lower Newspaper Rate

H. M. Newman, Publisher of the Fourth Estate, Gives Constructive Reasons for Removing Penalty

(EDITOR'S NOTE—The following article was written by H. M. Newman, publisher of "The Fourth Estate," trade paper in the newspaper field. It gives, in concise form, the constructive reasons why newspapers should give picture theatres run-of-paper rate. It is highly significant that a trade paper of the newspapers is advocating this step. Exhibitors everywhere will be interested in what Mr. Newman has to say.

BY H. M. NEWMAN

Publisher, The Fourth Estate

THE fact that my appeal for run-of-paper newspaper advertising rates for motion picture advertisers pleased the motion picture industry is more or less accidental.

I hold no brief for motion pictures, or their allied interests, or their man-power. I do, however, hold a brief for American newspapers. It is a part of my duty as the publisher of "The Fourth Estate," now entering its thirty-fourth year as the newspapers' foremost trade journal and advertising paper, to attempt to secure for American newspapers the highest type representation in their advertising pages possible to secure.

It is my duty to point out to advertisers a fact of common knowledge, to the effect that there is no medium in existence which can be intelligently used by the motion picture advertiser over a period of time for the protection of his investment, both in physical property and good-will, except the newspaper.

The American newspaper is a close friend of the American family. It forms opinions and furnishes topics of conversation, and is the basic educational structure of homes. It is the only advertising medium that day after day affects the consciousness of the family group seriously and importantly.

I believe the motion picture advertiser is entitled to the run-of-paper rate on the same basis as the radio, automobile, tooth paste, shaving brushes and pianos, because of its development away from the old circus methods into the importance of being the fourth industry in our country to-day.

Believing this, I feel the necessity of permitting it to grow still larger, and to defend its present growth in the advertising pages of newspapers on a parity with other commodities highly competitive in their marketing.

I am not talking of publicity, since the question of free publicity has no part in this strictly commercial discussion. Publicity must not be sought by the motion picture advertiser from the newspaper except as, if and when it has strict news value. The fact that the industry creates and purveys entertainments is no logical argument against the diminution of the amusement rate penalty.

In the early years of automobile advertising the direct appeal of automobile copy was based on entertainment, amusement and relaxation. The entertainment appeal of the radio industry to-day is even more direct, and every radio set sold is a wooden wired admission ticket to entertainment and nothing else. No other claim is made for it. Surely, motion pictures are entitled to the same treatment in the advertising of their goods. It is not a question of demanding this from the newspapers. It is a question of requesting, with reasons therefor. These reasons your industry should be more familiar with than any one else, and it certainly has demonstrated its ability to intelligently present any subject.

I have watched motion pictures grow from the old days to their present position, and I respect them for the progress they have made. I have watched newspapers grow into the strongest advertising medium in the civilized world. They have problems too, and it may be that they are unconsciously penalizing this industry for its past many mistakes. It is conceivable that they have made no more mistakes than any other industry, but possibly on account of their more rapid growth those mistakes have been more noticeable.

It is not a time for condemnation, but a time for reconstruction of opinion, and the motion picture industry can be assured that newspapers will recognize more quickly the argument of reason than any other. A great number of important newspapers now accord motion pictures the run-of-paper rate for their advertising, and the rest will follow as they understand your problems and their solution.

German Writer Sums Up Views

Sees Danger in Too High Admission Prices, Too Many Roadshows, Costly Production

By Harry Knopf

(Film-Journal, Berlin)

Harry Knopf

IN the six months that I have lived in the United States, studying the motion picture industry the mightiest in the world, I have seen much that could probably never happen in Europe. Over there we live in a different atmosphere. We have been left far behind in most things. We have had to recover from the war; and, undoubtedly, the American people will understand what that means in the way of reconstruction. Your own great South was confronted with a similar problem following the close of Civil War. With the cessation of hostilities in 1918 came the revolution which held up all work of a constructive nature for three years, so that Germany did not enter upon an active period of rehabilitation until 1922. In the five years that have intervened considerable progress has been made both politically and industrially, and at the present time the great body of Germany's population is looking forward expectantly to a time within the near future when their country will take something of her old place among the leading countries of the world. And in the general progress that has been experienced within the past half decade the German motion picture industry occupies no insignificant place. In fact, that which seemed wholly impossible but a few years ago now promises to be a reality within a very brief space of time.

However, in this article it is my intention not to discuss conditions in Germany but rather to talk about conditions in America as they impress a German observer. This is not an easy assignment to set one's self to. Things happen very quickly here; changes come with every hour. Affairs even in a single industry do not "stay put" long enough to permit of ready analysis. However, I have the advantage of viewing the problem as an "outsider." I have been sufficiently apart from the things that I am going to talk about as to be able to view the matters calmly, judiciously, and, therefore, probably with a truer perspective of the factors involved.

In the matter of theatres, Germany is far behind America both in the number of motion picture houses catering to the public and in seating capacity.

The biggest house in Berlin—the Ufa Palast am Zoo—has three thousand seats, or just about half of the seating capacity which the new "Roxy" Theatre in New York City will have when completed. The average Berlin theatre has only three performances daily. The bigger houses run a mixed program of pictures and stage presentations. As in America, there are many critics who are adverse to this arrangement, maintaining that motion picture houses should run only film attractions. My opinion after viewing the performances in New York film theatres is that the mixed program is a decidedly good thing from the box-office angle. I feel that where a mediocre feature is being shown the stage presentation has the virtue of bolstering up the entire program.

The star system so prevalent in the American film industry offers a real obstacle to foreign producers and stars desirous of making their mark on the American screen. Your star system serves to make the American public conscious of cer-

Kennedy To Direct Motion Picture Course At Harvard

Joseph P. Kennedy

THE Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration announces that, beginning March 15, a series of lectures and discussions by leaders in the motion picture industry will form an integral part of its curriculum in the course of Business Policy for the second half-year. This series will be under the direction of Joseph P. Kennedy, Harvard, '12, president of Film Booking Offices of America, Inc. Among those who have already accepted invitations to lead discussions in connection with the lectures are Will Hays, president of the M.P.P.D.A.; Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Jesse Lasky, Harry M. Warner, Cecil B. DeMille, Sidney R. Kent and A. H. Giannini, president of the East River National Bank of New York.

This is the first time that any of the larger American universities has so actively recognized the importance of motion pictures in business and in the life of the nation. The Business School believes that as a business school it should introduce into its regular course what has now become one of the half-dozen largest industries in the country. The number of persons engaged in it is relatively small, but the motion picture industry is now in close contact with and has an important and direct influence on a large proportion of the public in the United States.

The Harvard Business School is prompted to sponsor this series of lectures primarily for three reasons: the need and opportunity for trained business men in the industry, the influence that the films in this or any other country must have on the lives of its people, and because the motion pictures serve as an illustration of an industry which has grown so rapidly that all stages in its commercial development may be clearly traced.

The lectures, covering all phases of the industry, will be given three times a week in the course in Business Policy, a required course for all students in their second and final year in the Harvard Business School. These lectures will be given in the new Business School building of the George F. Baker Foundation, and will include the points of view of the distributor, the banker, the producer and the director.

German Writer Sums Up Views of America

tain outstanding personalities almost to the complete exclusion of all other values entering into a production. The star's the thing, in most instances to the American way of thinking, and the advertising and exploitation methods pursued by American showmen encourage this public concept of picture values.

In New York I was impressed by the tremendous importance of musical synchronization for motion pictures. Of course, the Germans with such pictures as "Siegfried" have worked along this line, but for the average motion picture little is done. The orchestra and musical direction at the Capitol Theatre is the finest I have heard.

Admission prices in all American houses seem to me to be scaled much too high. Perhaps this is due to the almost unlimited prosperity of your country, but nevertheless, I think this race to see who can charge the most and get away with it will not lead to the best results for the industry. There are too many road-shows. At any rate, there are too many shows at road-show prices when actually they are puffed up for exploitation purposes. In Berlin the highest price for admission is 75 cents. All the great super-specials will play there for this price.

Even in your production, you seem to go into this race to see who can spend the most. It would be much better to encourage individuality and originality in productions and forget for a momnet the idea that a picture's value is measured only by the amount of money spent making it. I am no prophet and there is much about American production I don't know but it seems clear to me that this race to spend money is going to turn out disastrous. Some company is going to spend a monstrous sum and find itself loaded with expensive pictures that won't draw at the box-office. Some other conditions may happen to strain things and there is going to be a financial crash.

I must commend the spirit of co-operation that exists between the motion picture industry and the newspaper world. So many of the film personages are former newspapermen, and there exists a keen appreciation and a helpful attitude. I cannot truthfully leave this statement without registering my surprise that the job of a motion picture critic is often entrusted to young, sentimental girls. With all their enthusiasm and interest these girls have not the experience and critical inclination that distinguishes a mature writer. Motion picture criticism written by these girls can be of no use to the industry—unless it is as a barometer of the reactions of a certain part of the general public.

The recent spectacle of four foreign-made productions playing day and date in Broadway theatres is a significant sign of the possibilities of imported productions on the American screen in the future. America is known for its sportsmanship, for its fairness in the matter of giving credit where credit is due irrespective of creed or nationality. We have the feeling that the same spirit of fairness that manifests itself on the field of competitive sport will hold sway when it comes to a matter of judging the merit or demerit of foreign-made screen productions. The picture from the foreign studio will be taken at its entertainment value. The cordial welcome extended to foreign stars and directors recently brought to America confirms me in this opinion. Truly, as your Will Hays recently stated, the motion picture screen is destined to prove to be the greatest instrument placed in the hands of humanity to promite understanding and good fellowship between nation and nation.

For myself I want to express to Motion Picture News especially, to the American newspapers, magazines, trade-organs and the film industry, my personal appreciation for their cordiality and co-operation. I shall bring back to my German associates of the press the kindest remembrances of my journalistic associations on this side of the Atlantic. For me it is not "Good-bye" but "Auf Wiedersehen."

In and Out of Town

MORRIS SAFIER, head of Warner Bros.' Extended Run special sales department, is now en route to the Middle-West exchanges. He will visit Cleveland, Chicago, Minneapolis and on his return take in Atlanta, Ga.

HENRI ELLMAN, Columbia Pictures' representative in the Chicago and Indianapolis districts, is now in New York conferring with Columbia officials on several important matters having to do with distribution of the company's product.

EDWARD L. KLEIN, film exporter, sails for Europe, January 28, on the S.S. Majestic, in the interests of the Edward L. Klein Corporation and the International American Cinema Corporation. He will visit over a dozen of the European countries and will then return to New York by way of London. His trip is for the purpose of further cementing the relationships existing between foreign distributors and his own organization, and also for the purpose of completing the foreign distribution of the A.C.A. product.

J. LEO MEEHAN, F.B.O. director, arrived in New York this week to confer with J. P. Kennedy, J. I. Schnitzer and other executives of the F.B.O. home office. Though the length of his stay in New York is undetermined, it is known that he is here primarily to submit a few of his original and pet ideas for future productions.

What's Wrong With Our Scenario Methods?

HAS it ever occurred to you that perhaps our whole system of continuity writing may be basically wrong, and that that is at the root of many of the shortcomings and failures in production today? And that scenario writing is virtually where it was 15 years ago, while nearly every other department of production has advanced steadily?

That is the interesting contention advanced in an article, "No One Can 'Write' a Motion Picture," by L. C. Moen, a member of the News editorial staff, which starts next week.

Nothing in the industry is claiming more attention today than stories, and the continuity is the vital link between the story and the finished photoplay. The author advances the claim that the present type of continuity is an inadequate makeshift which frequently hampers more than it helps, and that that is the reason why so many of our pictures are virtually made in the cutting room. The present continuity, he points out, is a thing wholly of words—literary and uncinematic—and the director, the actor and the cutter must transmute it into pictured motion. In pointing out why this is wrong, the author says:

"No man has yet 'written' a motion picture, and no man ever will. No sculptor ever 'carved' a sonata, and no musician ever 'composed' a bas-relief. . . . As though any great picture had ever needed any more story than could be written on the director's cuff—and as though a literary artist, trained in the beauty and force of words, were any more likely to be able to create such a story than any other human being. . . . The fault lies not with the scenarists. They are perhaps the most intelligent and hard working group in the industry, but they are facing an impossible task. The fault lies in the method furnished them—in the fundamentally wrong basic thought underlying production today. . . . The solution is so obvious that no one has thought of it, except here and there in scattered flashes. . . . The director could accomplish more were he expected to accomplish less."

These few quotations will illustrate some of the vital points touched upon. The article is daringly frank—it will arouse discussion and possibly strong disagreement—but it will make you think about motion pictures in a different light than you have perhaps thought of them before.

Mother of Whitehurst Bros., Balt. Theatre Men, Dead

After an illness of two months, Mrs. Anna L. Whitehurst Taylor, mother of the late Charles E. Whitehurst and Dr. J. Herbert Whitehurst, president of the Whitehurst theatrical interests of Baltimore, died Sunday night, January 23rd, at her home in Baltimore. Two other sons, who are engaged in the theatrical business in Baltimore, are Dr. Milton Whitehurst and William H. Whitehurst. The body will be interred in Loudon Park Cemetery.

Executives Stress Need For Better Stories

Showmanship Vital Point, Rowland and Schnitzer Declare; Mere Literary Writers Won't Do

J. I. Schnitzer

Richard A. Rowland

EXECUTIVES of two important production and distribution companies this week voiced the crying need for more stories and better stories with distinct showmanship angles. Richard A. Rowland, general manager of First National, said:

"There are rarely more than six or eight stories written a year that can be transferred in their entirety to the screen.

"There are seldom more than half a dozen great themes worked out each twelve-month, but the yearly output of motion pictures must continue and competition grows more keen as the industry advances.

"Film fans have been educated to good entertainment, and they expect the sort of amusement they are rightly entitled to for their support of the industry.

"Entertainment does not necessarily mean lavishness, for simple, interesting stories are just as important as spectacles.

"Now, then, writers should be encouraged.

"But beautifully chiseled words are not sufficient for a screen story.

"The story must be combined with showmanship; in other words, it must have a running theme, novelty or fantasy, perhaps, or even plain sordidness, but it must have more action!"

"The showman-writer," according to J. I. Schnitzer, senior vice-president of F.B.O., "will be a development of the swiftly changing motion picture scene."

"What the industry requires right now," says the F.B.O. executive, "are showmen-writers rather than merely literary writers. The writer who can write from the angle of the practical showman, and at the same time put across character and plot effectively in the terms of motion pictures, will prove a most helpful factor in the season to come.

"The crying need of the business, as I see it to-day, is showmanship. We must have showmen-directors, showmen-writers, showmen-producers, showmen-distributors. The beginning and end of our business is showmanship.

"We are interested, of course, in certain art phases of the motion picture, but in our efforts to achieve perfection in the technical forms, we cannot afford to overlook the all-vital angles of showmanship on which this fascinating business is built.

"The new season will be marked by more spirited competition than ever before. And it will be the competition of practical showmanship in which the exhibitor will be chiefly interested."

Mother of Sydney Abel Passes Away

Mrs. J. Abel, mother of Sydney Abel, formerly in charge of the foreign department of Fox Films, and now associated with United Artists, died yesterday at the Abel home, 5242 Hyde Park Boulevard, Chicago. The deceased had been an invalid for several years.

U. A. Purchases 60 Acres in Culver City, Calif., for New Studio

JOHN W. CONSIDINE, president of Feature Productions, Inc., a producing unit for United Artists, announced this week the purchase of 60 acres of land in Culver City, Calif., on which will be erected a new studio to help take care of the expansion in U. A. production. The new site is at the south-east intersection of Jefferson Boulevard and Overland Avenue; $750,000 has been appropriated for construction and erection will be started immediately.

In addition to the new studio the present plant is being enlarged and three more permanent stages are being constructed. The administration offices of most of the producers, stars and directors will be housed in the old studio. Mr. Considine estimates that the combined cost of enlarging the old studio and building the new will be almost $3,500,000.

M. P. Bills Prepared in 20 States

South Carolina—Repeal of present existing 10 per cent tax.

Tennessee—Censorship, 10 per cent tax, Sunday closing, prohibiting children from attendance in theatres except with parent or guardian.

Utah—Sunday closing, bill to regulate Ward houses using pictures.

Berman to Make Continental & Internat. Films

ABE BERMAN, until recently foreign representative for United Artists, sailed Friday, January 28, on the Majestic bound for Europe. Mr. Berman will go to Germany and, on his arrival there, organize a producing company with the object of making pictures, some for Continental consumption and others with an international theme which will be marketed both in this country and throughout Europe.

Mr. Berman is making this move because he feels the need of closer cooperation between the American and German film industries, and believes that his knowledge of both may be of value in bringing this about.

Ambassador, Washington, D.C., Robbed of $2,000

Washington, D.C., experienced the methods of modern banditry January 23, when an unmasked man entered the office of Robert Etris, manager of the Ambassador Theatre, one of the Stanley-Crandall chain there, and relieved that official of some $2,000, comprising the receipts of the Saturday and Sunday performances. He has not been captured.

The robber, a well-dressed young man, paid his way into the theatre shortly before the box office closed for the evening. He went to the manager's office, adjoining the auditorium, where he backed Mr. Etris, Donald E. Gerow, his assistant, and two ushers up against the wall. He then gathered up the receipts, which were being checked up, and left, warning his victims to give him ten minutes leeway or he would begin shooting and start a panic among the audience.

Ray L. Hall, new editor of Pathe News

Berton E. Moisant Producing Manager of Castle Films

Eugene W. Castle, producer of Castle Films Novelties, Short Shots, etc., has appointed Berton E. Moisant as production manager, in complete charge of all production activities on the series of Castle Novelties and the editing of the Castle Short Shots. Mr. Moisant is now en route to New York to assume his new duties.

During the war, Moisant, his camera and personnel were responsible for the photography of the Signal Corps war subjects of the Official War Review. Upon his return from the service he became assistant editor and chief cameraman of the Pacific Coast editions of Fox News, and later the staff representative of International News in southern California.

Eugene W. Castle plans to increase his production activities in the East, beginning February 15th. He will devote his entire time to the exploitation and distribution of Castle product.

Ground Broken for New Publix Theatre in Seattle

THE first step toward the making of the Seattle, the new Publix house planned for Seattle, Wash., was taken the other day when ground was broken for the new cinema palace which will boast of a seating capacity of over 3,000, and which will be part of a nine-story commercial and studio apartment building. It is expected that early next winter will see the new theatre in readiness for operation.

C. W. and George L. Rapp have prepared the plans for the structure, which will be similar in character to the Paramount in New York. The architecture is of the French Renaissance type and among its outstanding features will be a grand hall of palatial proportions. The policy of the house calls for feature pictures coupled with the Publix presentations.

Propose Que. Comm'n Regulate Film Business

A COMMISSION form of government for all phases of the motion picture business in Quebec has been proposed by Ernest W. Sayer, member of the Quebec Legislature for the Constituency of St. Lawrence, Montreal, and is likely to be adopted by that legislative body.

The proposal provides for the appointment of five persons, representing different departments of the film and theatre worlds, who would absorb the present Quebec Board of Moving Picture Censors and would also have direct control of all phases of theatre control, including poster censorship.

The new commission would be answerable to the Attorney-General's Department of the Quebec Provincial Government and the new body would be authorized to issue any orders deemed necessary and have the power to see that the orders are obeyed to the letter.

The Quebec Commission regulations would be the law in its entirety to film exchanges, exhibitors and the theatre-going public, according to Mr. Sayer. The only opponent so far to the plan is Mayor Mederic Martin of Montreal who has declared that the commission takes away some of the powers and revenue of the City of Montreal.

Appointments in Ranks of Tiffany's Personnel

Two appointments in the ranks of the workers of the Tiffany organization were made public this week by M. J. Hoffman, Tiffany vice-president. William P. Schramm has become manager of the contract and sales departments while Harry Goldstein, of Boston, was given the post of special representative of the Tiffany company. Schramm came to the Hoffman organization from Fox Films to manage a sales promotion department and non-theatrical branch, in which capacities he had previously acted for Fox Films. Goldstein has already assumed his new duties and has left for Cincinnati, where he will assist the local Tiffany branch office in that territory.

The announcement further states that Marcel Mekelburg has joined the Boston Tiffany exchange with headquarters in Boston.

Broad-Front Realty Acquires Property in Trenton, N.J.

The Broad-Front Realty Company has acquired, through its president, Sidney S. Cohen of New York, the entire property consisting of a five-story business building at the northeast corner of South Bend and Front streets, Trenton, N.J., and has leased the corner store and upper floors to Gimbel Stores, Inc., to house a department store for a long period of time at an aggregrate rental of $1,600,000. The dimensions of the property are 50 x 150. Gimbel Stores have occupied the property for the past twenty years.

The company has also leased the store premises at 34 South Broad Street to the New York Cotton Stores, Inc., for a term of 30 years at an aggregate rental of about $600,000. The property is now undergoing extensive structural improvements.

Quimby Joins Hal Roach

To Handle Comedy Distribution Throughout the World; Leaves For Europe Shortly

Fred C. Quimby

FRED C. QUIMBY, short-subject sales manager for Fox Films, for the past two years, and prior to that, general sales manager on the board of directors of Pathe, has signed a five-year contract with Hal Roach to handle the world-wide distribution of the Roach product. He arrived in New York this week from the Pacific Coast and will sail next week for Europe on a two or three months' trip in the interest of his new association.

Mr. Quimby's present connection is the result of previous long acquaintanceship with Mr. Roach, as, except during the period of his connection with Fox, he has been associated with the comedy producer ever since he became identified with motion pictures.

"For some time," Mr. Quimby explains, "Mr. Roach and I have been discussing the need and importance to the trade of high-class, two-reel comedies, which are cast with real box office stars. We have been in agreement that such product would be a valuable asset to theatres—tangible, business-building factors instead of the mere fillers which most short subjects are now considered to be.

"After many informal discussions covering an extended period, we have worked out a definite detailed plan, and feel that the time is ripe for putting the project into practical operation. I had told Mr. Roach that if our plans materialized I would like to handle distribution for his studio, and now that he is ready, I have signed a five-year contract with him.

"I was extremely happy in my connection with Fox and would not have considered making a change except on a basis giving me wider opportunities and product, especially adapted to meet the requirements of the market, as my experience has shown them to be."

N. Y. Censorship Costly

Last Report of Commission Show Receipts of Over Million With Half Million Revenue

THE latest and last report of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, presented to Governor Alfred E. Smith, contains, among other data, the fact that censorship in New York has cost producers $1,027,751.38, and, less expenditures of $463,821.86, leaves a revenue to the State of $563,929.52. These figures cover a period running from August 1, 1921, to January 1, 1927; during the past year the Commission brought a revenue to the State of $83,870.64.

The work of the Commission for the past year, according to the report, shows a total of 1,277 eliminations were made from pictures, and that 507 of these eliminations were due to the fact that scenes portrayed tended, in the censors' opinions, to incite to crime. There were 442 eliminations on the grounds that scenes portrayed were inhuman, while alleged indecency resulted in 152 cuts and 141 were due to scenes alleging a tendency to corrupt morals. Alleged sacrilegious scenes caused thirty-five eliminations.

The Commission approved a total of 2,250 pictures. Nine features were condemned in their entirety. Only sixteen appeals were taken during the year by producers from decisions and eliminations made by the Commission.

There is one paragraph of particular interest to the producers of newsreels. It appears that when newsreels were exempted in New York State from inspection by the censoring commission that a complaint was lodged with the Commission to the effect that objectionable pictures would creep into the business under the guise of newsreels. The Commission states in its report that such prediction failed to come true, and not a single criticism of a news or current event film has been filed with the Commission.

The Motion Picture Commission was abolished January 1st of this year, and the censoring of pictures is now being taken care of by a one-man commission, under the direction of the State Educational Department.

Madan, of Calcutta, Sailing for London on Majestic

J. J. Madan, of Calcutta, India, who has spent several months in this country buying the product of American producing concerns for India, is sailing for London to close several important deals, after which he will embark for home. Mr. Madan reports that film conditions in India are very satisfactory. With his new offerings he expects to make American productions more popular than ever in India.

"U" Will Continue to Distribute International News Reel

CARL LAEMMLE this week wired from Universal City a denial of the report that the International News Reel will be distributed by another company next year. "Universal will distribute the International News Reel next year, it will distribute it the following year, and so far as I know, for many years following that," read the Laemmle wire. This supplements the declaration of E. H. Goldstein, Universal treasurer, that Universal's contract for distribution of the reel has several years to run.

E. B. Hatrick, vice-president of the International News Reel Corporation, now in Miami, Florida, wired the following statement:

"Universal Pictures Corporation has been distributing International News Reel for several years past and has a contract to distribute this newsreel for several years more. Stories that this newsreel will be handled by any other company are without foundation."

Alabama Theatre Survey Shows 27 Circuits

Birmingham Claims Seat Record With 51,000 for 327,000 Population; $5,000,000 Payroll

A RECENT survey of the theatre situation in Alabama discloses the fact that there are 243 houses in the State, of which all but eight have a straight motion picture policy; Birmingham, with a population of 327,000 within a radius of 25 miles, claims the theatre seating record for the country with a total capacity of 51,000; this includes suburbs.

According to the survey there are at present 27 theatre circuits (two or three theatres under one management). In forty towns in the State theatres do not run every day, but from one to four nights weekly. There is considerable turn-over in theatre ownership, approximately 40 houses changing hands each year.

Theatre operators in Birmingham and surrounding suburbs and their total holdings are: Publix, three, Birmingham; Inter-State Amusement, three, Birmingham; A. Gravelee, one, Empire; Buck Sigrest, one, Red Star; R. P. Higginbotham, one, Leeds; Henry Skipper, one, Acmar; T. G. Amberson, one, Margaret.

Colored theatres and their operators are: Birmingham—Dunbar, J. P. Savage; Frolic and Champion, Henry Hury; Famous and New Famous, P. A. Engler; Dixie, Smith-McDavid-Parkee; New, Smith-Parkee. Ensley—Palace, Ben Jaffe. Bessemer—Frolic, Ben Jaffe.

In addition, a 2,500-seat house for pictures and Pantages' vaudeville at Birmingham and neighborhood houses at Edgemont, Hollywood and Powderly are planned. There are 12 non-theatrical institutions showing pictures in the district, while in Birmingham there is the Municipal Auditorium, seating 6,000, and presenting concerts, and the Little, seating 600, and presenting drama.

Theatre circuits and their total holdings throughout the State, including Birmingham, are as follows: Publix, ten; The Crescent Amusement Company, ten; R. B. Wilby and Company, ten; the Si-Non Circuit, six; Marshall County Enterprises, three; Marvin Wise Circuit, eight (all in Birmingham); Inter-State Amusement Company, three; Joe Steed Amusement Company, ten (all in Birmingham); E. S. Haynes, three; A. Brown-Parkee, three; J. & J. Johnson, four; William J. Hurn, two; Will B. Wood, two; R. P. Higginbotham, two; Randolph St. John and F. Wheeler Smith, two.

W. T. and Mrs. Thornton operate two; C. B. Hendon and W. J. Boshell, two; Lester Neeley, three; J. A. Johnson, two; Victor C. Hicks, two; Earl Collins, two; C. W. Wade, three; Sam Sulzpacher, W. A. Doster and associates have three; Marguerite Luckel, two.

Florida M. P. Association Formed at Fort Myers

The report comes from Fort Myers of the formation there of a State screen association to be known as the Florida Motion Picture Association. The plans of the association are to foster and develop the establishment of the motion picture industry in Florida. They also plan to have representatives in every county in the State and to form a liaison with the Florida State Chamber of Commerce and the State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Maxwell, Wardour Chairman, Joins British National

John Maxwell, chairman for four years of Wardour Films, Ltd., has joined the board of British National Pictures, Ltd. He will also continue with Wardour. The British National Board now includes George T. Eaton, chairman; Frank J. Farrell, J. M. H. Wilson, I. W. Schlesinger, N. J. Hill and John Maxwell.

As the first step in the reorganization of British National, George T. Eaton, N. J. Hill and Mr. Maxwell have been named by the board as a managing committee pending more definite arrangements. Through the floating of a new issue of shares, which are to be underwritten by I. W. Schlesinger and Wardour, the capital of the company is to be increased. The company's production plans have been changed so as to provide for a number of pictures especially designed for the British empire market, these in addition to those intended for the American market. Their distribution has already been arranged for with a prominent American company.

Publix-Saenger Affiliate with Piedmont Co.

H. F. KINCEY, general manager of Piedmont Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in Greensboro, N.C., announces in the Greensboro "Daily News" of Jan. 21, that Publix-Saenger Theatres, Inc., has purchased a fifty per cent. interest in the Piedmont Theatres holdings in North Carolina. The new combination will be known as the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina. Negotiations, which terminated with the above affiliation, have been in progress some two or three months.

The prime factors in Piedmont Theatres, Inc., are R. B. Wilby and Arthur Lucas, both of Atlanta, and H. F. Kincey. Holdings of Piedmont Theatres, Inc., are as follows: Four theatres in Greensboro, four in Durham, two in Fayetteville, and two in Raleigh.

Beno Rubel, Sec. Stern Corp., Laemmle's Asst.

BENO RUBEL, former prominent New York business man, and for the last year secretary of the Stern Film Corporation, has been appointed as personal assistant to Carl Laemmle, President of Universal Pictures. Laemmle's increasing duties as head of Universal and the fact that he has bought the Beverly Hills Ince estate, where he will henceforth spend much of his time, prompted the addition to his personal staff.

Julius Bernheim, who has been associated with Universal in various executive positions during the last five or six years, has been appointed business manager of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Double Badger's Technical Staff for "Trail of '98"

The technical staff that will aid Clarence Badger to produce "The Trail of '98" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which he will begin shortly, has been doubled with the result that no less than a dozen cameras will be assigned to the picture. Charles Dorian will assist the director in the production and at the same time will have a number of assistants working under his direct supervision. The battery of cameras will be under the command of John Seitz, who recently returned from Rex Ingram's studio at Nice, France. Merril Pye will work as art director under Cedric Gibbons, head of the studio art department, and he too, will have a number of assistants. Charles Stallings and Clarence Bricker will be the two unit managers. Several assistant technical directors and supervisors are yet to be selected.

Sutherland will Direct New Paramount Comedy Team

Edward Sutherland, director of the comedy team of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, has been summoned from Paramount's Long Island studio to the West Coast studio to carry out that organization's newest comedy plans which concern a brand new comedy team, of the Beery-Hatton variety, which is to carry on through a series of special feature length comedies. Jesse L. Lasky, who went into conference with B. P. Schulberg, West Coast executive, shortly after his arrival from New York, has stated that negotiations are now under way for the services of stage and screen comedians as possible members of the team. Sutherland will be made aquainted with the details of the new assignment upon his arrival at the Eastern plant.

La Plante to Star in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride"

Laura La Plante's next Universal Jewel will be "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," now being adapted from an original by Byron Morgan, writer of magazine and screen comedies and thrillers. The picture, however, will not go into work until late in the spring, as Miss La Plante is scheduled to enjoy a European honeymoon trip as soon as she completes "Beware of Widows," her current picture.

Another U. A. House in Northwest, Report

Rumor Majestic, Portland, Taken Over; Stanley Building Near Phila.; Other Deals

A REPORT was received in Seattle, Wash., this week to the effect that the United Artists Corporation have closed a deal with Harry C. Arthur, Jr., president of Pacific Northwest Theatres, Inc., whereby the Majestic Theatre in Portland, Ore., will become the second United Artists Theatre in the Northwest. Confirmation or denial of the report was not made by either of the parties interested.

The United Artists Theatre in Seattle, formerly the Liberty, is now in operation, and is owned jointly by U. A. and Pacific Northwest, the latter group handling the active management of the house.

Norwood, within the immediate vicinity of Philadelphia, will soon have a theatre costing half a million dollars. Announcement of this fact was made yesterday by John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company of America, who made known at the same time that actual construction work will begin soon and that the house will be completed as rapidly as possible. It will be known as the Manor Theatre, and will be under the direction of the Stanley organization.

Harry Somerville, of Daytona Beach, Fla., formerly associated with Publix Theatres Corporation as city manager of their houses in the Florida resort, announced this week the formation of the Halifax Amusement Company of Daytona Beach, headed by himself.

Associated with Mr. Somerville in the new company are several prominent business men of Daytona Beach. The Halifax Amusement Company will operate a chain of theatres throughout the southern section of Florida, Mr. Somerville states. The first theatre in the proposed circuit will be the New Kingston Theatre, located in a suburb of Daytona Beach of the same name. It will seat 500, and be what is known as "the band-box" type theatre.

It is understood that the Connecticut circuit, composed of the Cameo at Bridgeport, Palace at Norwich, Grand and Capitol at Middletown has been purchased by Harold Eldredge and W. J. Levinson from Alfred Gottesman, and that Mr. Gottesman retains his interest in the other theatres which he has operated.

Five theatres were added to the chain of moving picture houses in the city of Montreal operated by United Amusement Corp., Ltd., during the past year, making the total number thirteen. The regular dividend of 8 per cent was paid on preferred stock and 2 per cent on common. The board of directors was re-elected without change for 1927. These include N. L. Nathanson and J. P. Bickell, of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

P.D.C. Production at Peak

Shooting Final Scenes for "King of Kings"; De Mille and Metropolitan Studios Running Full Force

BOTH the De Mille and Metropolitan studios have reached the peak in production following the holiday season, and there is no longer any let-up in the filming of pictures for the producers' distributing program. Cecil B. De Mille is filming the last scenes for "The King of Kings," and within a week will be engaged in editing the story.

William De Mille has started work on "The Little Adventuress," a screen version of "The Dover Road," by A. A. Milne; Vera Reynolds is starred. "Turkish Delight," Irvin Cobb's first original screen story, starts this week with Julia Faye in the leading feminine role. Paul Sloane is directing, from an adaptation by Albert Shelby Le Vino. Leatrice Joy is about to start on "Vanity," in which she will play a heavy dramatic role under direction of Donald Crisp; Douglas Z. Doty wrote the script.

Marie Prevost is at present hard at work in "The Night Bride," with Harrison Ford in the leading masculine role, and Franklin Pangborn in another important part; E. Mason Hopper is directing. Joseph Schildkraut is now at the Metropolitan studios working in "The Heart Thief," a screen version of "The Highwayman," a stage play in which he appeared; Lya de Putti has the leading feminine role. William K. Howard has finished direction of "White Gold," Jetta Goudal's latest starring picture, and is now editing and assembling in collaboration with C. Gardner Sullivan.

Bertram Milhauser and Beulah Marie Dix are preparing the script for "The Country Doctor," which is scheduled to go into production in six weeks. "The Yankee Clipper," Rupert Julian's production of the sea; "Rubber Tires," Alan Hale's production of the auto camps, and "No Control," which Scott Sidney directed with Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver co-featured, have passed the final previews and are scheduled for early releases.

Twelve in Work at Paramount W. C. Studio

THERE has been no decrease in the production activities at the Paramount Hollywood studio where twelve pictures are now in work and several others in preparation.

Clara Bow's vehicle, "Rough House Rosie," was started last week under Frank Strayer's direction. This week the two European stars, Pola Negri and Emil Jannings, began their respective productions, the former in a screen adaptation, as yet untitled, of an Ernest Vajda play under the guidance of Mauritz Stiller, and the latter in "The Man Who Forgot God," his first American-made vehicle which Victor Fleming is directing.

Other films in work on the lot are "Wings," whose company has just returned from location at San Antonio, Texas; "Special Delivery," Eddie Cantor's next effort; "Evening Clothes," starring Adolphe Menjou; "Afraid to Love," featuring Florence Vidor; a new film with Wallace Beery in the stellar role; "Ritzy," the Elinor Glyn story starring Betty Bronson; "Too Many Crooks," co-featuring Mildred Davies and Lloyd Hughes; Raymond Griffith's new picture and "Fashions for Women" Esther Ralston's first stellar vehicle.

Gary Cooper's first Paramount picture, "Arizona Bound," and "Soundings," with Lois Moran and Douglas Gilmore in the leads, are scheduled to start within a few days. "Children of Divorce," "A Kiss in a Taxi" and "The Mysterious Rider" have just been finished.

Barbara Bedford Signed for New Chadwick Picture

Barbara Bedford was this week engaged for the leading role in "The Life of an Actress," which goes into production some time next week. Miss Bedford was recently starred in "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," a Chadwick production, which was directed by Jack Nelson. Nelson will also direct "The Life of an Actress," which was adapted for the screen by Harvey Gates from the Langdon McCormick stage production. Nelson and Jesse J. Goldburg, supervising director of Chadwick pictures, are now selecting the rest of the cast, which will be announced next week.

L. Barrymore, G. K. Arthur Sign M-G-M Contracts

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer last week signed Lionel Barrymore and George K. Arthur to contracts whereby their services will be kept exclusively with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Barrymore recently completed a featured role in John Gilbert's starring vehicle, "The Show," and will portray one of the leads in "The Branding Iron," which Reginald Barker will produce. George K. Arthur, British stage and screen actor, has just finished an important role in Marion Davies' "Tillie the Toiler."

Four Players Complete Cast of New Vidor Picture

Now that Lucy Beaumont, Daniel Tomlinson, Del Henderson and Freddie Fredericks have joined the cast of King Vidor's newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, the list of players is now complete. Production got under way two weeks ago. The director and cast may come East next month for some of the sequences, it is said. No definite title has been assigned the new Vidor film as yet.

Channing Pollock Editing and Titling "Metropolis"

Channing Pollock, author of the theatrical successes "The Fool" and "The Enemy," is working at the Paramount Long Island studio on the editing and titling of "Metropolis," the Ufa production to be released in this country through Paramount.

"U" to Establish Exchanges in Germany

MATADOR EXCHANGES, a new exchange system in Germany inaugurated by Universal and by means of which that company will have a general office in Berlin with branches in Leipsig, Frankfort, Munich, Dusseldorf and Hamburg, has been formed by the Laemmle organization whose export manager, N. L. Manheim, left for Europe several days ago aboard the S.S. Albert Ballin for the purpose of setting the distribution wheels of the system in motion.

All of the new Universal branches are ready to open; they are awaiting Manheim's arrival.

L. Nossler Supervising Film Editor at Universal City

Lloyd Nossler, a well-known figure in the film business, has been assigned the post of supervising film editor at Universal City. Nossler has been connected with various Hollywood studios since 1911 and first came to Universal in 1915 as film cutter. He served in several different departments, leaving at the time of this country's entrance into the war. He has had completed editing supervision on such pictures as "Ben-Hur," "The Temptress" and "Flesh and the Devil."

Nossler was married on New Year's Day, but he will cut his honeymoon short in order to assume his new duties the first of the week.

Victor Potel Signed to Direct Universal Comedy Series

Victor Potel, writer, gag man and director, has been signed by Carl Laemmle, Universal Pictures' president, to direct a series of 26 one-reel comedies. Half of this number will feature Arthur Lake, youthful Universal contract player. Production on these is scheduled to start early in February.

The star for the other 13 comedies has not been selected. Universal states that the making of these comedies series is in line with the company's policy of a complete program embracing every classification for exhibitors.

Fleming to Direct Jannings' First Paramount Vehicle

"The Man who Forgot God," Emil Jannings's first American-made motion picture, is to be directed by Victor Fleming, one of the directors of the Paramount staff. Fleming won the assignment, it is said, because of his work on "The Rough Riders," which is now in its final stages of production. Jules Furthman is finishing the screen play with the assistance of Lajos Biro. Lil Dagover, Paramount contract player, imported from Ufa in Berlin, will head the cast supporting Jannings.

Elmer Clifton Added to Staff of Paramount Astoria Studio

Elmer Clifton, producer of "Down to the Sea in Ships," "Six Cylinder Love" and other pictures, has joined the scenario staff of the Long Island studio of Paramount. He is now working with John Oliver in the preparation of Richard Dix's next picture.

Six R. Talmadge Films Under Way for Univ.

RICHARD TALMADGE is to make six feature action dramas for Universal release. They will be of extra quality, far in advance of his former attractions, Universal says. Universal will release the first, "The Speed Boy," on March 13. This story, by Rex Taylor and Henry Lehrman, is in production under the direction of George T. Melford. All of the subsequent Talmadge releases will reach exhibitors at six-week intervals. They will be among Universal's principal offerings for the late spring and fall.

First Nat'l Acquires Irwin and Wilson Stories

Contracts were closed this week for two more stories as additions to the stock of manuscripts available for production by First National. The stories, both short, are ''American Beauty,'' by Wallace Irwin, and ''Body and Soul,'' by Carey Wilson, unit manager at First National's West Coast studio. Plans are being considered for the production of the Irwin story (which appeared in a recent issue of the Saturday Evening Post), by Richard A. Rowland, production manager, and John McCormick, manager of West Coast production, both of whom are at the Burbank plant.

Kane to Produce "Broadway Nights" for First National

''Broadway Nights,'' Norman Houston's original story of theatre and cabaret life in New York, is now being adapted by Forest Halsey preparatory to its production by Robert Kane for release through First National. No director has been named as yet by Kane, who is now assembling the principal members of the cast.

Following the Houston story Kane is scheduled to produce ''French Dressing,'' the screen name for May Edginton's ''A Child In Their Midst,'' for which Adelaide Heilbron has been brought from the Coast to do the continuity.

Only Eight Characters in "The Little Adventuress"

In ''The Little Adventuress,'' Vera Reynolds' new starring vehicle in production at the De Mille studio, there are but eight characters and not one single extra. But though the cast has been minimized with the idea of intensifying the drama, not so with economy; there has been no stinting on sets. In the picture, an adaptation by Clara Beranger of A. A. Milne's ''The Dover Road,'' are, in addition to Miss Reynolds, Victor Varconi, Phyllis Haver, Robert Ober, Theodore Kosloff, a chauffeur, a butler and a minister.

May Allison Signed for "The Telephone Girl"

An important role in Herbert Brenon's Paramount picture, ''The Telephone Girl,'' has been given May Allison, whose recent pictures have been ''Mismates,'' ''Men of Steel'' and ''The Greater Glory.'' Madge Bellamy, borrowed from Fox Films, is also in the cast.

Four Feb. Fox Features

Month's Line-up Includes "Marriage," "The Monkey Talks," "Ankles Preferred," "The War Horse"

THOUGH it has only four features scheduled for February, the Fox Films Corporation claims that what it lacks in quantity it makes up in quality.

Scheduled for release on the 13th is ''Marriage,'' based on the novel of the same name by H. G. Wells. It was only after long negotiations that the author agreed to the proposition submitted to him by Fox Films to picturize his story. Gertrude Orr did the adaptation job on the Wells novel, and R. William Neil the directorial supervision. Virginia Valli and Alan Durant have the leads, while supporting roles are contributed by Edward Davis, Billie Bennett, Gladys McConnell, Frank Kunn, Lawford Davidson, Donald Stuart and James Marcus.

Following ''Marriage'' in importance is ''The Monkey Talks,'' the Rene Fanchois play, which is set for release on the 27th. Raoul Walsh directed Olive Borden starred, Don Alvarado and Jacques Lerner in this production. Lerner, who impersonates the title role, was brought directly from France especially for the screen portrayal. Other players are Raymond Hitchcock, Ted McNamara, Malcolm White, Jane Winton and August Tollaire.

Heading the cast of ''Ankles Preferred,'' an original story by James Hamilton, released February 20th, are Madge Bellamy and Lawrence Gray. J. Farrell MacDonald, Barry Norton, Allan Forrest, Marjorie Beebe, Joyce Compton, William Stranss, Lillian Elliot and Mary Foy. J. G. Blystone directed.

Fox Films will release ''The War Horse,'' described as ''an up-an'-at-'em Western,'' on February 6th. Buck Jones is starred in this, the idea for which is his own. Lambert Hillyer is responsible for its writing, adaptation and direction. Lola Todd has the feminine lead. Additional players in the cast are Lloyd Whitlock, Stanley Taylor, Yola D'Avril and James Gordon.

Seven M-G-M's in Feb.

Schedule Includes "Fire Brigade," "Understanding Heart" and "The Demi Bride"

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER will release seven productions during this month including ''The Fire Brigade,'' now playing an extended engagement at the Central Theatre, New York City; ''The Understanding Heart,'' a Cosmopolitan production directed by Jack Conway, and ''The Demi Bride,'' a new Norma Shearer starring vehicle.

''The Fire Brigade,'' Will Nigh's first directorial effort for M-G-M, will be released on February 12; two pictures are scheduled for the week of the fifth, ''The Taxi Dancer,'' featuring Joan Crawford and Owen Moore under Harry Millarde's direction, and ''Altars of Desire,'' in which Mae Murray has the stellar role under the direction of Christy Cabanne, with Conway Tearle in the male lead.

''Women Love Diamonds,'' with Pauline Starke, Owen Moore and Lionel Barrymore in featured roles, will be released on the twelfth; it is an original story by Edmund Goulding, who also handled direction. ''The Demi Bride,'' the release for February 19, was directed by Robert Z. Leonard, from the story by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson of the M-G-M scenario department. Lew Cody plays opposite Norma Shearer and Carmel Myers and Lionel Belmore have featured roles.

Another picture for the nineteenth is ''The Valley of Hell,'' a Western production with Francis McDonald in the leading role, Edna Murphy opposite and William Steele and Anita Garvin making up the featured members of the cast. Cliff Smith directed. ''The Understanding Heart'' is the last release of the month, being scheduled for the twenty-sixth. It is a screen version of the Peter B. Kyne story, and the cast comprises Joan Crawford, Carmel Myers, Ralph Bushman and Rockcliffe Fellowes.

All F.B.O. 1927-28 Product Will Be Exploitable

FOLLOWING a series of production conferences at the F.B.O. home office, at which were present President J. P. Kennedy, Production Chief E. C. King, Vice-president J. I. Schnitzer and other F.B.O. executives, announcement has been made of the early launching of production on the 1927-28 program. It was emphasized that the forthcoming material, melodramas, feature comedies, Westerns and short subjects, would all carry a definitely exploitable title and theme, especially so as regards the Gold Bond features. "The Windjammers of Gloucester," probably the foremost of the coming Gold Bonds, is already being exploited throughout the world in cooperation with the New England fishing industries and F.B.O. promises an exploitation campaign that will be both unique and effective.

Society dramas with no outstanding exploitation angle will be taboo, reads the announcement. Indications are said to point to a considerable expansion of the F.B.O. production budget and that the ne wseason's program will be the most impressive ever offered by the company.

New First National Contract for Jack Mulhall

As a reward for his work in recent First National productions, Jack Mulhall has been signed by First National several months before the expiration of the company option on his services. The actor is now working on scenes of ''See You In Jail,'' a Ray Rockett production which Joseph Henaberry is directing.

"Convoy" to Be Issued Soon as Special First National

"Convoy," Robert Kane's production for First National, is at last ready for pre-view following the completion of the assembling of several scenes of the Battle of Jutland, including the sinking of a portion of the German fleet, which pictures of the actual battle were borrowed from the German and British Navy Departments, while the United States Navy Department co-operated by lending several reels of the American battle squadron in action during the war.

Kane's production, which tells the dramatic story of "The Bridge of Ships" across which two million American doughboys were ushered to France during the war, required the appearance in several sequences of about fifty senior and junior American officers from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and more than 1,000 enlisted men, stationed on various dreadnoughts. "Convoy" will be the first special released by First National in 1927.

Charles Reed Jones Quits Chadwick Pictures

Charles Reed Jones, Chadwick Pictures' director of advertising and publicity for the last two years, has announced his resignation, to take effect in about two weeks. Jones did not give any reason for this move, nor did he make any announcement of his future plans. He will continue in his present position until such work as had been started at the time of resignation has been completed.

Jones formerly edited the fan magazines, Photo-Play and Film Play. Before his association with Chadwick he was a free lance press agent and has represented, among others, Rod La Roque, Virginia Valli, Alice Brady, Raymond Hatton and Alice Joyce.

Joseph Jefferson O'Neil Writing for F.B.O.

Having completed the adaptation of two novels which are to be converted into feature films on the coming season's F.B.O. program, Joseph Jefferson O'Neil, who for a time handled F.B.O. publicity, is now nearing the completion of an original story which will also be a special on the new F. B. O. line-up.

Two from Warner Bros. During February

"HILLS OF KENTUCKY" and "The Gay Old Bird" are the two Warner Bros. productions scheduled for release during February. Howard Bretherton is directing from the scenario by Edward Clark. Supporting the canine star are Jason Robards, Dorothy Dwan, Tom Santschi, Billy Schaeffer, Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., and Nannette. Frank Kesson is taking care of the cameras.

The other February release is Louise Fazenda's second starring vehicle. Supporting her are John T. Murray, Ed. Kennedy, John Steppling, Francis Raymond, Jane Winton and William Demarest. Herman Raymaker directed from the story by Virginia Dale and the continuity by Edward Clarke. Virgil Miller is responsible for the camera work.

Gloria Swanson to Continue Own Production

THE rumor that Gloria Swanson intended to leave the independent producing field following the completion of one other film to follow "The Love of Sunya" for release through United Artists, to join another producing organization, has met with an emphatic denial from Miss Swanson, who states that she is happy in her work as producer and actress, and has consequently not even considered a change since her new contract went into effect.

Miss Swanson declares that she will continue in the field of independent production under her United Artists contract, by which she became an owner-member of United Artists and a contributing producer in that distribution organization.

Vitaphone Installed in Circle Theatre, Dallas, Texas

The Vitaphone will be installed in the Circle Theatre, Dallas, Texas, immediately after "The Big Parade" has ended its run, which will be February 1. The equipment and installation will cost about $35,000, according to E. H. Hulsey, lessee of the theatre, and thenceforth the Circle will be a Vitaphone house. Work will begin at once placing the sound boards and acoustics in the house to perfect the synchronization, as the house expects to re-open on February 20th along with "Don Juan," which will be followed immediately with "The Better 'Ole."

The Vitaphone is used in Wm. Eppstein's Aztec Theatre in San Antonio, and the installation of the new device in the Circle, here, makes the second synchronization device in the State. Others are scheduled to follow within a short period of time, it is announced.

Jeanne Morgan, Embryo Star, Under Contract to F.B.O.

Jeanne Morgan, winner of the "Boston Post" contest conducted in 1925 for the best qualified young lady in New England to enter the movies, was recently placed under contract by F.B.O., whose executives feel that she has all the earmarks of a future star. Miss Morgan was the only aspirant chosen from almost 40,000 entrants and was awarded the prize—a free course in motion picture acting.

Miss Morgan was born, 1908, in Trinidad, West Indies, of a French-German father and an English-Irish mother. After a thorough continental education she came, in 1921, to the United States, where she resided at Springfield, Mass. As a resident of that town she entered the "Boston Post" contest, subsequently coming to the notice of F.B.O.

Tiffany's Production, "The Tiger," Retitled "Cheaters"

The Tiffany production, heretofore known as "The Tiger," has been finally christened "Cheaters." In its cast are Pat O'Malley, Helen Ferguson, George Hackathorne, Lawford Davidson, Claire McDowell, Helen Lynch, Heinie Conklin, Alphonze Ethier, Max Davidson, Edward Cecil and William O'Brube. Oscar Apfel directed.

Catalina Swim Background for Sennett Pathecomedy

The recent Catalina Classic, the swimming of the San Pedro Channel, is the background of a forthcoming Pathe comedy which Earl Rodney is directing for Mack Sennett with Madeline Hurlock, Eddie Quillan and Andy Clyde in the cast, in which are also five of the Sennett bathing beauties, who participated in the arduous swim. Phil Whitman and Jeff Moffitt wrote the story for this one. Arrangements for the entry of the Sennett girls were concluded between H. L. Hugnin, production manager of the Sennett studio, and Oscar Richow, manager of the feminine entries in the contest. The girls were Vallery Schramm, Loretta Rush, Marjorie Williamson, Thelma Parr and Mary Mabery; all of them are said to hold amateur and professional swimming records. Sennett furnished his ship the "Ding," which escorted them during the grind and from which scenes were taken to supply the "atmosphere" for the forthcoming film.

Henri Menjou, Adolphe's brother, makes Screen Debut

Henri Menjou, younger brother of the more famous Adolphe, will make his screen debut in an important role in "Pleasure Before Business," a Columbia production. This is not exactly his first appearance in films, but rather a comeback, as years ago both he and his brother gave up the stage and appeared in films as extras. But Henri soon gave up acting to become Adolphe's manager.

In appearance, Henri resembles his brother. He has a mustache, dark hair and eyes. But there the likeness is dissembled because Henri, being the heavier of the two, looks like a prosperous business man.

Engage Ben Grimm to Edit "U" Official Sales Organ

Ben Grimm, motion picture advertising and publicity man, will edit the official sales organ of Universal Pictures. He will be directly under Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager of the Laemmle organization. Grimm was assistant advertising manager for Universal several years ago, and has also occupied important executive positions with other companies.

Babe Ruth Signed for Lead in First National

BABE RUTH, the King of Swat, will be leading man in First National's film version of Gerald Beaumont's story, "Said with Soap," which appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post" of recent date and in which the Babe, a great pill swatter in the story, plays opposite Anna Q. Nilsson, cast as a laundry maid.

The agreement calls for Ruth to start in his film assignment early in February. He is expected to finish his camera work in about one month, thus allowing him plenty of time to resume his baseball practice at St. Petersburg, Fla., in the spring. The baseball celebrity, when offered the screen contract by John McCormick, First National's West Coast production manager, was on a vaudeville tour of California.

Studio Briefs

Ralph Forbes and T. Roy Barnes are the two latest additions to the cast of "The Branding Iron," Kathlyn Newlin Burt's story of the Swiss Alps, which Reginald Barker will direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Forbes is now playing the romantic lead in Lon Chaney's "Mr. Wu," and with the completion of his role he will immediately start work with Lionel Barrymore and Aileen Pringle in this production.

General Manager Sistrom of the Metropolitan studio has signed Samuel Morris Pike to write the continuity for "The Heart Thief" on which production will start within the fortnight. Meanwhile a strong supporting cast is being assembled. Walter Woods will supervise production.

Another comedy constructor has been signed by First National in the person of Howard J. Green. Prior to coming to the West Coast Green produced several vaudeville sketches and tabloid musical comedies, many of which he wrote himself. He also did several numbers for various Broadway revues. Green recently resigned from the Harold Lloyd organization and will work on a picture starring Richard Barthelmess, which Al Rockett will produce for First National.

With the addition of Sylvia Ashton and Billy Freney the cast of principals for Sterling's new production of "Red Signals," from William Wallace Cook's railroad story, is practically complete. Those featured are Eva Novak, Wallace MacDonald and Earle Williams. The picture has been put into work under the supervision of Joe Rock with John P. McGowan directing.

Production on "Old Heidelberg" will be elaborate and lavish, according to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The complete cast will number more than 26 principals, while about 2,000 extras will supply the human element to the background. With the exception of the principals none of these extras will appear in more than one episode, it is said. A street scene was filmed recently in which more than 700 extras were pressed into service, most of them portraying the reception committee to honor Philip De Lacey, the young prince.

John Oliver, playwright, has been signed by Paramount as a member of the East Coast writing department. He is now preparing a story for Richard Dix, which will follow that star's "Knockout Reilly."

Reginald Barker, now directing "The Branding Iron" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been assigned the directorship of Jackie Coogan's first starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the juvenile's new contract.

Fox Films has selected Louise Fazenda to play the lead in "The Cradle Snatchers," a forthcoming screen version of the stage success of that name. Howard Hawks will direct a cast to date composed of Ethel Wales, Dione Ellis, Sammy Cohen and Nick Prata. As soon as the entire cast is filled production will be started.

Work on "The Poor Nut," which Jess Smith was to have started on January 15, has been postponed to early February, according to Smith, who is making this production for First National. Smith is now in Hollywood completing arrangements for the start of the production, which will be made at the Tech Art Western studio.

Fox Films' version of "The Cradle Snatchers," the Broadway domestic comedy, has been put into production at the West Coast studio under the direction of Howard Hawks. The screen version of the Russell Medcraft and Norma Mitchell play is by Sarah Y. Mason. The cast includes Louise Fazenda, Dione Ellis, Joseph Striker, Nick Prata, Arthur Lake, Sammy Cohen, Ethel Wales, Phillip Smalley and others.

Two additions have been made to the cast of "The Grey Hat," which Harry Millarde will soon direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in the persons of Dorothy Sebastian and Roy D'Arcy.

"Poor Girls," another Columbia feature to be directed by William Craft, will go into production as soon as casting is completed. The cast thus far contains Dorothy Revier and Edmund Burns in the leads and Ruth Stonehouse and Lloyd Whitlock. Craft handled "The Wreck" and "Birds of Prey" for Columbia.

With "His Rise to Fame" scheduled for release within a fortnight or so by Excellent Pictures, George Walsh started on "The Broadway Drifter" this week. The new picture is the fifth of the Walsh vehicles for Excellent. It is expected that the original contract for six pictures will be extended.

Ralph Sipperly has joined the cast of "Carmen," the Raoul Walsh production, which gets under way soon at the Fox Films' West Coast studio. Holmes Herbert and Robert Agnew have been cast in "The Heart of Salome," a Victor Schertzinger production, starring Alma Rubens, which will be launched in the immediate future.

William Davidson and Doris Lloyd have been added to the cast of "The Secret Studio," now in production at the Fox Films' West Coast studio, under the direction of Harry Beaumont. Olive Borden, Margaret Livingston, Earle Foxe and Kenneth Harlan have the featured roles in this production.

Edward Sedgwick, director, has been placed under a new long-term contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Henry Sharp, cameraman, for the past few months a member of the staff at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, has also been placed under a long-term contract, which will keep his services exclusively with that company.

Monte Brice, who has just completed "Casey at the Bat," his first directorial assignment, will direct the "youth" picture, which Paramount will release during 1927. The leading roles will be portrayed by the younger and lesser known of the Paramount contract players. Charles Rogers and Richard Arlen will play the male principals. No other players have been chosen as yet. Production is scheduled to begin about February 15.

Renee Adoree is French again in "The Grey Hat" of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. After playing several widely-separated nationalities, such as an Irish girl, a London actress and a Budapest Salome dancer, she is enacting the role of a Parisian vampire.

Ben Lyon arrived at First National's studio at Burbank this week to act the leading male in John McCormick's production, "The Tender Hour." Billie Dove is the other featured player in this original by Carey Wilson, which George Fitzmaurice is directing.

The cast of "Matinee Ladies," the Warner Bros. feature which Byron Haskins is directing, has been augmented by the addition of Lincoln Plummer, who has been appearing in short reel comedies. Charles Lane also occupies an important berth in the cast. Edward Clark and Harry Dittmar did the adaption from an original story.

Responding to the insistent summons of Paramount Long Island studio officials, Lawrence Gray has left Hollywood for New York, where he will find a busy period ahead of him. With Warner Baxter he will portray one of the two masculine leads in Herbert Brenon's, "The Telephone Girl." Gray will then engage in an important role in "Rubber Heels," Ed Wynn's first starring comedy vehicle.

Production on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Old Heidelberg" is going forward rapidly. The shots of the review of the royal guards, taken last week, required several hundred specially trained men. Large groups were also used in the village scene, court functions and other high spots.

Ernest Torrence is the only player thus far selected to support John Gilbert in "Twelve Miles Out," the screen version of the play which Director Jack Conway will start in the near future.

Madge Bellamy left Los Angeles for New York this week to play the principal feminine role in Herbert Brenon's new Paramount production, which is to be made at the Astoria studio. She was borrowed from Fox Films for the role.

Arthur Morrison, character actor, has joined the list of players for "Bayo-Nuts," the war comedy, which Frank Griffin is producing for First National. Del Lord directs. Two more players have also been added to the cast of "See You in Jail," which Ray Rockett is producing. The two are Burr McIntosh and William Orlamond. Joseph Henaberry is directing.

W. S. Van Dyke, director of Tim McCoy's first two Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer historical Westerns, has signed a new long-term M-G-M contract. He will begin working soon on a new McCoy vehicle, the story for which was written by Peter B. Kyne.

Iris Stuart, a 1927 Wampus Baby Star, has been cast for an important role in Raymond Griffith's next comedy for Paramount. Hallam Cooley is another member of the cast.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."
The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Short Subjects and Serials

Westland, Production Head for Bill Cody, Pathe Star

Ben Westland, a former Los Angeles newspaperman, is now filling the position of production manager for Bill Cody, Pathe Western star. He has just placed in production the first of a new series of outdoor feature-comedy films in which Cody appears in the stellar role. "Laddie Be Good," the title of the new film, is being produced at the California studio under the direction of Ben Cohn, assisted by Joe Murphy. Art Reeve is in charge of all camera activities and he is being aided by David Smith. Cody's supporting cast is headed by Rose Blossom, the feminine lead, Henry Herbert, George Bunny, Ethel Laidlaw, Frank Gambold, Al Hallett, Finish Smiles, Scott Matthews, C. B. Steele and Jack Underhille.

Circus Performer to Do Two Mermaids for Educational

"Poodles" Hanneford, comedy bareback rider and circus funster, has been signed by Jack White to make two Mermaid comedies for Educational. The circus star, accompanied by his wife and daughter, only recently arrived in Hollywood, where he will start working in about two weeks at the Educational studio on the first of his pictures, a circus comedy in which the bareback clown will execute several of his featured acts in the Sells-Floto circus. This will be Hanneford's second appearance in pictures, as about two years ago he made four Tuxedo comedies for Educational. At the expiration of his contract the circus artist expects to return to New York to begin rehearsals for "The Circus Princess" production.

Four Shorts Are Latest Castle Films Releases

"HELLO, HOLLYWOOD," a late Castle Films release, is a one-reel novelty depicting the work of the technical men in the movie capital. The many different effects that go into the production of a modern motion picture play are set forth in an interesting fashion.

Another Castle issue, released February 12, is "Golf and How," showing in regular and "slow" motion the correct and incorrect methods of playing the game. Prominent exponents of golf and "trick shot" artists are pictured in action. "Short Shots, No. 11," a February 19 release, is a varied series of short novelties garnered by Castle staff cameramen throughout the world.

"Speed," the title of the Castle novelty for February 26, is classed by Castle Films as one of the outstanding releases on its 1926-27 schedule. It has been in production for the past four months and takes its audience on a whirlwind tour. Every modern camera device known has been utilized to insure "Speed" fast and thrilling, it is said.

Pathe's Feb. 6 Releases

Variety of Short Subjects Offered; List Includes Chase Comedy and "On Guard" Chapter

PATHE offers a diversified list of product for the week of February 6th, including a Mack Sennett comedy, starring Charley Chase, the second chapter of the Patheserial, "On Guard," a Grantland Rice Sportlight, Pathe Review No. 6, and Aesop's Fables, Topics of the Day No. 6, and the usual two issues of Pathe News.

"Are Brunettes Safe?" is the title of the Chase comedy in which the star is supported by Lorraine Eason, Will R. Walling, Kate Bruce, Buddy Post, and Polly Moran, under the direction of James Parrott. Charley is editor of a "helping hand" column on a small town paper; he proceeds to impersonate one of his contributors by going home to his "mother," with many difficulties arising until the real son arrives.

"Smith's Customer," another of the "Smith Family" comedies produced by Mack Sennett, is another tale of the trials and tribulations experienced by newlyweds and their first baby. Lloyd Bacon directed under the supervision of J. A. Waldron, and the cast is composed of Ruth Hiatt, Raymond McKee, John Burke and Mary Ann Jackson.

"Deception" is the title of the second chapter of the army serial, "On Guard," in which Cullen Landis is starred with a supporting cast including Muriel Kingston, Louise DuPre, Walter P. Lewis, Tom Blake, Edward Burns, Hal Forde, Gus De Wilde and Tom Poland. Paul Fairfax Fuller made the screen adaptation from Major Robert Glassburn's story, and Arch Heath directed.

"Crowd Bait" is the title of the Grantland Rice Sportlight, portraying the high lights on various fields of sport, the quick change of fortune, the element of chance, tense moments in the dying minutes of contests. The games and competition that keep the turnstiles turning in the world of sport.

Pathe Review No. 6 offers "Camera Interviews with American Painters"; Helen Winslow Durkee sketching in her garden; "Nature's Teacup: Crater Lake in Oregon," one of nature's rarest scenic gems; "Chungking, the Unknown City"; here a population as large as that of New Orleans struggles on the river banks for barely enough to eat. Not one among twenty of these hordes so much as knows there is a United States.

"In the Rough" is the animated cartoon comedy release of the Aesop Film Fables Series, and Pathe News, issues numbers 14 and 15, present last-minute world events, which complete this schedule.

Five Fox Shorts for Feb.

Three Comedies and Two Varieties Form Short Subject Release Schedule for Month

THE Fox Films February short subject releases include three two-reel comedies, two one-reel Varieties and the usual issues of Fox News.

The comedies are "Slippery Silks," an Imperial set for February 13th; "Roses and Ruses," an O. Henry; another February 13th release; and "A Society Architect," a Van Bibber comedy, which also comes to the exhibitor on February 13th. The February Varieties are "The Sky Sentinel" and "Portugal To-day." They are released the 6th and 20th of the month, respectively.

Jules White directed "Slippery Silks" from a story and scenario by Phil Whitman and Henry Johnson. Lige Conley and Carol Lincoln portray the leads with assistance from Frank Coleman, Babe London and John Kolb. Miss Lincoln is also the feminine principal in "Roses and Ruses," but in this one her leading man is Leslie Fenton, borrowed from the feature lot for the production. Jess Robins directed from a scenario by Mr. Whitman and Andrew Benison. Character roles in this O. Henry are played by Marcella Daly, Ralph Sipperly and Grace Goodall. Robert P. Kerr directed Earle Foxe in "A Society Architect," wherein he continues as Van Bibber, with main support as usual from Florence Gilbert and Frank Beal. In the cast are J. Clifford Rice, Fred Walton, Alice Howell and Arthur Morrison.

"The Sky Sentinel" is based on the ascent of Mr. Robson, British Columbia, Canada. "Portugal Today" shows the remarkable progress of this country since the revolution.

"Sailor Beware," Billy Dooley's new Educational comedy scheduled for February release, has been completed.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Dear Season"

(Educational-Cameo Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

POSSIBLY a bit unseasonable because it deals with camping when movie-patrons are sitting in the warmth of ornate theatres is "Dear Season." Yet, on the other hand it may gain in appeal from that very circumstance. Certainly, enough trouble is experienced by the campers to make the average person glad that he is not mixed up in the affairs of the Smith brothers or the girl campers on whom they are calling. For a proper overture the Smiths and their excess baggage, which includes their respective wives, and much camping impedimenta, have the sort of experiences with their Ford which might be expected. Then on their arrival at the camp, trouble continues in full measure. This includes various immersions in the lake, a tramp stealing food, the pursuit by a goat wearing a property bull's head which an artist has been using for a model, an actual honest-to-god bear, the usual scrawny chaperone being disclosed in a state of innocuous nudity in her tent, etc.

Nate Watt directed the piece in which Bud Duncan, Robert Burns and "Toy" Gallagher are the mentioned players in what is a mildly amusing comedy.

Miniatures — Crater Lake — China's Unknown City

(Pathe Review No. 6)

HELEN WINSLOW DURKEE painting one of her famous miniatures is one of the series of "Camera Interviews with American Painters." She is shown at work outdoors doing an attractive sitter. How she works with the start and finish of the picture is shown by the cameraman. If the series includes the famous artists of the country it cannot fail to appeal. This first is decidedly effective.

"Nature's Teacup" is the Pathe designation of Crater Lake in Oregon. Shown in Pathecolor, it fills one with the wanderlust. Once the crater of a volcano—hence its name—it has today become one of the most beautiful places in the Northwest visited by tourists. Full advantage of its pictorial beauties have been taken by the man with the camera.

"Chungking the Unknown" is a city in southwest China, 800 miles from the mouth of the Yangtze River. Practically unknown to the average traveler familiar with Peking and other more accessible and more widely exploited cities, it is possessed of a fascination on that score alone. Emphasis is placed on the fact that the inhabitants still cling to the most primitive methods of coal mining, etc. It is a worthy inclusion in the February 6th Pathe Review release.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Youth and Beauty"

(Universal-Gump Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

TWO names in the title that would hardly seem to apply to "Andy Gump" (Joe Murphy) and his cartoon-inspired movie wife "Min." But that is due to the fountain at the resort the battling Gumps are visiting that is supposed to have Ponce de Leon properties. Min falls in and loses her clothes. These are put on by a child so that when Andy comes upon his wife he things she has returned physically (mentally there is no question) to childhood. A toupee blown onto Andy's head makes him think the spring water has grown hair on his bald dome and he attempts to vamp the flappers. No use; the wig blows off. When the real parents of the child whom Andy has picked up and is coddling under the belief that it is his shrunken wife claim their offspring he refuses to surrender the same. Min, arriving in the meantime with a policeman, takes over the punishment the others wish to inflict, so Andy is made to realize his mistake.

Has the merit, at least, of a somewhat novel idea. Probably will please Sydney Smith fans and others. Earle Fenton directed. Released February 7.

Start of "Wisecrackers"

First Three of Witwer's Series Filmed

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MUCH has been whispered in the motion picture world about a forthcoming series of two-reel comedies by H. C. Witwer, to be produced by Film Booking Offices. The work that has already been done for the screen by this writer of popular, slangy stories naturally has aroused a great amount of interest in the series. Now they can be judged and the decision, as far as this reviewer is concerned, is decidedly favorable. They should score and make money for everybody concerned. Practically the same characters figure in each episode, a complete story in itself, but naturally more interesting if you have followed the career of the characters. These are Lorraine Eason and Thelma Hill as two wise ex-actresses, shop-girl telephone operators in the hotel that serves as a locale for all the stories; Kit Guard and Albert Cooke, featured as a hotel detective and bell hop respectively, and Danny O'Shea, a college graduate "on his own" because his father or he (it doesn't matter much which) have lost their money. Danny gets a job, first as waiter, then clerk, etc. Always with a strong right arm and the ability to use it. Other characters naturally appear in the various episodes, but the foregoing quintet are omnipresent. Del Andrews does the directing, James Wilkinson the supervising, Al Boasberg the titling (which is most important because of the "wisecracks"), Philip Tannura the photography.

"The Artist's Brawl," is the first. O'Shea as a waiter licks Almerin Gowing, who is rich and giving a dance in his rooms. The philanderer makes the mistake of getting fresh with Gladys Murgatroyd (Lorraine Eason)—and I do not blame him. He pretends to be a lightweight champion but Danny O'Shea, who happens to be in love with Lorraine, shows him he knows darned little about the manly art of what Bill McGeehan calls "modified murder."

Released January 30th.

Number two is "Turkish Howls." A phony sultan arrives at the hotel. He attempts to ravish the brunette telephone girl. Again Danny to the rescue. In the meantime, or since last week, he has become desk clerk. He trims the Turk as easily as he did Gowing the week of January 30th. Released February 13th. Gino Corrad as the "guest player" is the Turk.

"Love at First Fight" is number three of the "Wisecrackers," released February 27th. Here O'Shea really comes into his own pugilistically. He takes the place of a defaulting prize-fighter and for his mother's sake (she needs five hundred for an operation) doesn't make the Catalina Island swim but beats up the pug who, among other offences, has been flirting with Gladys. A smashing good three-round fight makes an excellent climax.

As said before, unless I am all wrong or wet, "Wisecrackers," because of originality of story, amusing situations and titling, convincing acting and intelligent directing, will go over big. They are among the best short features I have seen.

"Smith's Customer"

(Pathe-Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN the Smith family, impersonated by Ruth Hiatt, Raymond McKee and Mary Ann Jackson, supplemented by Johnny Burke as a book-agent, entertained as an archangel, unawares. The Smiths had one mix-up when Raymond brought a corpulent customer home and Ruth spilled the beans because dinner was not ready. They lost the customer; so Raymond decided he would run the house and let Ruth operate the office. They do. She brings home a book-agent, thinking he is a wealthy customer of the same name. Then the trouble begins. The book-agent does not know what it is all about but senses an opportunity to philander with the charming Ruth. This is not so good with Raymond, playing butler to his wife and her guest. Nor does it help matters much for Ruth to find on Raymond's back flour finger-marks, evidently left by the maid. Moral—Do not attempt to bake a cake and make love to the boss at one and the same time.

Ultimately all is straightened out, but not until the identity of the book-agent is revealed and the pent-up feelings of Raymond find vent in catapulting Johnny and his samples out on the sidewalk.

One worthwhile quality about this series is that all three of the leading characters are so delightfully real. The things that happen to them might and probably do—with certain reservations—happen to your neighbors and mine. It is this human note that often carries them over. This one is no exception.

Lloyd Bacon directed under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. Released February 6.

"In the Rough"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

IN the same program by Pathe extolling—in Grantland Rice's Sportlight—the game of golf is this animated cartoon poking fun at golf addicts. And think of anything so heretical as the supposed moral, "You don't have to be crazy to play golf but it helps." Al abandons the game because he realizes it is beyond him, but the virus has gotten into the cattle and the mice and with a nice sense of direction all their shots seem to land—not on the green—but on Al's head. That is bad enough, but a loaded ball, driven with unerring aim, explodes and wrecks the old family manse. But that does not end Al's temporary troubles, for homeless, the mice make life even more miserable for him until a merciful fade-out ends the agony.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Crowd-Bait"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

UNLIKE "man-bait," as illustrated by Marie Prevost, the title to Grantland Rice's release is directed at the sports which serve to attract the biggest crowds of sport-lovers. Baseball, football, rowing, golf, tennis, etc., with their big galleries are featured. Then in football how the sudden change in fortune may throw a crowd into a frenzy. But always the dominant thing in this one of the Herald-Tribune sports' authority is the mob that the various sports attract. It is amazing how in the past twenty years sport has drawn an ever-increasing number of followers and the end is not yet.

As always, careful selection of shots and illuminating explanatory titles help to make the Sportlight interesting and appealing.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Peaceful City"

(Educational-Life Cartoon—One Reel)

THIS will not keep visitors from out of town away from New York, but it does accentuate just how hectic life in the metropolis is. Tong wars in the neighborhood in which Mike and Little Nibbins live, burglaries, hold-ups galore and all the other daily happenings which make life in this city one continuous thrill are shown in this Life animated cartoon. It has a plot, too. Mike gets a job on the police force only because a welt on the head from a blackjack gives him the requisite height for joining the police force. But it is Little Nibbins who is the real hero, because he captures a bunch of safe crackers and lays them out. Mike gets part of the credit by convoying the crooks to police headquarters.

The scenarist has done his job well. There are times, of course, when your sense of plausibility is violated, but you forgive that for the sake of the action. The casting director, Robert Sherund, showed rare acumen in placing Mike and Little Nibbins for the leading roles. They have done unusually good work in the shading of the characters entrusted to their capable histrionic hands.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Roses and Ruses"

(Fox-O. Henry Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ALL generalizations are dangerous and that is what this picture version of an O. Henry story proves. "To make a girl's affection greater make her jealous" is the foolish advice given by Ralph Sipperly. Leslie Fenton accepts his advice but makes the mistake of getting Ralph's choleric wife, instead of the vamp, to whom Ralph had directed him. That's all you need to know to imagine the mix-up that took place at the cabaret or night club where the characters foregathered.

Sidney Porter, were he alive, would not recognize his hand-work serving as the basis for the scenario by Andrew Bennison and Phil Whitman, but then even living writers have the same experience when they see their prized novel or play really staged. Enough that there are many quite amusing situations in the two reels. And these are played by a quite capable quintet of actors.

The cast: Carol Lincoln, Leslie Fenton, Marcella Daly, Ralph Sipperly, Grace Goodall. Director, Jesse Robbins. Supervisor, George E. Marshall. Scenario by Andrew Bennison and Phil Whitman. Cameraman, George Meehan. Released February 13.

"Break Away"

(Educational-Christie Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

NEAL BURNS is the star in this farce-comedy by those past masters at this sort of thing, the Christie brothers. They have provided the star and director, Harold Beaudine, with an unusual idea—for which many thanks. Neal is a stage producer. His father-in-law (in fact or to-be—it does not matter much which), Jack Duffy hates the stage and anything connected with it. When he puts in an unexpected appearance, the necessity arises for creating a house that is non-existent yet of which Neal has boasted. The stage set from the theatre next door where Neal's play is being performed before two possible purchasers is shifted and set up on the vacant lot. Keeping father from discovering that it is a stage-set and not a real house takes up the entire action of the piece. Finally the secret is out when it becomes necessary to shift the scenery back to the stage. But does Neal lose his fiancee, Natalie Joyce? He does not, or you do not know your movies. His play is sold and that fact more than mollifies the old man.

It is an ingenious twist to a comedy and well done. Should go over everywhere.

"Highlights"

(Educational-Curiosities—One Reel)

THIS one of the Movie side-show series is like its predecessors in its infinite variety. A small Florida church where the parishioners use rocking chairs starts the reel. A land-skiff, which is really a miniature auto with bicycle wheels, upsets the streets of Munich, Germany. Capturing a moray, the half-fish, half-snake, by a diver is next shown. The interesting natural history phase that this teaches is that this weird fish, to thwart the captor, commits suicide, turning and biting itself and thus injecting back into its own system deadly poison.

Amusing incidents from "Snookum's Playmate," one of the Stern Bros. "Newlyweds and Their Baby" comedies released by Universal

Humorous moments from "The Old Flame," one of the "Helen and Warren" stories produced and released by Fox Films

Entertaining his barnyard friends with a phonograph is the whim of a farmer—somewhere. Next, a close-up of some ugly young owls. Monkeys on an island, off the Florida Coast (not at the resorts), follow. And for a finale, grasshoppers buried for centuries under a glacier in Montana. What more diversity could any movie patron ask?—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Cluster of Kings"

(Educational-Hodge-Podge—One Reel)

THIS Lyman Howe offering is the usual combination of drawings and photographic shots. For an introduction a pack of cards is shown with the four kings singled out. Then the sporting king of Europe, Alfonso of the Asturias and sometimes Madrid, is thrown on the screen. That justifies, seemingly, views of people and places in his kingdom. Water scenes follow a drawing of King Neptune (I do not remember after many years of poker playing ever finding him in the pack). Then in rapid succession the King of Clubs (a juggler), King Gustav of Sweden with a number of Swedish scenes, King of Poultry, King Winter and King of Climbers (in a circus). But why not the King of Spades—for instance, the grave-digger from Hamlet?

It is a curious melange of drawings and camera shots that has in the past found a clientele and probably will in the future. Much thought and labor go into the making of these Hodge-Podge offerings and they should score. —PAUL THOMPSON.

The Potters

Fairly Interesting Film of Family Hokum

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN J. P. McAvoy wrote "The Potters," he just about dashed off the best piece of family hokum as it concerns middle-class life that has come along in many a day. It was natural that the play would become a picture—even though much of its pointed incident would miss the mark with the dialogue silenced. Upon the screen, the piece has a tendency to go burlesque—which is natural when one considers W. C. Fields as the star.

It isn't much of a picture to keep the onlooker at strict attention, probably because it doesn't offer enough variation. Fields is limited in his work, though he has more chance to shadow his role than heretofore. For one thing, he is not so dependent upon his stage gags.

And so it builds around Pa Potter sinking his savings—the family fortune—into an oil investment, with Ma Potter telling him where to get off, in terms of facial and vocal fury. Pa comes out all right as he sells his stock for a tidy profit. Fields is splendid in those moments where he begins to dream of success. There is a slight love story woven into the theme—which has its purpose in enlivening the plot with a youthful touch. There are some chuckles in it.

The Cast: W. C. Fields, Mary Alden, Ivy Harris, Jack Egan, Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, Joseph Smiley, Bradley Barker. Director, Fred Newmeyer.

THEME: Comedy-drama presenting hen-pecked husband investing family fortune in wild-cat scheme only to profit by it when events looked disastrous.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The acting by star. The conflict in family with Mary Alden putting over good performance. Incident concerning Pa Potter "putting on the dog."

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as film version of successful play. Play up as life-like story of middle-class family, typical of America. Play up Fields.

DRAWING POWER: For neighborhood and downtown houses. Needs strong support in big houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, 6,680 feet. Released January, 1927.

Man Bait

Like "The Mounted," Marie Gets Her Man

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MARIE PREVOST herself is justified in stellar honors in a picture titled "Man Bait," for isn't she herself? Norman Houston, best remembered for his "Red Light Annie," is author of the piece which Douglas Doty adapted. Supporting the ex-bathing beauty (she dons a most becoming bathing costume in one sequence to show presumably she has not fallen off in looks or lines) are Kenneth Thompson and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. It is a Donald Crisp production.

Marie, working as a hostess at a cheap dance hall (she has previously been fired from the hero's department store for smashing a masher), meets a philandering younger brother (Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.). He becomes engaged to the girl. She is installed in the brother's (Kenneth Thompson's) home for a mental, social and sartorial education. What more likely—in pictures—than for the older brother to fall in love with the ward? The younger brother tiring of the ex-shop girl the rest is easy. She is installed as mistress of the manse and the scoffing rotters, composing the social set of the two brothers, are put out of doors.

It is a role that admirably fits Marie Prevost, this of the slangy, sophisticated girl of the department store and dance hall.

The Cast: Marie Prevost, Kenneth Thompson, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Louis Natheaux, Eddie Gribbon, Betty Francisco, Adda Gleason, Sally Rand, Fritzi Ridgeway. Director, Donald Crisp. Story from stage play by Norman Houston. Adaptor Douglas Z. Doty. Comeraman, Hal Rosson.

THEME: Shop girl's story of her engagement to younger brother and final marriage to older brother in an entirely different social sphere.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Department store and dance hall scenes. Prevost's rescue of Thompson from drowning.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Romance of poor girl and rich man always appealing. Human interest of characters. Humor.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 5,947 feet. Released December 27 by P.D.C.

The Music Master

Heart Interest Drama Has Its Appeal

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

UPON the stage—long before the sex era—the play from which this picture is adapted was considered the prize of all heart-tuggers. It established David Warfield as one of our foremost emotional actors. Upon the screen the role of the beloved music master is portrayed with true feeling and sympathy by Alec Francis, than whom no better choice could have been made. The film lives again in celluloid even if it looks somewhat antiquated in plot. Those who would scoff might direct attention to its "mauve decade" atmosphere and to a theme which has often been used as screen material.

Take it by and large, "The Music Master" is first-rate picture fare. It doesn't offer any pretentious, but tells its pathetic little story with a true flair of emotion. No departure has been made from the original. The old music master, whose wife separated herself and their child from any contact with him when the youngster was a mere infant, comes back into the lives of his family to enact a great sacrifice. This is the strong point of the picture as it was of the play. And Mr. Francis touches it with fine pathos. The picture might be called a character study—a study in the pent-up suffering of the heart.

The Cast: Alec Francis, Lois Moran, Neil Hamilton, Norman Trevor, Charles Lane, William T. Tilden, Helen Chandler, Marcia Harris, Kathleen Kerrigan, Howard Cull, Armand Cortez, Dore Davidson. Director, Allan Dwan.

THEME: Heart interest drama based upon a father's great sacrifice for love of his daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The separation. The music lessons. The recognition. The feeling in the scenes between father and daughter. The excellent acting by Alec Francis and entire cast. The settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as one of greatest stage successes which Warfield made famous. Bill as faithful adaptation. Play up Francis and go after the older generation of picture fans.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw with its title. O.K. anywhere.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, seven reels. Released January, 1927.

The Perch of the Devil

Gertrude Atherton's Novel a Great Melodrama

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

GERTRUDE ATHERTON, the novelist from California, writes novels that are essentially melodramatic. Their moving picture possibilities are obviously great. So with "The Perch of the Devil," the designation for a section of mountainside in Montana, and also the source of hell for Pat O'Malley and Mae Busch in their movie married life. This is good melodrama with a smashing finale to keep the interest sustained to the end. Pat O'Malley, owner of inherited mine property from which he is certain to take pay ore, marries Mae Busch, the uncouth, uneducated daughter of a washwoman. She gets bored with poverty and accepts an invitation to go to Europe with Jane Winton, a fashionable woman, seeking divorce abroad.

Pat strikes pay ore and buys his wife a mansion. Mae returns still in love with her husband, though the latter, through the machinations of Jane, who wants to marry him herself, thinks Mae is interested only in his money. Mae discovers she is being double crossed by the other woman and pursues her into a deserted mine shaft. This is flooded and the two women indulge in a life and death struggle in the onrushing waters. It is one of the most effective and melodramatic climaxes to a picture that one can well conceive and is mighty well done.

The Cast: Mae Busch, Pat O'Malley, Jane Winton, Theodore Von Eltz, Mario Carillo, Lincoln Steadman, Gertrude Oakman, Martha Franklin, George Kuwa. Director, King Baggot. Author, Gertrude Atherton. Adaptor, Mary O'Hara. Cameraman, Charles Stumar.

THEME: Conflict between two women of different social stations for affections and name of newly become wealthy mine owner.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The duel between the two women in the flooded mine.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Melodrama of the best. Gertrude Atherton's popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, 6,807 feet. Released March 6.
Produced and distributed by Universal.

The Kid Brother

Lloyd, as Usual, Rings the Bell

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHENEVER Harold Lloyd bobs up on the screen he always puts the critics to work dusting off the superlatives and the exhibitors to the job of dusting off the S.R.O. sign. The comedian injects so much entertainment into his films that one always anticipates a great show. "The Kid Brother," the latest to grace the screen, is typically Lloyd in its contents and highlights. Which is to say that it is crammed with high-pressure gags, timely incident, compact and spontaneous humor—without a let-down in any part of the glittering array of scenes.

The piece has a deal in common with "Grandma's Boy," though there is no similarity of theme. It compares with the above-mentioned in its play of pathos—for Harold suffers much humiliation and embarrassment in his study of the kid brother. He extracts sympathy because he is kicked and cuffed around and not taken seriously. Playing the youngest son of a small town sheriff he has to think fast to be himself. He swipes his dad's badge and signs a permit for a medicine show to appear on the village lot.

Harold asserts his personality in a fast, amusing and exciting sequence in which he overpowers a particularly vicious bad man. Of course, he wins recognition from his intolerant relatives and the daughter of the medicine man gives him her heart. A great picture.

The Cast: Harold Lloyd, Jobyna Ralston, Walter James, Leo Willis, Olin Francis, Constantine Romanoff, Eddie Boland, Frank Lanning, Ralph Yearsley. Director, Ted Wilde.

THEME: Comedy-drama of much-abused kid brother who overcomes his inferiority complex and wins recognition and love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The rich assortment of gags. .The meeting with the girl. The scene with the showmen. The incident with the barker. The romantic episodes. The chase and fights on the boat. The climax. The titles. The performance by star.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Go the limit. Star's name will guarantee a sell-out.

DRAWING POWER: Will pack the house anywhere.

Produced by Harold Lloyd. Distributed by Famous Players. Length, 7,654 feet.. Released January, 1927.

Slums of Berlin

Story from Life, Should Get Over

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS picture should do business in any type of house, large or small, with a cosmopolitan or rural audience, provided the advertising announcements sell it from the true angle—the gruesomeness of the story, the sordidness of its locale—make a bid for the sympathy of your patrons for the central character. The film has no so-called "production values" so don't dress your lobby with stills from the bedroom sequences or show photographs of the feminine leads—play up the prison stills, the scenes with actual types cast in the picture—and don't forget to book a better than average comedy to make the contrast more effective.

The story is taken from the notes of Professor Heinrich Zille, a philanthropist who has spent most of his life in that section of Berlin represented in the picture. It deals with a man of the upper class who, serving a term in prison to cover his fiancee, is released and goes home. His father disowns him, he finds it impossible to get work, tries to commit suicide but is saved by a prostitute. She helps him until he finds a position and then his rise in life is rapid. The story is morbid but the telling is more so as the acting of the principals and the setting tend at all times to produce a most depressing effect.

Bernard Goetzke, as the ex-jail-bird, contributes a good if somewhat stilted performance which may be owing to too much direction; the character, Steve, is good as is the girl who plays the prostitute.

The Cast: Bernard Goetzke, Paul Bildt, Margaret Kupfer, Aud Egede Nissen, Arthur Bergen, Mady Christians, Christians Bunnerstedt, Eduard Rothauser, Frigga Braut, Georg John. Directed by Gerhard Lamprecht.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The story and the settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Sell it as it is.

DRAWING POWER: Should do business anywhere if sold properly in the advertising.

Length, about five reels.

The Night of Love

Adventure and Romance Handsomely Presented

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a fine costume love story on view in "The Night of Love," which presents Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky again in the best film they've appeared since "The Dark Angel." Marked with fine photography, gorgeous settings and compact and stirring action it is certain to move any spectator, no matter how hard-boiled, to remark: "Here's a picture!" It has been staged with a lavish hand but its expenditure is perfectly in keeping with its story of rich adventure in old Spain. This is one instance where the background doesn't run away with the plot.

There are such tales as this—and a few have served as themes to attract light opera lovers. What is sauce for the stage is also sauce for the screen. What really matters is that it tells its story without making heavy footprints around Robin Hood's barn and tells it with moving scenes and gripping suspense. There is a lecherous duke who kidnaps a gypsy's bride on her wedding night. She kills herself to escape him, whereupon the rogue of the open road vows vengeance. He exacts it by stealing the duke's newest spouse and winning her love.

That's all there is to it, but before the ending arrives the spectator is in for a display of rich scenes and much excitement.

The Cast: Ronald Colman, Vilma Banky, Montagu Love, Natalie Kingston, Laska Winter, Sally Rand, John George. Director, George Fitzmaurice.

THEME: Romantic drama of old Spain with gypsy exacting vengeance by kidnaping wife of lecherous duke when latter causes the former's bride to kill herself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The sets. The orgy scenes.. The kidnaping and the rescue. The romantic episodes. The adaptability of stars for their roles and their fine acting. The miracle at the finish. The conflict between duke and gypsy.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Use superlatives in your ads. Play up Colman and Banky. Exploit the title. Bill as rich with romance and adventure. Use dignified prologue.

DRAWING POWER: Stars and title and quality of film will draw them.

Produced by Samuel Goldwyn. Distributed by United Artists. Length, seven reels. Released, January, 1927.

Play Safe

Monte Banks Climbs a Runaway Freight

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a simple little story of the girl owner of a factory who runs away to escape a distasteful marriage to the son of her crooked trustee. She encounters the hero, one of her unimportant employees, who succors her in her distress. She is recaptured by the villain who attempts to disillusion her by making the discharged employee boy-friend appear as the chief of a band of rough-neck kidnappers. She refuses to be fooled and then follows a series of hand-to-hand fights that end with the characters on a run-away freight train. This part really takes up most of the picture. Monte, for of course he is the poor boy hero, goes through innumerable narrow escapes on the train.

There are some good angles to "Play Safe." The introduction of the boy rescuing the girl from a hold-up thug in a rainstorm and his sheltering her is particularly effective. In his lodging house he provides her with a suit of his own clothes before he buys a new dress for her and gets her meals, seeking refuge elsewhere that she may have the room to herself. Then on a flivver ride for her entertainment he ruins the car, but escapes the penalty of damages for the same. The train sequence, while possibly a bit too long, is ingenious with the hero dodging on over and under the fast-moving train. His imminent danger of being dislodged is a suspense quite well maintained. The piece should win additional admirers for the star.

The Cast: Monte Banks, Virginia Lee Corbin, Charles L. Mailes, Charles Gerard, Bud Jamieson, Rosa Gore, Syd Crossley, Max Ascher, Fatty Alexander. Director, Joseph Henaberry. Story, Monte Banks. Scenario, Charles Horan, Harry Sweet. Supervisor, Howard Estabrook. Cameraman, Blake Wagner.

THEME: Romance, poor little rich girl and poor boy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Opening slum scenes and runaway train sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Comedy - drama with many thrills. Play up train phases.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 4,915 feet. Released January 30.

Produced by Monte Banks Company. Distributed by Pathe.
